THE
ACT V OF 1908.

Volume II.

THE FIRST SCHEDULE

ORDER I.—GENERAL.

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Order.
2. "Party," meaning of.

1. Scope of the Order. — "If we turn to the Code," said Sir Lawrence Jenkins, C. J., in Krishnappa v. Shivappa,<sup>1</sup> "we find, as the essentials of a suit opposing parties, a subject in dispute, a cause of action and a demand of relief." This Order deals with the subject of parties to suits and inter alia with the joinder, misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties and to a certain extent with the joinder of causes of action.<sup>2</sup>

Joinder of parties. — All persons may be joined as plaintiffs in whom any right to relief in respect of, or arising out of, the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions is alleged to exist, where if such persons brought separate suits, any common question of law or fact would arise (Rule 1). Where there are numerous persons, however, having the same interest in one suit, one or more of such persons may, with the leave of the Court, sue on behalf of all such persons (Rule 8). If the joinder of the plaintiffs is likely to embarrass or delay the trial of the suit, the Court may put the plaintiffs to their election or order separate trials (Rule 2). All persons may be joined as defendants against whom any such relief is claimed, where, if separate suits were brought against them any common question of law or fact would arise (Rule 3), though it is not necessary that every defendant should be interested in all the reliefs claimed in the suit (Rule 5). A plaintiff who is in doubt as to the person from whom he is entitled to relief may, however, join two or more defendants in order that the question as to which of the defendants is liable, and to what extent, may be determined between all the parties (Rule 7). The Court can give judgment for or against any one or more of the parties, for such relief as they may be found entitled to, or liable for (Rule 4).

Misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties. — If the joinder of parties in the suit is not such as is permitted by O. 1 Rr. 1 and 3, there is a misjoinder of parties. If persons who ought to be made parties are not made parties, there is a nonjoinder of parties. All objections to the misjoinder or nonjoinder of parties should be taken at the earliest possible opportunity or at or before the settlement of issues (Rule 13). No suit shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or nonjoinder of parties, and the Court may deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it (Rule 9). The Court may also, at any stage of the suit, strike out the name of any party improperly joined or may add a necessary or a proper party, or may, where the suit has been instituted in the name of the wrong person, substitute any other person as the plaintiff (Rule 10).

As to who are necessary or proper parties, see Order 1 Rule 10.

Though Order 1 in terms refers only to "suits," its provisions are also applicable to joinder of parties to appeals.<sup>3</sup>

2. "Party," meaning of. — A person can become a party to a suit only by his name appearing on the record of the suit as a party.<sup>1</sup> The mere fact that he is the person really interested in the suit and that the party on the record is only his benamidar, does not make him a party.<sup>2</sup> The introduction of a party at one stage of a suit is good for all subsequent stages thereof.<sup>3</sup> The mere fact that a person is joined as a plaintiff in a suit does not entitle him to be associated in a decree in favour of the person who alone has the real title.<sup>4</sup>

That the same person cannot be both a plaintiff and a defendant to one and the same action, even in different capacities, is a rule of procedure well established in common law. But Courts of Equity, in spite of this rule, did justice between the parties, provided all interested were before the Court either as plaintiffs or as defendants.<sup>5</sup> Thus the rule that the same person cannot be both a plaintiff and a defendant loses much of its force in India, where the Courts are Courts of Equity as well as of law, when all the parties are before the Court and their rights can be determined and adjusted.<sup>6</sup>

cases of the plaintiffs are to be proved by the same evidence.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the plaintiffs, owning separate parcels of land, sued the defendant for trespass on their lands, it was held that they could not join as plaintiffs in one suit inasmuch as their causes of action were different.<sup>4</sup> There was also a difference of opinion as to whether the words "cause of action" referred only to the infringement of the right claimed, or whether it included also the facts constituting the right itself.<sup>5</sup>

The present rule makes it clear that, for several plaintiffs to join in one suit, it is not necessary that their causes of action should be identical.<sup>6</sup> It, however, imposes two other conditions both of which must be fulfilled in order to enable them to join in one suit as plaintiffs,<sup>7</sup> namely—

- (1) the right to relief must arise out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions, and
- (2) the matter must be such that, if the plaintiffs brought separate suits any common question of law or fact would arise. The policy of the rule is that, even in cases where the plaintiffs seek individual reliefs, where the investigation would to a great extent be identical in each individual case, they may unite as co-plaintiffs and thus avoid needless expense.<sup>8</sup>

Under the old English rule corresponding to the present rule it was held in England that several plaintiffs having distinct and separate causes of action could not join in one suit as plaintiffs.<sup>9</sup> The rule was amended in October, 1896, and now reads as follows:

"All persons may be joined in one action as plaintiffs in whom any right to relief in respect of or arising out of the same transaction or series of transactions is alleged to exist, whether jointly, severally, or in the alternative, where, if such persons brought separate actions any common question of fact or law would arise. . . . ."

It has accordingly been held in England after the date of the said amendment, that even plaintiffs having distinct causes of action can join in one suit as plaintiffs provided that the right to relief arises out of the same transaction or transactions, and the case is one where if separate suits were brought any common question of law or fact would arise.<sup>10</sup> Thus, where several debenture-holders sued the directors of a company for damages for misrepresentation in the prospectus, it was held that though the plaintiffs had made separate contracts, their right to relief arose out of the issue of the prospectus and therefore out of the same transaction and they could all join in one suit.<sup>11</sup> Similarly, where the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge jointly sued the defendant to restrain him from using the words "Oxford and Cambridge" in the title of his publications, it was held that the right to relief arose out of one transaction or series of transactions, if each publication was a separate transaction, and that the question of publication and the belief that would be induced by such publication were common questions of fact.<sup>12</sup>

The rule lays down who may be joined as plaintiffs in the same suit. It does not say that any person must join as plaintiff to a suit; nor does it say anything as to who are necessary or proper parties to a suit, whom it may be essential or advisable to join.<sup>13</sup>

The rule merely provides for procedure and has nothing to do with the payment of court-fees. Hence, although under this rule several persons may join as plaintiffs in the same suit, court-fees may have to be paid under the Court-fees Act as if separate suits were brought.<sup>14</sup>

3. Plaintiffs having different interests. — Where A and B are entitled to different interests in a property, as when A is the melwaramdar and B, the kudiwaramdar of certain property, it has been held that they can sue together for the recovery of the property from a third person C, where the ground of their action is common.<sup>1</sup> Where A is originally the owner of property and he alienates a portion of it to B, can A and B sue together for the recovery of the property, where the ground of their action is common? Upon this question there was a conflict of decisions under the old Code. It was held by the Allahabad High Court<sup>2</sup> that A and B could not join in the same suit in such a case as they did not have the same cause of action. But it was held by the High Court of Calcutta,<sup>3</sup> the Chief Court of Punjab<sup>4</sup> and the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>5</sup> that they could join as plaintiffs in such a case. Under the present rule such a joinder is clearly permissible. Thus, in a suit for possession, where one of the plaintiffs is the purchaser from the co-sharer of the other plaintiff, there is no misjoinder.<sup>6</sup>

Similarly, the rule permits a suit being filed by a person in a double capacity, provided the conditions mentioned in this rule are not transgressed.<sup>7</sup> Thus, a person may seek in the same suit, to recover possession of certain properties in his individual capacity and certain other properties in his capacity as the shebait of an idol.<sup>8</sup>

4. Person in whom any right to relief exists. — The words "any right to relief" are wider than the words "the right to any relief" used in the old Section.<sup>1</sup>

Notes 5-6

5. Same act or transaction. — The present rule enables different plaintiffs to join in one suit where the right to relief alleged to exist in each of them arises out of the same transaction and there is a common question of fact or law to be decided.<sup>1</sup>

The following are some of the cases decided under this rule —

- (1) A sold to B a certain property which was in the wrongful possession of C. B sued C for profits realized by C both before and after the transfer, impleading A as a pro forma plaintiff. The plaintiff asked for amendment of the plaint so as to add a prayer for a decree in favour of A for the profits realized by C before the transfer. It was held that the amendment could be allowed.<sup>2</sup>
- (2) Co-sharers suing the lambardar for profits may join in the same suit. The reason is that their several rights arise out of the same act, viz., the lambardar's failure to divide the profits among the co-sharers on the due date.<sup>3</sup>
- (3) A mother and her sons, members of a Malabar tarwad, residing together may maintain a joint suit for recovery of their maintenance amounts.<sup>4</sup>
- (4) Co-sharers, although they have been collecting rents separately, may join in the same suit for rent against the tenant, though the rents refer to different periods.<sup>5</sup>
- (5) A contingent reversioner may join as co-plaintiff in the presumptive reversioner's suit to set aside an alleged invalid adoption, the object of the suit being to remove an apprehended injury which is common to the interests of all reversioners, presumptive as well as contingent.<sup>6</sup>

In each of the above cases the plaintiffs' rights arose out of the same transaction or series of transactions and hence, they were held entitled to join in the same suit. Conversely, where the rights of the several plaintiffs do not arise out of the same transaction or series of transactions but arise out of different transactions, there can be no valid joinder of such plaintiffs under this rule.<sup>7</sup>

6. Any common question of fact or law. — As has been observed already in Note 2 above, it is also necessary that a common question of law or fact should arise in the suit. Thus, although the plaintiffs may be suing the same defendant and for a similar relief, and their rights may arise out of the same transaction, they cannot join in one suit where the case of each plaintiff gives rise to different questions of fact and law.<sup>1</sup>

which they were dismissed were not identical. It was held that the plaintiffs could not sue together as each of their cases gave rise to different questions.<sup>2</sup>

2. Plaintiffs instituted a suit for the establishment of occupancy rights in their various holdings against the shrotriendrar. The genuineness of the muchilikas alleged to have been executed by some of the plaintiffs was denied and certain decrees obtained against some of the plaintiffs were challenged as having been fraudulently obtained. It was held that the suit was bad for misjoinder as it gave rise to different questions of fact and law in the case of the different plaintiffs.<sup>3</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>4</sup>

7. "Jointly." — Even in the case of persons jointly entitled to any relief the rule only says that all such persons may be joined as plaintiffs in one suit. This however does not affect the general principle of law that all such persons must be made parties to the suit either as plaintiffs or as defendants.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that all such persons together represent a single and indivisible right which cannot be adjudicated upon and no effective decree can be passed by the Court, in the absence of any such person.<sup>2</sup> The following are all illustrations of persons in whom the right to relief exists jointly and who, therefore, must be made parties to the suit in order that an effective decree may be passed therein —

- (1) Joint owners of property suing to recover the same.<sup>3</sup>
- (2) All executors who have proved the will suing to recover the property belonging to the estate of the testator.<sup>4</sup>
- (3) Co-trustees suing to recover trust property.<sup>5</sup>
- (4) Members of a committee appointed under the Religious Endowments Act (1863), suing for the removal of a person acting as a trustee of the endowment.<sup>6</sup>
- (5) Joint promisees under a contract suing to enforce the contract.<sup>7</sup> (See Contract Act, Section 45.)

A suit by creditors to set aside an alienation as being fraudulent within the meaning of Section 53 of the Transfer of Property Act must be by or on behalf of all.<sup>8</sup> So also a suit by members of a Hindu joint family to recover a property belonging to the joint family must be by or on behalf of all the members.<sup>9</sup>

Where a number of persons are jointly entitled to the same relief in respect of a transaction and one of them wishes to sue to enforce that relief, the proper course is for him to ask the other persons to join in the suit as co-plaintiffs. If they refuse to join in the suit as plaintiffs, they must be joined as defendants.<sup>10</sup> But the really essential point is that all the persons jointly interested must be on the record as parties, whether as plaintiffs or defendants. Hence, a suit should not be dismissed merely because the plaintiff fails to prove that before joining the persons jointly interested with him as defendants, he asked them to join as co-plaintiffs and they refused to do so.<sup>11</sup>

8. "Severally." — Where the same transaction entitles each one of a number of persons to relief severally, i. e., individually and not jointly, they may all join as plaintiffs in the same suit under the present rule if the questions to be decided are common.<sup>1</sup> But this course is not obligatory. One or more of such persons may sue separately to enforce the relief.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where every member of the community has an individual right to worship on a platform round a sacred tree, he may sue alone for the removal of any obstruction placed upon the platform.<sup>3</sup> The other members of the community may also join as plaintiffs in the suit. But this is not necessary for the maintainability of the suit.

9. "In the alternative." — A and B sue C alleging that either A or B is entitled to relief against C in respect of a certain transaction. The present rule permits the joinder of A and B in one suit in such a case.<sup>1</sup> Thus, in the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> A, the widow, and B, the adopted son of C, a deceased person, sued for a debt due to C. The adoption was questioned by C's reversioners. But A did not dispute the adoption and joined with B in instituting the suit praying that if the adoption was established a decree should be passed in B's favour but that if the adoption was held not proved, a decree should be passed in favour of A. It was held, that the suit was not bad for misjoinder as it came within the expression "alternative" in the present rule. But if in the above case the widow disputed the adoption, she and the adopted son could not be joined as plaintiffs in one suit.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that the rule does not warrant the joinder, as plaintiffs in one suit, of rival claimants each of whom denies the right of the other. Where, again, it is not alleged that the right to relief exists in the alternative but the plaintiffs are joined in the hope of getting a decree by something like a mass attack on the defendants and of afterwards dividing the fruits of victory among the plaintiffs by further litigation inter se, such a suit, their Lordships of the Privy Council observe, is inconvenient in plan and must be condemned.<sup>4</sup>

Notes 9-11

10. Appeal.— The rule contained in O. 1 R. 1 applies to appeals also. Hence, where a suit is filed on foot of a promissory note executed by the first defendant in favour of the second defendant and assigned by the latter to the plaintiff and is dismissed as against the first defendant but is decreed in full against the second defendant, the plaintiff and the second defendant can prefer a joint appeal to have the first defendant also made liable.<sup>1</sup>

R. 2. [New.] Where it appears to the Court that any joinder of plaintiffs may embarrass or delay the trial of the suit, the Court may put the plaintiffs to their election or order separate trials or make such other order as may be expedient.

1. Power of Court to order separate trials.— This rule is new and empowers the Court in suits in which more plaintiffs than one are joined, to order separate trials, or require any one plaintiff to elect to carry on the suit or to make any other appropriate order.<sup>1</sup> It, however, applies only to cases in which the plaintiffs are properly joined in a suit under Rule 1, but in which separate trials or election is necessary for avoiding embarrassment or inconvenience or delay. It has no application to cases of misjoinder of plaintiffs.<sup>2</sup> Where the same plaintiff sues for possession of several properties in separate capacities, as for instance, in a personal capacity and in the capacity of a trustee, the Court may order separate trials.<sup>3</sup>

The High Court can, in revision, subject to the conditions laid down in Section 115 ante, interfere with an order under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

 See O. 1 R. 10.

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "in respect of the same matter" have been substituted by the words "in respect of or arising out of the same act or series of acts or transactions." Under the old Code there was a conflict of opinion as to the interpretation of the words "same matter." One view held that it was equivalent to "same cause of action."<sup>1</sup> According to another view, it was used in a more comprehensive sense than the words "cause of action" and was intended to allow a joinder of defendants even where relief was sought in respect of separate causes of action against the different defendants so long as they all arose "in respect of the same matter."<sup>2</sup> This conflict has now been removed by giving legislative recognition to the latter view.

2. The words "where if separate suits were brought against such persons any common question of law or fact would arise" are new. This alteration lays down a condition for the applicability of the rule.

3. The words "the right to any relief" have been changed into "any right to relief," thus giving the rule a wider scope.<sup>3</sup>

2. Scope and object of the Rule. — This is the main rule governing the joinder of defendants. The object of this rule and of O. 1 R. 1 is to avoid multiplicity of suits and needless expense, if it could be done without embarrassment to the parties and the Court.<sup>1</sup> All persons may therefore be joined as defendants against whom any right to relief is alleged to exist, provided that —

Note 2

- (1) such right arises in respect of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions, and,
- (2) the case is one where if separate suits were instituted against the defendants any common question of law or fact would arise.

It is not necessary that all the defendants should be interested in all the reliefs and transactions comprised in the suit or that the liability of all the defendants should be the same.<sup>2</sup> Nor is it necessary that the evidence as regards each of the defendants should be the same<sup>3</sup> or that the cause of action against each of the defendants should be the same.<sup>4</sup> But it is necessary that both the conditions set forth above should exist<sup>5</sup> though in order to satisfy the second condition, it is enough if there is one question common to all the defendants which is of sufficient importance in proportion to the rest of the action.<sup>6</sup>

The provisions of this rule, like those of O. 1 R. 1 ante, are not imperative and obligatory;<sup>7</sup> nor are they exhaustive of all cases of joinder of defendants. Additional power to make certain persons defendants is expressly given by Rules 6, 7 and 10 infra, although no right to any relief is alleged or can be alleged against them.<sup>8</sup>

As has already been observed in Note 1 to Order 1, this Order though headed "Parties to Suits" deals also to some extent with joinder of causes of action<sup>9</sup> inasmuch as when a plaintiff frames his suit he joins persons as defendants because he claims to have a cause of action against them. O. 2 R. 3 deals exclusively with the joinder of causes of action. Order 1 Rules 1 and 3 and O. 2 R. 3 really deal with the same problem from two different standpoints. The former two rules are based upon the fundamental principle that needless multiplicity of suits should be avoided, while the latter aims at the principle that the trial of the suit should not be embarrassed. O. 2 R. 3 must therefore be read so as not to clash with this rule.<sup>10</sup> This rule will enable the joinder as defendants in the same suit, of a person against whom damages are claimed on the basis of a breach of contract and another against whom damages are claimed on the basis of a tort where both the causes of action arise out of the same transaction or series of transactions.<sup>11</sup>

"Persons." — The word "persons" includes corporations whether incorporated or not.<sup>1</sup> For the purpose of Admiralty proceedings a ship has been held to be a "person".<sup>2</sup>

"May be joined." — The rule is not imperative.<sup>3</sup> A plaintiff is not bound to sue every possible adverse claimant in the same suit. He is "dominus litis" and may choose to implead only those persons as defendants against whom he wishes to proceed and may leave the questions as against others to be decided on a future occasion or allow them to be barred at his own risk.<sup>4</sup> In cases of joint tort-feasors it is open to the plaintiff to sue any or all of the tort-feasors in one suit though by suing some persons only his remedy against others might become barred.<sup>5</sup> The same principle applies in the case of joint contractors also. See Order 1 Rule 6.

"Right to relief." — Whether a person can have relief, against a particular person or persons, is a matter that is governed by the substantive law. As a general rule only those persons can be joined as parties to a suit against whom any right to relief is alleged to exist.<sup>6</sup> But in certain cases,<sup>7</sup> as for example where the right to relief exists in the plaintiff jointly with others and such others refuse to join him as plaintiffs, it will be necessary to add them as defendants though no right to relief is alleged to exist against them. 5. The parties must be within the jurisdiction of the Court. — In a suit against A and B in which the Court had jurisdiction against A but none against B, Mr. Justice Woodroffe observed as follows :

"In my opinion O. 1 R. 3 has no bearing on the case. That Rule of the Order is a provision which relates to a joinder of parties; and it assumes the existence of a suit in a proper forum, the Court having jurisdiction to try the suit. If the Court has such jurisdiction, O. 1 R. 3 may come into play."<sup>1</sup>

5. "Alleged." — The question of misjoinder of defendants in any particular case must be judged from the fact whether it is alleged in the plaint that there is against the defendants any right to relief arising out of the same act or transaction.<sup>1</sup> Whether that allegation is right or wrong is not a question to be considered; the question is whether upon the facts as alleged in the plaint and having regard to the relief asked for, there is any misjoinder.<sup>2</sup> It does not depend upon the defence set up<sup>3</sup> or on the evidence<sup>4</sup> or on the decree awarded to the plaintiff.<sup>5</sup> It is submitted that the undermentioned case,<sup>6</sup> so far as it held that the Court could go into the evidence and then hold that there was misjoinder in spite of the fact that all the necessary allegations were made in the plaint, cannot be accepted as correct.

6. In respect of the same act or transaction. — The word "same" preceding the words "act or transaction" applies also to the words "series of acts or transactions."<sup>1</sup>

The simplest instance of cases where any right to relief arises out of the same act or transaction occurs in suits in which the plaintiff challenges, for instance, an order or act of a Court or of an executive authority, joining several persons as defendants who claim rights under the said act or order as against the plaintiff, whether jointly, severally or in the alternative.<sup>2</sup> A right to relief cannot be said to arise out of the same act or transaction if the case against each defendant is entirely distinct and separate in its subject-matter from that of the other defendants.<sup>3</sup> In a suit against A, B, C, D and E, the plaintiff alleged that certain goods belonged to him, that A obtained the documents of title relating thereto from the plaintiff by fraud and made them over to B, that B knowing that A had no title either to the document or the goods, wrongfully dealt with them and sold the goods to C and D, that C and D wrongfully claimed to retain the goods and the documents of title, that A pledged one of the documents of title with E and that the goods were in the possession of C. He claimed recovery of the documents of title and the goods covered thereby, or in the alternative, damages. It was held that the alleged fraud of A was the foundation of the case on which the rest of it depended, that it concerned all the parties and that therefore there was no misjoinder of parties.<sup>4</sup>

Where a plaintiff alleges a right against a person and sues to enforce it, other persons who claim or seek to exercise the same right in opposition to the plaintiff may be joined as defendants, because the infringement of the plaintiff's right is the transaction out of which the whole claim arises.<sup>5</sup>

In a suit for recovery of property by an owner against several persons who are alleged to have unlawfully got into possession of various parcels of land and combined to resist the right and title of the plaintiff, all such persons may be joined in one suit. The cause of the plaintiff is one and entire and cannot be affected by the title under which the defendants profess to hold. The plaintiff is entitled to claim possession of his lands as a whole and not in fragments and all persons who oppose him in the enforcement of that right are concerned in his cause of action and therefore there cannot be any misjoinder of defendants.<sup>6</sup> But if no connexion or conspiracy is alleged to exist between the various persons joined as defendants, or if it is not alleged that they acted in concert or under a common title, it cannot be said that the plaintiff's right to relief arises out of the same transaction or series of transactions and the suit will be bad for misjoinder of defendants.<sup>7</sup>

Notes 6-9.

7. "Jointly." — In all cases of a joint liability or a joint and several liability all the persons liable may be joined as defendants.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where A and his benamidar B jointly execute a sale deed to C containing a joint covenant for quiet possession, and the covenant is broken, C can sue A and B for damages.<sup>2</sup>

8. Joint tort-feasors. — In suits on joint torts, each tort-feasor is responsible for the injury sustained by the common act and they can all be sued together.<sup>1</sup> Thus in a suit for damages for assault against A and B where the act was done simultaneously in pursuance of a conspiracy, there is no misjoinder; for, in such a case the assault is a single act or transaction.<sup>2</sup>

9. "Severally." — Where the plaintiff's right to relief against several persons arises out of the same act or transaction and where if separate suits were brought against them any common question of law or fact would arise, such persons may be joined in one suit as defendants though they are severally liable. Thus, in suits for contribution arising out of the same matter, all persons liable to contribute may be joined and the liability of each may be determined in proportion to his interest and provided for separately.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, a suit to set aside a revenue sale for arrears of rent against several persons each of whom had purchased different separate items of property is not bad for misjoinder, the proceeding complained of being one, and the ground upon which it is impugned being also the same.<sup>2</sup>

been improperly alienated, there was a conflict of decisions under the old Code as to whether he is entitled to join all the alienees in one suit as defendants.<sup>3</sup>

In Rup Narain v. Gopal Devi,<sup>4</sup> a case under the old Code, their Lordships of the Privy Council doubted whether in such a case there would be any misjoinder. Under the present rule which is wider than the corresponding Section of the old Code, it is clear that such joinder is permissible.<sup>5</sup> The abovementioned principle is applicable not only to suits for possession but also to suits for mere declaration.<sup>6</sup> The cases above referred to are cases of suits by reversioners. But the principle will apply to suits by junior members of a Hindu undivided family or by members of a Malabar tarwad to set aside alienations, and to suits by heirs or successors-in-interest to set aside alienations by the predecessors-in-interest.<sup>7</sup> In a suit for partition of properties belonging to a joint Hindu family by a junior member against the father, it was held that the vendees and mortgagees and others who had obtained decrees against the father which were alleged to be collusive and fraudulent, were properly joined as parties.<sup>8</sup>

10. For the right to relief arises out of the same transaction though in the alternative.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, in suits for rent against tenants, an alternative claim against the plaintiff's co-sharers or vendors can be joined, if it is alleged by the tenants that the co-sharers have received the whole or a portion of it from the tenants.<sup>2</sup> Where the plaintiff purchased certain land from A and was subsequently dispossessed by B, it was held that in a suit against B, for a declaration of his title, the plaintiff could also join A as defendant praying for the refund of purchase money if it be found that B is the owner.<sup>3</sup> Where the plaintiff filed a suit for recovery of money against two defendants alleging that one of them was his agent and had lent the other the suit amount and prayed for a decree against the other if the loan was true or, in the alternative, against the agent if he did not advance the loan, it was held that the suit was not bad for misjoinder of defendants.<sup>4</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>5</sup> In cases where it is doubtful which of the two defendants is liable to the plaintiff, both of them may be joined in one suit with a claim for alternative relief.<sup>6</sup> See Rule 7, infra.

11. Award of costs in claims of alternative reliefs. — See Section 35, Note 9, supra.

12. Ancillary reliefs. — Where there is one cause of action against some defendants and the relief claimed against the other defendants is only ancillary to the relief to be given to the plaintiff and not in respect of a distinct and separate cause of action, the suit is not bad for misjoinder.<sup>1</sup> For example, where A and B are co-sharers of certain lands in the possession of C and D and A sues B, C and D claiming to eject C and D from his share, and for partition of his share as against B, the claim against B is merely ancillary to the relief claimed as against C and D which cannot be properly worked out without a partition of A's share. For this purpose B may be properly joined as a party to the suit.<sup>2</sup>

13. Separate trials. — It has been already seen in Note 2 above that a plaintiff is entitled under this rule to join several defendants in respect of several causes of action arising out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions. Though O. 1 R. 2 applies in terms only to the joinder of plaintiffs and there is no corresponding rule in regard to the joinder of defendants, it has been held both in England and India that the principle of that rule is applicable to the case of the joinder of defendants also.<sup>1</sup> If the trial of the suit is likely to be embarrassing owing to a

O. 1 R. 3 variety of defences the Court may order separate trials or make such other order as may be expedient.<sup>2</sup>
Notes 13-15

14. Appeal. — If in any suit the Court holds that it is bad for misjoinder of defendants and orders the plaintiff to elect to proceed against some only, the order is a 'judgment' within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent and an appeal lies therefrom. For, the order is in substance a decision that the suit as framed does not lie and the suit will have to be dismissed if the plaintiff does not comply with the order.<sup>1</sup>

15. Classes of cases illustrating the above principles. — See Notes to Order 1 Rule 10.

O. 1 R. 4 Court may give judgment for or against one or more of joint parties.

R. 4. [Ss. 26, 28.] Judgment may be given without any amendment —

(a) for such one or more of the plaintiffs as may be found to be entitled to relief, for such relief as he or they may be entitled to;

(b) against such one or more of the defendants as may be found to be liable, according to their respective liabilities.

[1877, Ss. 26, 28.]

1. Scope of the Rule. — Clause (a) of this rule must be read with O. 1 R. 1. Where several persons in whom any right to relief is alleged to exist join together as plaintiffs in a suit, but it is found that only some of them are entitled to relief, a judgment may, under this rule, be given for such relief in favour of such persons.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where four members of an undivided family sued the widow of a deceased coparcener for possession of certain properties, but the Court found that only one of these was entitled to relief, it was held that judgment was properly given in his favour without any amendment.<sup>2</sup> But where no right to relief is alleged to exist in one of several plaintiffs and one plaintiff alone is found, as a matter of fact, to be entitled to relief, this rule will not apply, and judgment cannot be given in his favour without amendment. Thus, where A and B sue C on the allegation that A alone is entitled to relief and that B is added merely as a pro forma party, but B alone is found to be entitled to relief, judgment cannot be given in his favour without amendment.<sup>3</sup>

Clause (b) of this rule must, similarly, be read with O. 1 R. 3. Where several defendants have been impleaded under O. 1 R. 3 but some of them alone are really

1. Scope of the Rule. — A suit which is otherwise properly constituted shall not be bad for misjoinder merely because the defendants are not equally interested in the relief claimed in the suit.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a suit for accounts against A and B as agents is not necessarily bad for misjoinder merely because the plaintiff may ask for accounts as against A from 1265 to 1283 fasli and as against B from 1281 to 1283.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, a suit is not bad for misjoinder merely because the relief claimed as against some of the defendants is only ancillary to the main relief claimed in the suit.<sup>3</sup>

R. 6. [S. 29.] The plaintiff may, at his option, join as parties to the same suit all or any of the persons severally, or jointly and severally, liable on any one contract, including parties to bills of exchange, hundis and promissory notes.

Joinder of parties liable on same contract.

Q. 1 R. 6

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule is applicable only to suits on contracts including bills of exchange, hundis and promissory notes. The liability on a contract may be a joint one or a joint and several one or a several one. Where A becomes liable under a promise and after his death the liability survives to his heirs B, C and D, the liability of the latter is a joint and single one.<sup>1</sup> Where A and B jointly make a promise to pay a certain amount to C, each of them also severally undertaking to pay that amount, it is a case of a joint and several liability. Where A and B, each for himself, agree to pay a certain amount to C, it is the case of several liability. This rule deals with cases of several liability and cases of joint and several liability, the legal consequences of both kinds of liability, so far as this rule is concerned, being the same.

2. Joint liability. — As has been seen in Note 1 above, a liability is joint if on the death of one of the joint promisors the liability becomes the liability of the surviving promisors and no liability devolves upon the heirs or legal representatives of the deceased promisor; survivorship is the distinguishing mark of a joint contract; where therefore there is no survivorship and the liability extends beyond the surviving debtors to the estate of a deceased debtor, the liability is presumably joint and several.<sup>1</sup> Judged by this test the liability of A and B under a joint promise to pay C a certain sum of money is a joint and several one inasmuch as under Section 42 of the Indian Contract Act, 1872, it is provided that where two or more persons have made a joint promise, then unless a contrary intention appears by the contract, all such persons during their joint lives and after the death of any one of them his representative, jointly with the survivor or survivors must fulfil the promise. There has, however, been a conflict of views on the point. It was held in the undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> that a joint promise by A and B creates under Section 43 of the Contract Act, a joint and several liability. A contrary view has been expressed in the two cases noted below.<sup>3</sup> It is submitted that the former view seems to be the correct one.

3. Several liability. — The rule provides that the plaintiff may at his option join in one suit all or any of the persons severally liable under a contract. Thus, where, by one contract each of two persons A and B agrees to pay a certain sum of money to C, A and B are severally liable under the contract and C can, under this rule, either sue A and B jointly or can bring separate and successive suits against them.

4. Joint and several liability. — It has been seen in Note 2 above how a joint liability is different from a joint and several liability. Where under this rule the plaintiff sues one or some of the persons jointly and severally liable, the latter have no right to insist on the joinder of the other promisors so liable as parties to the suit.<sup>1</sup> But this rule is confined to liability arising out of contracts. As will be more fully discussed under Rule 10 infra, where the liability is a joint one but is not contractual, it cannot be enforced without joining as defendants all the persons jointly liable.

In England the defendants can insist, even in cases of contracts, on the joinder of the other joint promisors as parties to the suit.<sup>2</sup>

Notes 4-6

5. Suit against one of several partners. — Section 43 of the Contract Act applies to contracts entered into with firms or partnerships. Hence, by virtue of O. 1, R. 6 a plaintiff in enforcing such a contract is not bound to implead all the members of a firm as defendants, but is entitled to sue, as he chooses, one or more of them, for the performance of the entire contract.<sup>1</sup>

6. Where decree against one co-contractor precludes suit against other co-contractors. — A and B jointly promise to pay C a certain sum of money. C sues A separately and obtains a decree. He then executes the decree against A and the decree is satisfied. He cannot subsequently sue B on the same contract; because, having realized what was due to him under the contract, he has no longer any rights under it. But supposing the decree against A remains unsatisfied or is only partially satisfied, can C bring a separate suit against B for the amount remaining due to him under the contract? On this question there is a conflict of decisions. It has been held by the High Courts of Calcutta<sup>1</sup> and Madras<sup>2</sup> that such a suit is barred. These decisions are based on the view that the contract gives rise to but one cause of action and when once that cause of action is sued on and a judgment is obtained on it, the cause of action merges in the judgment and the plaintiff has no longer any cause of action against the other co-promisor. As regards the argument based on Section 43 of the Contract Act, viz., that the plaintiff can under that Section sue, as he chooses, one or more of the joint promisors, it was said that the Section merely deprives a defendant of the right of being sued along with his joint promisors but does not operate to convert a single cause of action into several causes of action, so as to enable the plaintiff to file separate actions against both. On the other hand, it has been held by the Allahabad High Court<sup>3</sup> that a fresh suit against B is not barred under such circumstances, on the ground that Section 43 of the Contract Act makes the joint liability of a co-promisor joint and several, and also on the ground that, inasmuch as the present rule deprives the defendants of their right to insist on their co-promisors being joined as parties, the plaintiff gets a larger right of bringing separate suits against the promisors. The High Court of Bombay has also recently held that a fresh suit is not barred.<sup>4</sup>

It is submitted that neither of the grounds relied on can be accepted as leading to the conclusion arrived at by the Allahabad High Court. That the liability under a joint promise by A and B is joint and several does not affect the singleness of the cause of action. Nor can the deprivation of certain rights of the defendants give the plaintiff any additional right. The same observations will apply to the decision in the undermentioned case of the Calcutta High Court in which it was held that when the obligation is joint and several an unsatisfied decree against one of the promisors is not a bar to an action against the others.<sup>5</sup>

Suppose O sues both A and B (joint promisors), but A consents to a judgment against him, can O thereafter prosecute the suit against B alone. It has been held by the Bombay High Court that O can do so,<sup>6</sup> on the ground that the doctrine in King v. Hoare<sup>7</sup> "which laid down that judgment recovered against a joint promisor was a bar for a further action in respect of the same liability against the other joint promisors" ought not to be applied to the prosecution of an action already instituted.

7. "Any one contract." — The rule only applies where the defendants are liable on the same contract. It does not apply where the defendants are liable on different contracts.<sup>1</sup>

8. Suits on bills of exchange, hundis and promissory notes. — The drawer and the acceptor of a bill of exchange can be joined as co-defendants in a suit brought by the holder of the bill.<sup>1</sup> But suppose A draws a bill of exchange payable at sight on B and the latter, on presentation, refuses to accept it. In such a case, the holder of the bill has no cause of action against B and cannot add B as a co-defendant with A.<sup>2</sup>

This rule does not say that any party must be joined as a co-defendant to a suit on a bill or hundi. But this does not obviate the need for joining a person who may, in the circumstances of the case, be a necessary party.

Thus, where the endorsee sues the endorser for renewal of a lost cheque, the drawer also must be impleaded as the cheque cannot be renewed without his co-operation.<sup>3</sup>

It must be remembered that the rule is only one of procedure. It merely enables the holder of a bill to sue all the parties in one action. It does not in any way affect the liabilities of the parties. Hence, where the holder of a bill of exchange sues the drawer, the acceptor and the endorser, the decree cannot provide that the endorser should be exempt from liability until the plaintiff has exhausted his remedies against the drawer and the acceptor.<sup>4</sup>

Synopsis

O. 1 R. 7
Notes 1-2

1. Scope of the Rule.
2. Costs of suit where relief is claimed against defendants in the alternative. See Note 9 to Section 85.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule enables the plaintiff to bring one suit against a number of persons in the alternative where he is in doubt as to which of them is liable to him.<sup>1</sup> The following are instances of cases in which a plaintiff may sue several defendants in the alternative under this rule —

(1) A plaintiff can sue two persons as defendants to recover from either the one or the other, a sum of money by way of rent for a godown when he is in doubt as to which of the two owes the rent.<sup>2</sup>

(2) A sues B for a sum of money lent to B by C, A's agent. B denies the loan but C maintains he made the loan. A, in such a case, may join C as a co-defendant in the suit praying for relief against him in the alternative.<sup>3</sup>

(3) Plaintiff alleged that both the first and second defendants claimed a charge for the use of certain water and prayed that the Court should determine which of the defendants was entitled to the charge, and that the other should be restrained from interfering with the plaintiff, and compelled to refund the charges he had already collected. Held, there was no misjoinder.<sup>4</sup>

It should be noted that ex hypothesi where a plaintiff sues different persons in the alternative, all of them cannot be made liable. Where therefore judgment is obtained for part of a debt against one of the two defendants sued alternatively, the plaintiff cannot, it is submitted, proceed against the other for the balance of the debt.<sup>5</sup> or may defend,<sup>15</sup> in such suit, on behalf of or for the benefit of all persons so interested. But the Court shall in such case give, at the plaintiff's expense, notice of the institution of the suit<sup>16</sup> to all such persons either by personal service or, where from the number of persons or any other cause such service is not reasonably practicable, by public advertisement, as the Court in each case may direct.

2. Scope and object of the Rule. — The general rule is that all persons interested in a suit ought to be joined as parties to it, so that the matters involved may be finally adjudicated upon and fresh litigation over the same matters may be avoided.<sup>1</sup> The present rule forms an exception to this general rule. It provides that where a number of persons are similarly interested in a suit one or more of them can, with the permission of the Court, sue or be sued on behalf of themselves and such others. The rule is one of convenience based upon reason and good policy and saves the trouble and expense which would otherwise have to be incurred in such cases.<sup>3</sup>

The conditions for the applicability of this rule are —

- (1) the parties must be numerous,
- (2) they must have the same interest in the suit,
- (3) the Court's permission under the rule must be obtained, and
- (4) notice must be given to the parties whom it is proposed to represent in the suit.

The rule is taken from O. 16 R. 9 of the Rules of the Supreme Court which runs as follows:

"Where there are numerous parties having the same interest in one action, one or more of such parties may sue or be sued or may be authorized by the Court to defend in such action, on behalf or for the benefit of all parties so interested."

It will be seen that the chief distinction between the Indian rule and the English rule is that under the latter permission is necessary only for defending a suit on behalf of others and not for suing or being sued.<sup>3</sup>

Under this rule, the same suit may be a representative one both as regards the plaintiffs and as regards the defendants.<sup>4</sup>

Where, under the substantive law itself a person is entitled to represent a body of persons having the same interest in a certain matter and sue on behalf of such body, he can do so without following the procedure laid down in this rule.<sup>5</sup> See Note 21, infra.

It has been held by the Bombay High Court that the rule can be applied to applications which are in the nature of suits.<sup>6</sup>

The rule does not apply when a special procedure is prescribed by any local or special enactment.<sup>7</sup>

3. Numerous persons. — The first essential for the application of this rule is that numerous persons should be interested in the suit. The rule does not fix any limit to the number.<sup>1</sup> In one case, it was held that the rule contemplates the case of parties too numerous to be conveniently made parties to the suit.<sup>2</sup> In another case, a hundred persons were held to be "numerous" within the rule.<sup>3</sup> And in an English case<sup>4</sup> it was held that thirty defendants were "numerous."

It is not necessary that the number should be capable of ascertainment.<sup>5</sup> A suit is therefore maintainable on behalf of a fluctuating body, e. g., the inhabitants of a town<sup>6</sup> or village;<sup>7</sup> the members of a defined<sup>8</sup> sect<sup>9</sup> or caste<sup>10</sup> or class<sup>11</sup> or the followers of a particular religion, like the Mahomedan community<sup>12</sup> or the Hindu community.<sup>13</sup> In this connexion it may be pointed out that a fluctuating body like a village community can own property<sup>14</sup> or even be a promisee under a contract.<sup>15</sup>

But a suit is not maintainable on behalf of the public in general.<sup>16</sup> This is not because the number of persons forming the public is not capable of ascertainment but because of the principle that there can be no private actions for public wrongs.

A suit on behalf of the whole Hindu community is not impeachable on the ground of the number being incapable of ascertainment. The contrary view of the Calcutta High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>17</sup> has been dissented from in later decisions of the same High Court.<sup>18</sup> But such a suit may be open to attack on another ground, namely, that the parties cannot have the "same interest" in such a case. See Note 8 below.

4. Clubs and other associations. — Bodies of persons may be registered under the Companies Act and may be authorised under the law to sue and be sued through one of their members or officers. But in the case of unincorporated associations like clubs, etc., the secretary or other officers of the club cannot sue or be sued except by obtaining permission under this rule,<sup>1</sup> even though he or they may have been authorised by a resolution of the association to sue or to defend a suit.<sup>2</sup>

O. 1 R. 8
Notes 6-8

6. Every Mahomedan worshipper in a mosque has an individual right to sue any one who interferes with his right.<sup>7</sup> Hence individual Mahomedan worshippers can sue to set aside an alienation of endowed property,<sup>8</sup> or for declaration that certain property is wakf property.<sup>9</sup>

Although, where a number of persons have similar but distinct rights any one of them may sue in his own right, yet, the Court may, on grounds of convenience, require the plaint to be amended and converted into a representative action.<sup>10</sup> Where the suit is not brought in a representative capacity but in an individual capacity the decree in the suit does not bind members of the class who are not actually parties on record.<sup>11</sup> The fact that the suit is against a defendant in his individual capacity does not preclude him from raising a question of general custom, although the adjudication cannot bind members of the community who are not on the record as parties. If the plaintiff wishes to have the question of common right tried out he should amend his plaint and allege that the suit is brought against the defendant personally and as representing others claiming the same rights.<sup>12</sup>

7. Suit to establish or negative a public right. — It has been seen in Section 91 Note 1 that a private person cannot maintain a suit in respect of a public right except under the provisions of Section 91, unless he is able to show that he has suffered special damage. Where numerous persons, not being the general public (e. g., a particular community), suffer special injury in respect of a public right, any one of such persons may, under this rule, bring a representative suit on behalf of all such persons.<sup>1</sup> Where there is no question of a public right at all, no special injury need be proved. Thus, suits may be brought by village communities to establish their rights in connection with village pathways,<sup>2</sup> village wells<sup>3</sup> or ghats or banks of rivers.<sup>4</sup>

A person may sue for a declaration that he is the owner of certain land free from any right of the public to use it as a highway. In such a case the plaintiff may implead any one who formally claims to use the land as a public highway. He need not proceed under O. 1 R. 8 against all persons who may deny his right. But the decree in such a case will only bind the actual defendants.<sup>5</sup>

8. Having the same interest. — The persons on whose behalf a suit is brought must have the same interest in the suit. The interest need not be a proprietary one. Thus, the disciples of a mutt can sue for setting aside an improper alienation of the mutt properties and for restoration thereof to the head of the mutt.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, the worshippers at a temple can sue for setting aside an alienation of temple property<sup>2</sup> and, where there is no trustee or manager, even for the recovery of the temple property.<sup>3</sup> The expression "same interest" is not confined to joint or concurrent interest.<sup>4</sup> It applies also to cases where the interest is similar though distinct.<sup>5</sup> But an interest merely as a member of the public is not a sufficient interest for the purposes of this rule.<sup>6</sup> As has been observed in Adamson v. Arumugam,<sup>7</sup> the rule "is rather designed to allow one or more persons to represent a class having special interests than to allow such persons to sue on behalf of the general public." For examples of cases where several persons were held to have the same interest in the suit, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>8</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Lahore that the defendants in a partition suit may, in certain circumstances, have the same interest in the suit and that O. 1 R. 8 may apply to such a case.<sup>9</sup>

Where the parties do not have the same interest in the suit, they must all be on the record.<sup>10</sup> Thus, in a suit for diverting Government water for non-riparian purposes, where each plaintiff had a distinct cause of action and also had to prove damage, it was doubted if a representative suit could be brought on behalf of all the persons claiming to be riparian owners.<sup>11</sup> Similarly, in a suit for contribution all the co-promisors must be before the Court.<sup>12</sup> For examples of suit, in which several persons were held not to have the same interest in the suit, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>13</sup>

The rule does not require that the whole body on whose behalf the proceedings are taken should be of the same opinion. The true principle underlying the rule is that the suit should, in form, be constituted into a representative one in order to prevent the defendant from being vexed by similar suits by others. "If a substantial majority of the members of a body are of one opinion an order may be made by the Court giving permission under this rule, though there is a small or negligible minority holding a different opinion." This is the view of the Madras and Rangoon High

Courts.<sup>14</sup> It has been held by the Bombay High Court that where a community is divided into two clear factions, one faction favouring and the other opposing the suit, it cannot be said that the community has the same interest in the suit and a suit cannot be brought under O. 1 R. 8.<sup>15</sup>

It is not a condition precedent to a suit under O. 1 R. 8 that the consent of the community should be obtained beforehand for the suit.<sup>16</sup> Nor is it necessary to hold a meeting of the caste or community.<sup>17</sup> But if a meeting is convened and the meeting is irregularly held, the consent expressed at such a meeting is vitiated and O. 1 R. 8 will not apply.<sup>18</sup> In such a case, the consent of the various members expressed subsequently cannot help the plaintiff because it cannot be taken to represent the real sense of the community.<sup>19</sup> Where a meeting is properly held and certain persons are duly appointed to sue on behalf of the whole body, the fact that some members of the body subsequently side with the defendants does not take away the representative character of the suit.<sup>20</sup>

Under this rule, a suit can be brought on behalf of a body against some of its own members.<sup>21</sup>

A suit between two rival groups of the same caste or body is within the rule.<sup>22</sup>

The rule says that where numerous persons have the same interest in one suit, one or more of such persons may sue on behalf of all. Hence, the plaintiff must have himself the same interest as the persons he seeks to represent.<sup>23</sup> Thus, a suit to establish the rights of the sweepers and chamars could be filed only by persons belonging to those two castes and not by outsiders.<sup>24</sup> Where, however, a representing a body has a certain interest in the suit in common with all the other members of the body and has also a special right peculiar to himself in respect of the same matter, the two interests may be combined in the same suit under Order 1, Rule 1.<sup>25</sup>

The rule is regulative and not constitutive. It only deals with procedure and does not create any right to sue. It presupposes the existence of the right of suit in the community. Hence, where there is no right to sue at all in the community, the rule does not apply.<sup>26</sup> Thus, where the property of a trust is vested in a trustee it has been held that the trustee alone can sue for recovery of possession of the property and not the worshippers in the temple.<sup>27</sup> Similarly, where a suit is barred under the provisions of any law, it cannot be maintained merely because it is on behalf of numerous persons within O. 1 R. 8. It has been held that the procedure pertaining to representative suits is not applicable to actions of debt, to money claims or to liabilities in contract or in tort.<sup>1</sup> Applying this principle, it has been held that in a representative suit against several persons each of whom is in possession of a different parcel of land, a decree for mesne profits for a consolidated sum cannot be passed.<sup>2</sup> But a representative suit can be brought for declaration, injunction or possession.<sup>3</sup>

9. Representative suit for damages not maintainable. — No representative action can lie where the sole relief sought is damages because they have to be proved separately in the case of each plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> In such a case the plaintiffs cannot be deemed to have the "same interest" in the suit. Hence, O. 1 R. 8 does not enable a representative action for damages in respect of defamation to be brought on behalf of a number of persons.<sup>2</sup>

10. With the permission of the Court. — The obtaining of judicial permission is an essential condition for binding persons other than those actually parties to the suit and their privies; if this essential condition is not fulfilled, the suit is not a representative one.<sup>1</sup> As a matter of procedure, the Court ought to insist on the permission prescribed by Rule 8 being obtained before a matter is allowed to be fought out in a representative capacity.<sup>2</sup> A representative suit, if brought without the requisite leave under this rule, is liable to be dismissed.<sup>3</sup> But an objection on the ground of want of permission cannot be raised for the first time in appeal.<sup>4</sup> At any rate, when objection is taken before the

O. 1 R. 8 Appellate Court, the suit should not be dismissed but should be remanded for the procedure provided by this rule being followed.<sup>5</sup>

Permission under the rule, obtained in the trial Court enures for the Appellate Court also and no fresh permission is necessary in respect of the Appellate Court.<sup>6</sup>

The Court should exercise a judicial discretion in granting permission to a person to sue in a representative capacity under the rule.<sup>7</sup>

11. At what stage of suit permission is to be granted. — The proper course is to obtain permission before the suit is instituted. But the permission may be granted even after the institution of the suit,<sup>1</sup> and even though it had been refused on a previous occasion.<sup>2</sup> There can be no hard and fast rule as to how many persons should represent the class of the persons of the same interest: it cannot be said that three or eight persons are not enough to act in a representative capacity.<sup>3</sup>

12. Form of permission. — The permission under the rule need not be express. It may be gathered from the proceedings of the Court in which the suit was instituted.<sup>1</sup> The dictum of Stuart, C. J., to the contrary in the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> is not good law. See the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> where it was held on the language of the Court's order that permission was not given. Permission under the rule must be to definitely named persons.<sup>4</sup>

13. Who may apply for permission. — Where a suit is brought by certain persons —

(1) on behalf of themselves and as representing others, or

(2) against certain persons on behalf of themselves and as representing others, the application for permission should be made by the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> But where a suit against a number of persons is sought to be defended by one of them, the application should generally be made by the defendant who seeks to defend on behalf of all. The persons to whom permission has been granted under the rule must act together. If permission is granted to a certain number of persons and some of them do not join in the suit, the remaining persons alone cannot avail themselves of the permission and sue.<sup>2</sup>

14. May be sued. — Where the inhabitants of a village claim a right of way over plaintiff's land, the plaintiff, with the Court's permission, may sue one or more of them on behalf of all, to negative the right.<sup>1</sup> The consent of the defendant on the record is not necessary to enable the Court to permit the plaintiff to sue the defendant as representing the whole community.<sup>2</sup>

Notes 14-18

15. "May defend." — This clause comes into operation when the plaintiff has impleaded all the persons interested as defendants, and one of them wishes to defend on behalf of all the defendants.<sup>1</sup> In such a case the Court may permit him to so defend the suit on behalf of all.

16. Notice of the institution of the suit. — The provision as to the issue of notice of the institution of the suit is a peremptory one.<sup>1</sup> But it is the duty of the Court to issue such notice<sup>2</sup> and a suit cannot therefore be dismissed for failure of the party to move the Court to perform the duties imposed on it by the Section.<sup>3</sup> The notice may be given whenever the defect is pointed out. If the defect is noticed by the Appellate Court, the suit may be remanded for the notice being given.<sup>4</sup>

Where notice is not given as required by this rule, the suit is not a representative one and the decree will bind only the parties actually on the record.<sup>5</sup>

A notice under the rule should specify the names of the persons to whom permission is to be given, so that the persons interested may have an opportunity of knowing who have been selected to represent them.<sup>6</sup> But the non-specification of the names is not necessarily fatal to the suit.<sup>7</sup> At any rate, the decree in the suit will always bind the persons who actually take part in the suit.<sup>8</sup>

See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>9</sup>

17. Title of suit. — Where a suit is brought by or against persons in a representative capacity, the fact should be stated not only in the plaint (see O. 7 R. 4) but also in the title of the suit.<sup>1</sup> See also Appendix A, Forms 1 and 2. But the suit may be a representative one though the cause title may not show it. In India the substance and not the form of pleadings should be considered.<sup>2</sup>

18. Addition of parties. — The effect of an order under the rule is that the parties who have obtained permission to sue as representatives have the conduct of the suit on behalf of all those they purport to represent. In fact they are the only parties to the suit.<sup>1</sup> Sub-rule 2 provides that any person on whose behalf a suit is instituted or defended under sub-rule 1 may apply to the Court to be added as a party to the suit.<sup>2</sup> Such a person must show that the conduct of the suit is not in proper hands and that his interests will be seriously affected to his prejudice if he is not joined as a party. The reason is that there is considerable delay caused by a fresh party coming in and the costs of other parties are consequently increased.<sup>3</sup> The application must also be made without unnecessary delay.<sup>4</sup> Where no such application is made, such person cannot, as a party, prefer an appeal against any decree that might be passed in the suit.<sup>5</sup>

19. Suit in the name of wrong plaintiff. — Under O. 1 R. 10, sub-rule 1, where, through a bona fide mistake, a suit has been instituted in the name of a wrong person as plaintiff, the Court can allow any other person to be substituted as plaintiff. Suppose, A describing himself as a creditor of B sues on behalf of himself and the other creditors of B and it turns out that A is not a creditor of B. A cannot continue the suit, as O. 1 R. 8 presupposes a community of interest between the plaintiff and the other persons he is allowed to represent. But can C, who is an admitted creditor of B, be substituted for A under O. 1 R. 10, sub-rule 1, in such circumstances? It is conceived that he can.<sup>1</sup> There is nothing in O. 1 R. 10 or Rule 8 to exclude the application of Rule 10 to cases arising under Rule 8.

20. Addition of parties after decree. — Where in a suit under this rule the plaintiffs on the record neglect to execute the decree in their favour, the Court may add other persons as parties to enable them to execute the decree.<sup>1</sup>

21. Decree in a representative suit. — Where a person sues or is sued on behalf of himself and as representing others, the suit is called a representative suit. To such a suit Explanation VI to Section 11 applies and a decree passed in such a suit enures to the benefit of, or binds, all the persons so represented in the suit, although they are not actually parties on the record.<sup>1</sup> A representative suit is not confined to suits brought under O. 1 R. 8.<sup>2</sup> It includes cases where, under the substantive law, certain persons are entitled by virtue of their position to sue on behalf of themselves and others, e. g., the manager of a joint Hindu family<sup>3</sup> and the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad.<sup>4</sup>

A decision in a representative suit under this rule, as in any other case, operates as res judicata only when it is given on the merits<sup>5</sup> and only so far as the rights litigated are common to the person suing or being sued and those whom he represents.<sup>6</sup> Further, it can bind the persons represented only with respect to their property which the person suing or sued against represented, although the parties on record may be personally liable. Hence, a decree for injunction which can only be enforced through the personal obedience of the defendant is not binding on the persons who were not parties actually on the record but against whom a representative suit was filed.<sup>7</sup>

If the alleged common right in a representative suit under this rule is negatived, the suit should be dismissed; the Court cannot, in such a suit, declare the rights of individuals as distinguished from the rights of the class of persons on whose behalf the suit is brought,<sup>8</sup> though it is open to the Court to pass a decree in favour of persons forming a smaller number out of a larger class.<sup>9</sup>

Where a suit is not a representative one, Explanation VI to Section 11 does not apply and the decree cannot bind anyone who is not a party to it.<sup>10</sup>

Even where a plaintiff purports to sue in a representative capacity, the decision in the suit will not operate as res judicata against the other members of the group which the plaintiff professes to represent, unless the requirements of this rule are complied with.<sup>11</sup> See also Note 59a to Section 11.

22. Costs in representative suit. — Under Section 35 of the Code, the costs of all suits are within the discretion of the Court and the Court can determine by whom or out of what property the costs are to be paid. As a general rule, only parties on the record are liable to pay costs. (See Section 35, Note 9.) This rule applies also to representative suits. Hence, in such suits, as a general rule, costs should be awarded only against parties on the record but not against other persons whom the parties on the record may represent.<sup>1</sup> But this is not an inflexible rule. In exceptional cases, costs may be ordered to be paid even by persons who are not parties on the record but on whose behalf, or for whose benefit, the suit has been brought or defended. The Court may also, in a fit case, direct the costs to be paid out of any property which may belong to the community represented in the action. In any case, great caution is necessary in making an order as to costs in a representative suit.<sup>2</sup> In the undermentioned

23. Compromise of representative suit. — It was held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> following the English case of Jenkins v. Robertson<sup>2</sup> that persons instituting a suit on behalf of the public (e. g., a suit under Section 92, Civil Procedure Code) have no right to bind the public by a compromise decree. In a recent case decided by the Privy Council, however, their Lordships left it open whether the law in India under Section 11, Civil Procedure Code, is the same as that stated above.<sup>3</sup> They have, however, indicated that Jenkins v. Robertson was based on Scotch law and had been explained in In Re South American and Mexican Co., [(1895) 1 Ch. 37]. But in a representative suit under O. 1 R. 8, the representative is dominus litis until judgment and he can therefore discontinue or compromise the suit.<sup>4</sup>

23a. Withdrawal of representative suit. — See O. 23 R. 1 Note 19a.

24. Abatement of suits and appeals. — A sues on behalf of himself and numerous other persons under O. 1 R. 8. A dies pending the suit. Does the suit abate? No.<sup>1</sup> The reason is twofold: firstly the persons represented are not the "legal representatives" of the deceased plaintiff within the meaning of Section 2 (11) of the Code and O. 22 R. 3 does not apply to such case;<sup>2</sup> secondly the persons represented are already parties to the suit constructively though the conduct of the suit is in the hands of a particular person to whom leave has been given, and any one of such persons can continue the suit after the plaintiff's death.<sup>3</sup> The application to continue the suit should be made under O. 1 R. 8, sub-rule 2<sup>4</sup> or O. 1 R. 10, sub-rule 2.<sup>5</sup> No period is fixed within which such application should be made, but the High Court of Madras expressed an opinion in the undermentioned cases<sup>6</sup> that such an application will be governed by Article 181 of the Limitation Act. See also the following decisions which are based on the principle that in a representative suit under this rule, the death of any of the parties does not necessitate the substitution of his legal representatives and that the suit or defence can be continued by any of the other persons who have the same interest in the suit.<sup>7</sup> Suppose now that A sues B on behalf of himself and numerous other persons and a decree is passed in favour of A. B appeals and, during the pendency of the appeal, one of the persons represented by A dies, and his legal representatives are not brought on the record. Does the appeal abate? No.<sup>8</sup> The reason is, that the principle of the abatement of a suit by the death of a party has no application where the deceased was not a party to the suit eo nomine. Where the suit as brought is not a representative one, there is a difference of opinion in the Lahore High Court as to whether the fact that, in appeal, some respondents are allowed to represent others will not prevent abatement on the death of the persons so represented. One set of cases holds that it will not.<sup>9</sup> The other set holds that it will.<sup>10</sup> In the case below,<sup>11</sup> forty persons instituted a suit against A. All the forty persons joined as plaintiffs and the suit was not brought in a representative capacity. A decree was passed in favour of the plaintiffs. A appealed from the decree, but obtained permission from the Court that the appeal should be defended by four out of the forty decree-holders in the lower Court. Pending the appeal, some of the decree-holders, other than the four selected to defend the appeal, died. A failed to bring on record their legal representatives within the period of limitation. It was held that the appeal abated under such circumstances, on the ground that all the forty persons being actually on the record as plaintiffs in the lower Court, the suit was not a representative suit, and that although some of the respondents may be allowed by the Court to defend the appeal on behalf of themselves and others, the appellant must join as parties to the appeal all the persons who were actually plaintiffs on the record in the lower Court and in whose favour a decree had been passed. A fortiori, where, in such a case, one of the respondents selected to represent the others dies, and his legal representatives are not brought on the record within the prescribed period of limitation, the appeal abates.<sup>12</sup>

A suit was brought against B as a trustee representing a temple and C as representing a certain community. Pending the suit B died and another trustee was appointed. It was held that the new trustee should be brought on the record, so that the idol and the temple properties might be represented in the suit.<sup>13</sup> As to the procedure to be adopted in cases where parties sue or are sued in a representative capacity with the permission of the Court under this rule and one or more of them die pending the suit or appeal, see the cases noted below.<sup>14</sup>

25. Applicability of Rule to arbitration proceedings. — Order 1 Rule 8 has no application to private arbitration proceedings. Hence, a reference to arbitration by persons professing to represent a certain community will not be binding on the other members of the community in the absence of any authorization by the latter.<sup>1</sup>

It has been held by the Bombay High Court that this rule applies to a petition under Section 14 of the Arbitration Act (1899) to set aside an award, the reason given being that such petition is analogous to, and can be tried, as an ordinary suit.<sup>2</sup>

26. Revision. — A refusal to entertain an application under this rule without proceeding in accordance with the law is revisable under Section 115 of the Code.<sup>1</sup>

R. 9. [S. 31] No suit shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or nonjoinder of parties, and the Court may in every suit deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interest of the parties actually before it.

1. Legislative changes. — The corresponding provision of the former Code (Section 31) did not contain the expression "nonjoinder." Hence there was some doubt whether the Section applied to cases of nonjoinder also or was confined to cases of misjoinder alone. See the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup> These cases can be only of academic interest under the present Code, as the new rule makes it clear that it applies to cases of nonjoinder of parties as well as of misjoinder.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule provides that no suit shall be defeated by reason of the misjoinder or nonjoinder of parties, but that the Court may, in every suit, deal with the matter in controversy so far as regards the rights and interests of the parties actually before it.<sup>1</sup> There are, however, cases in which the Court cannot, under the substantive law, deal with the rights and interests of the parties actually before it in the absence of certain other persons. Thus, the Court cannot, in a suit by a co-trustee for possession of the trust property, grant any relief to the plaintiff in the absence of all the other co-trustees on the record.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that all the co-trustees together represent a single and indivisible right which cannot be adjudicated upon and no effective decree can be passed by the Court in their absence. In such a case, the necessary parties may be added under O. 1 R. 10.<sup>3</sup> Where they are not so added, the suit will be dismissed, not by reason of the nonjoinder of parties but by reason of the fact that the Court cannot, under the substantive law, grant any relief to the parties actually on the record. O. 1 R. 9 does not affect such cases, and cannot be relied upon to dispense with the joinder of such necessary parties.<sup>4</sup>

This rule does not apply to cases where there is a misjoinder of causes of action as well as of parties.<sup>5</sup>

3. Misjoinder of parties.—Order 1 Rule 1 deals with the question “who may be joined as plaintiffs in a suit.” O. 1 R. 3 deals with the question “who may be joined as defendants in a suit.” If persons are joined as plaintiffs in the same suit in any case not covered by O. 1 R. 1, there is misjoinder of plaintiffs. Similarly, if persons are joined as defendants to the same suit in any case not covered by O. 1 R. 3, there is a misjoinder of defendants.

A misjoinder of parties is not fatal to a suit.<sup>1</sup> Where there is a misjoinder of parties the Court has power under O. 1 R. 10 (2) to strike out the names of the persons improperly joined, and to allow the suit to be proceeded with. There is no misjoinder of plaintiffs where one of the plaintiffs is entitled to all the estate sued for and the name of another person is added as a co-plaintiff merely as a matter of extra caution.<sup>2</sup>

4. Misjoinder of parties and causes of action — Multifariousness. — O. 2, Rr. 3, 4 and 5 deal with joinder of causes of action. Where in the same suit several causes of action are joined in contravention of these provisions, there is a misjoinder of causes of action. A misjoinder of causes of action may be coupled with a misjoinder of plaintiffs or of defendants. In such a case there is multifariousness or a misjoinder of parties and of causes of action. As has been seen already in Note 2 above, this rule does not apply to such a case. But even in such cases the suit should not be dismissed; the plaintiff should be given an opportunity to amend the plaint and to make his election and confine the suit to one set of defendants.<sup>1</sup>

5. Nonjoinder of parties. — The rule applies to nonjoinder of parties as well as misjoinder. Hence, the failure to join any parties does not per se entail the dismissal of a suit.<sup>1</sup> But there is a distinction between the nonjoinder of necessary parties and nonjoinder of proper parties. Necessary parties are those in whose absence the Court cannot pass an effective decree at all. Proper parties are those whose presence is necessary in order to enable the Court to completely and adequately adjudicate on all the matters involved in the suit. (See Notes under O. 1 R. 10.) If the nonjoinder is only of proper (as contrasted with necessary) parties, it can never be in itself fatal to the suit.<sup>3</sup> In such a case the Court can, under this rule, deal with the matters in controversy in so far as the parties actually before the Court are concerned<sup>3</sup> or it may order the addition of the parties under O. 1 R. 10, sub-rule 2. But in the case of necessary parties, the Court cannot, as has already been seen in Note 2 above, decide the suit at all in their absence.<sup>4</sup> But even in such a case the Court cannot immediately proceed to dismiss the suit without giving an opportunity to the plaintiff to amend the plaint by adding the absent parties.<sup>5</sup> If, however, on being required to add a necessary party the plaintiff refuses to do so, the suit is liable to be dismissed.<sup>6</sup> See also Note 2 above.

A mortgage was executed in favour of A and B. A alone brought a suit on the mortgage. Pending the suit, B died and his right under the mortgage also devolved on A. It was held by the Nagpur High Court that although A alone had no right to sue on the day on which he instituted the suit, as he acquired the full and exclusive right before the date on which the decree was passed, the nonjoinder of B did not affect the validity of the decree.<sup>7</sup> The decision proceeds on the ground that the object of joining necessary parties is to enable the Court to pass an effective decree and where this object is served in spite of the nonjoinder of such parties, as in the above case, such nonjoinder is immaterial.

(2) The Court may at any stage of the proceedings,<sup>32</sup> either upon or without the application of either party,<sup>12</sup> and on such terms as may appear to the Court to be just, order that the name of any party improperly joined,<sup>31</sup> whether as plaintiff or defendant, be struck out,<sup>33</sup> and that the name of any person who ought to have been joined,<sup>13</sup> whether as plaintiff or defendant, or whose presence before the Court may be necessary<sup>14</sup> in order to enable the Court effectually and completely to adjudicate upon and settle all the questions involved in the suit,<sup>30</sup> be added.

I. SUB-RULE (1)

1. Legislative changes. —

- (1) The words "with his or their consent" in Section 27 of the old Code corresponding to sub-rule (1) of this Order have been omitted.
- (2) The words "at any stage of the suit" are new. See Note 6 below.

2. Scope of the sub-rule. — This sub-rule deals with the substitution or addition of plaintiffs after an action is brought. It contemplates cases in which a suit is brought by a plaintiff, who subsequently discovers that he cannot get the full relief he seeks without the joinder of some other person as co-plaintiff, and cases where it is found that some other person, and not the original plaintiff is entitled to the relief claimed.<sup>1</sup> In the former contingency, a new party has to be added and in the latter, a new party has to be substituted as plaintiff.<sup>2</sup> To bring a case within this sub-rule it must be shown that —

- (1) the action was commenced in the name of the original plaintiff by a bona fide mistake, and
- (2) the substitution or addition is necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute.

The words "if the suit is brought in the name of the wrong person as plaintiff" do not exclude altogether persons who may institute the suit without any right to do so<sup>3</sup> but the case must fall within the provisions of the sub-rule. Unless, therefore, the two conditions of the sub-rule are satisfied a defendant is entitled to the dismissal of a suit brought by an unauthorised person and the defect cannot be cured by the addition or substitution of persons who might have brought the suit.<sup>4</sup> The right of the plaintiff to be added must be same as the right in suit; in other words, a substitute can be added only to enforce the right pleaded.<sup>5</sup> A Court has, therefore, no power to import into the case as co-plaintiff a person who has a different cause of action inconsistent with that of the original plaintiff.<sup>6</sup> This sub-rule does not apply to cases of nonjoinder of necessary parties,<sup>7</sup> or to cases in which a suit has been instituted against a wrong person as defendant.<sup>8</sup> It applies to Revenue Courts also.<sup>9</sup> As to its applicability to appeals, see Section 107 Note 16, ante. The rule applies to suits on mortgages.<sup>10</sup>

Although, where the person originally suing as plaintiff is not entitled by himself to maintain the suit, the proper course under this rule is to add the other persons as plaintiffs, yet, where they are actually added as defendants there is nothing to prevent the Court from passing a decree in such suit in favour of any of the parties that may be found entitled to it. The principle is that when once all the parties are before the Court, the Court can make the appropriate order and should give judgment in favour of all the persons who may be entitled to relief, whether they be joined as plaintiffs or defendants.<sup>11</sup>

- (1) it is not deliberate but one honestly made,<sup>3</sup>
- (2) the point is doubtful,<sup>4</sup>
- (3) the Court of first instance and the Appellate Court take different views on a point on which the plaintiff's right of action depends.<sup>5</sup>

On the other hand, there can be no room for any bona fide mistake where it is persisted in after objection<sup>6</sup> or where, to his own knowledge, the original plaintiff has no right to sue on the date of the plaint.<sup>7</sup>

Illustrations

1. A, the agent of B, files a suit in his own name by a bona fide mistake. The Court can, under this sub-rule, substitute the name of the principal B for that of the original plaintiff A.<sup>8</sup>

2. A, the administratrix of the estate of B, sued on a mortgage bond in favour of B. She was unaware of the fact that her powers as administratrix had come to an end before the date of suit and was honestly under the impression that she had such powers. It was held that the person entitled to sue may be substituted for A under this sub-rule.<sup>9</sup>

3. A claiming title under a tamliknama executed in his favour by B sues for possession of certain properties under a bona fide mistake that the tamliknama covered that property; it was held that on discovery of the mistake, B, the real owner, could be added as a co-plaintiff under this sub-rule.<sup>10</sup>

4. A, the Official Assignee of Bombay, was constituted the attorney of B, the Official Assignee of Madras, to institute a suit on the latter's behalf in Bombay. Instead of suing as "A, attorney of B" he sued as "A, Official Assignee of Bombay" owing to a bona fide mistake; it was held that the plaint could be amended by substituting "A, attorney of B" for "A, Official Assignee of Bombay."<sup>11</sup>

5. A instituted a suit against B for the recovery of moneys due to an estate. At the date of the suit he had already been declared to be a trespasser in regard to that estate. It was held that A could not be treated as having instituted the suit by a bona fide mistake and that the true owner could not be substituted under this sub-rule.<sup>13</sup>

6. A sued B for possession of certain lands. B contested the suit on the ground that A had transferred the whole of his interest in the lands to C and that, therefore, he had no title to sue. A maintained his right stating that the transfer never became operative. This was found to be false. Thereupon A applied for adding C as a co-plaintiff; it was held that the falsity of his plea negated any bona fides on his part, and that the amendment could not be allowed.<sup>13</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>14</sup>

4. "Necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute." —

Under this rule it is essential that, in addition to the existence of a bona fide mistake, the substitution or addition should be necessary for the determination of the real matter in dispute.<sup>1</sup>

5. "Upon such terms as the Court thinks just." — The terms will be such as the Court thinks just under the particular circumstances of the case. Thus, the Court may order the payment of costs up to the time of amendment.<sup>1</sup> In the undermentioned case,<sup>2</sup> where a defendant was added under sub-rule 2, the Court made the order that the defendant should consent to be bound by all the previous proceedings in the suit and by any order that the Court might make as to the costs of those proceedings.

6. "At any stage of the suit." — The Court may allow the amendment at any stage of the suit. Thus, it can add a party before the decree is actually drawn up<sup>1</sup> or after the matter has been referred to arbitration,<sup>2</sup> or even in second appeal.<sup>3</sup> Where the Appellate Court substitutes a new plaintiff for the wrong one, and remands the case to the original Court, there must be a de novo trial.<sup>4</sup>

II. SUB-RULES (2) to (6).

9. Legislative changes. —

1. Under Section 32 of the old Code corresponding to this sub-rule, the Court could add parties at any time and even without any application therefor. But it could not strike out parties except on the application of a party made on or before the first hearing. Under this sub-rule the Court has power to strike out or add parties at any stage of the proceedings with or without any application.

2. The first portion of Section 32 of the old Code empowering the Court to transpose a plaintiff as a defendant or a defendant as a plaintiff, has been omitted as unnecessary in view of the fact that the power to add or strike out parties includes the power to transpose them as well.<sup>1</sup>

3. Under Section 33 of the old Code corresponding to sub-rule 4, amended copies of the summons as well as of the plaint had to be served on the original defendant. Under sub-rule 4, such service is necessary only if the Court thinks fit.

10. Scope and applicability of sub-rule (2). — This sub-rule corresponds to the second sentence of O. XVI R. 11 of the English Rules.<sup>1</sup> The object of the rule is to bring before the Court, at the same time, all the persons who are parties to disputes relating to one subject-matter so that the disputes may all be determined at the same time without the delay, inconvenience, and expense of separate actions and trials,<sup>2</sup> and the principle underlying the rule is, that the Court puts itself in the position of being able to effectually and completely adjudicate upon, and settle all the questions involved in the suit.<sup>3</sup>

The sub-rule gives a wide discretion to the Court to meet every case of defect of parties<sup>4</sup> but is subject to two limitations —

- (1) The Court has no power to join a person as a party if he could not have been originally impleaded under O. 1 R. 1 or R. 3.<sup>5</sup>
- (2) The presence of the person added must be necessary to effectually and completely adjudicate upon and settle all points involved in the suit.<sup>6</sup>

The discretion also should be exercised in a reasonable manner so as not to cause inconvenience or embarrassment.<sup>7</sup>

The sub-rule does not deal with the deletion of reliefs,<sup>8</sup> or with the substitution of parties<sup>9</sup> but only with striking out or addition of parties. It provides for the addition of any person who ought to have been joined and of any person whose presence is necessary to enable the Court to give a complete and effectual adjudication. The former is called a necessary party and the latter, a proper party. The distinction between this sub-rule and O. 1 R. 3 is, that while the latter refers to the action of the plaintiff at the time of the presentation of the plaint in joining, as defendants, parties against whom the right to relief is alleged to exist, the former refers to the action of the Court, at a stage subsequent to the presentation of the plaint in adding parties.<sup>10</sup>

The sub-rule applies also to proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act, 1894.<sup>11</sup> to suits under Section 92 of the Code<sup>12</sup> and to suits under Order 34 of the Code.<sup>13</sup> It will also cover the case of an application to implead as parties, the legal representatives of a deceased defendant in their individual capacity.<sup>14</sup> It has been held not to apply to proceedings under the Divorce Act<sup>15</sup> nor to enable a Court to adjudicate in a suit a general question which is of interest to a whole community, by adopting the expedient of joining a member of that community to the suit as a co-plaintiff.<sup>16</sup>

11. Addition of parties — General. — As has been observed in Note 10 above, this sub-rule provides for the addition of only two classes of persons, namely necessary parties, i. e., persons who ought to have been joined as parties, and proper parties, i. e., persons without whose presence the questions in the suit cannot be completely and effectually adjudicated upon. Where a person is neither a necessary nor a proper party, the Court has no jurisdiction to add him as a party under this sub-rule.<sup>1</sup>

No person can bring himself or anyone else on the record of a suit except with the cognizance or leave of the Court.<sup>2</sup> Further, it is conceived, that an order of the Court is necessary before a person is validly added as a party; the mere fact that the decree includes his name would not amount to an order for joinder of parties under O. 1 R. 10, sub-rule 2.<sup>3</sup>

The question of the joinder of necessary or proper parties is not a matter of substantive right but is merely one of procedure<sup>4</sup> and does not confer on the persons so joined any new rights or rights adverse to those of the others.<sup>5</sup> As has been seen in Note 10 above, the Court has a wide discretion in the matter of the joinder of a necessary or proper party.<sup>6</sup> It will ordinarily be exercised in favour of a person who applies in proper time.<sup>7</sup> Even in the absence of an application the Court should not, as a rule, dismiss a suit for nonjoinder of a necessary or proper party but should add him as a party of its own motion or direct the plaintiff to apply for that purpose.<sup>8</sup> The discretion will not, however, be exercised in favour of an applicant who applies to be added as a party, where the application is made at a late stage of the case<sup>9</sup> or where the person sought to be added is only a proper party and the plaintiff opposes such application,<sup>10</sup> or where the addition involves a trial de novo.<sup>11</sup>

Note 11

The trial Court cannot add parties after the suit has been carried out of it into the Court of Appeal.<sup>12</sup> The Court of Appeal has, however, the same powers as the original Court in the matter of addition of parties to the suit, or respondents to the appeal.<sup>13</sup> In fact, the Appellate Court should see, before deciding the appeal, that all the necessary parties are brought on the record.<sup>14</sup> Where, therefore, it finds it necessary to have certain persons before it, the proper course is not to return the plaint for amendment, but to add them as parties and remand the case for trial<sup>15</sup> or to remand the case to the lower Court directing it to add such persons as parties, and then try the case.<sup>16</sup> But the discretionary power should be exercised with caution.<sup>17</sup> Where a person applies to be added as a party appellant, the test is whether he can urge any of the grounds upon which the validity of the Court's order is called in question by the appellant already on record; if he cannot, he ought not to be added.<sup>18</sup> Nor will the Court's discretion be exercised in favour of a party who has resisted the objection as to nonjoinder in the lower Court.<sup>19</sup>

The High Court has, in second appeal, no power to add parties after it has remanded the case to the lower Court.<sup>20</sup> There is a conflict of views as to whether the High Court can, in second appeal, add a person as a party if he was not a party to the appeal before the lower Appellate Court. According to the High Court of Allahabad it cannot.<sup>21</sup> According to the High Courts of Calcutta,<sup>22</sup> Madras<sup>23</sup> and Patna<sup>24</sup> it can. The Allahabad High Court rested its view solely on Section 559 of the Code of 1882 corresponding to O. 41 R. 20 of the Code, and did not advert to Sections 27, 32 and 582 of that Code corresponding to O. 1 R. 10 and Section 107 of the present Code which give ample power to the Court to add parties. It is submitted that the Allahabad view is not correct. See also O. 41 R. 20, Notes 2 and 12. There is also a conflict of opinion as to whether a Court of Appeal can add a person who was not a party to the original suit itself. The Allahabad,<sup>25</sup> Bombay<sup>26</sup> and Lahore<sup>27</sup> High Courts hold that it cannot, while the Calcutta High Court holds that it can.<sup>28</sup> It is submitted with respect that the latter view is correct. If, in order to prevent multiplicity of suits, the first Court has power to add new parties to the suit, there is no reason why the powers of the Appellate Court in that respect should be restricted. It has been held by the Lower Burma Chief Court<sup>29</sup> that a Court of second appeal has no power to substitute one defendant for another in the plaint or record of the original suit, nor one appellant for another in the record of the first appeal.

Even when this rule is in terms inapplicable, the Court has power to add parties on general principles where such addition is necessary.<sup>30</sup>

Although it might be more satisfactory to add certain persons as plaintiffs and not as defendants, yet, where all the necessary parties are before the Court, whether as plaintiffs or defendants, the Court can grant the appropriate relief.<sup>31</sup>

It has been held by the Privy Council that where a suit on behalf of a Hindu widow for recovery of certain properties is sought to be withdrawn, the next reversioner has a right ex debito justitiae to be added as a plaintiff and given an opportunity of continuing the suit.<sup>32</sup>

Where persons who have been joined as defendants to a suit have not raised any objection but submitted to the jurisdiction of the trial Court, they ought not to be allowed to raise the objection for the first time in appeal.<sup>33</sup> See also Note 42.

12. "Either upon or without the application of either party." — It is not generally the province of the Court to force the plaintiff in a case to implead particular persons as parties.<sup>1</sup> Accordingly the Court will not, as a rule, act except on the application of the parties<sup>2</sup> and unless such application contains definite allegations of fact upon which a liability is imputed to the person sought to be impleaded.<sup>3</sup> In proper cases, however, this sub-rule empowers the Court to act suo motu<sup>4</sup> on the application of the person seeking to be made a party<sup>5</sup> or even without it.<sup>6</sup> A Court cannot, however, of its own motion add a receiver as a defendant when the leave of the Court appointing the receiver has not been obtained.<sup>7</sup>

O. 1 R. 10
Notes 12-13

Where a person applies to be made a party, what the Court ought to see is whether the suit cannot be determined owing to his absence, or whether a third person will be prejudiced by his not being joined as a party.<sup>8</sup> The position of a person who is made a defendant on his own application is different from that of a person who is impleaded without any such application, in that the former has to make out a prima facie case before the plaintiff can be asked to meet it<sup>9</sup> while, so far as the latter is concerned, he can claim to have his pleas fully heard and determined.<sup>10</sup>

Where a person is added under this sub-rule, the evidence already on the record cannot be used against him without his consent.<sup>11</sup>

The addition of a party will not shift the burden of proof from the plaintiffs who are bound to prove their own case as against the original defendant.<sup>12</sup>

An application of a person to be added as a co-plaintiff cannot be treated as an application under O. 22 R. 10 of the Code.<sup>13</sup>

13. "Who ought to have been joined." — Persons who ought to be joined as parties are called necessary parties. But in exercising their powers under this rule, Courts ought to see that they do not load the record with parties who are shown to have no interest in the suit<sup>16</sup> and that the trial of the suit is not embarrassed by the simultaneous investigation of totally unconnected controversies.<sup>17</sup> Thus, in a suit by A against B for damages on the ground that goods sold by B to A did not correspond to sample, it is not necessary to add the person who sold the same goods to B before the latter sold them to A.<sup>18</sup> In a suit by A against B to compel the registration of a document, third parties cannot be added and permitted to plead that the document ought not to be registered.<sup>19</sup> Similarly, a person claiming under a title quite distinct from that under which any of the parties to the suit claim, is not a proper party.<sup>20</sup> So also in a suit between parties each contending that he is the judgment-creditor, in respect of a particular decree, the judgment-debtor is not a proper party.<sup>21</sup> Where A sues B for damages for tort, it is not necessary to add all persons injured by the same tort.<sup>22</sup> See also the cases cited below.<sup>23</sup>

is dead, his representatives are necessary parties.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, the receiver of a deceased partner's estate will be a necessary party.<sup>3</sup> But a sub-partner<sup>4</sup> or a person who is not in the partnership as a member of the firm but is a member of a superior partnership in which he is on one side and the whole firm as a unit on the other, is not a necessary party to a suit for dissolution of the firm.<sup>5</sup>

In a suit for the recovery of a debt due to the partnership, all the partners are necessary parties inasmuch as, under Section 45 of the Indian Contract Act the right to claim performance of the contract of loan rests jointly with all the promisees.<sup>6</sup> The said Section also provides that on the death of one of the promisees, the right to claim performance rests with the surviving promisees and the legal representatives of the deceased promisee. The latter will also be necessary parties therefore to a suit for a debt due to the partnership and this is what the High Court of Calcutta holds.<sup>7</sup> The Allahabad,<sup>8</sup> Bombay<sup>9</sup> and Madras<sup>10</sup> High Courts have, however, held a contrary view based on the inconvenience and difficulties that might arise in insisting upon the joinder of the legal representatives of a deceased partner. It is submitted with respect that this latter view is not correct. It is unnecessary to consider this question under the present Code, for the newly introduced provisions of Order 30 provide an exception, as it were, to Section 45 of the Contract Act in that they allow one partner alone to sue, provided the suit is in the name of the firm.<sup>11</sup> It follows that where such a suit is brought, the legal representatives of a deceased partner are not necessary parties.<sup>12</sup>

O. 1 R. 10
Notes 15-16

A dormant partner is not a necessary party in an action on a contract entered into with the firm or with one of its members.<sup>13</sup> Where in a suit by the owner of a firm who is also a member of a joint Hindu family, the other members of the family are proved to be partners in the firm, the Court ought to allow the other members to come on record and have the plaint amended accordingly.<sup>14</sup> The same rule will hold good where a suit is brought by the plaintiff as the sole partner and it is found that there are other partners.<sup>15</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>16</sup>

16. Partition suits. — All persons interested in the properties are necessary parties to a suit for partition.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the share to which a person is entitled can be determined only in the presence of all the persons interested in the properties inasmuch as the partition which is made in favour of the plaintiff against his co-sharers gives him a portion of the property and takes away all rights which the others have in it. But the interest of the person, in order to make him a necessary party, must be of the same degree as that of the plaintiff. Persons having an inferior degree of interest to that of the plaintiff are not necessary parties.<sup>2</sup> Thus, in a suit for partition of the melwaram rights in certain properties, the kudiwaramdars are not necessary parties.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, in a suit for partition by sons against the father, grandsons are not necessary though proper parties.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, mortgagees of the family properties<sup>5</sup> and creditors of the defendants<sup>6</sup> as also alienees of the family properties<sup>7</sup> are not necessary parties to a suit for partition. They may all be proper parties if their presence is necessary to enable the Court to adjudicate upon and settle all matters in dispute effectually and completely.<sup>8</sup> The High Court of Bombay has, however, held in the undermentioned case<sup>9</sup> that a purchaser or mortgagee of a coparcener's share in joint property is a necessary party to the suit for partition.

Persons not claiming any kind of interest in the properties are not to be added as parties in a partition suit.<sup>10</sup>

17. Pre-emption suits. — In a suit for pre-emption in respect of a joint purchase by several co-vendees, all of them<sup>1</sup> or in the case of the death of one of them, his legal representatives<sup>2</sup> are necessary parties. But if the plaintiff who is entitled to pre-empt joins along with him a stranger who has no right to pre-empt, the plaintiff forfeits his right of pre-emption and it is not a mere defect of parties which can be cured by striking off the name of the stranger.<sup>3</sup> A second vendee is also a necessary party.<sup>4</sup> But the vendor<sup>5</sup> or a mortgagee from the vendee<sup>6</sup> is not a necessary party. Where the suit for pre-emption is against the benami vendee, the real purchaser may be added as a proper party, as such addition will not change the character of the suit.<sup>7</sup> Where a purchaser sues for rent accruing due between the date of his purchase and the date of his surrender to the pre-emptor, the latter must be impleaded as a party.<sup>8</sup>

after suit is neither a necessary nor proper party as his presence cannot affect the adjudication of shares.)

in possession of the property are all, however, necessary parties.<sup>7</sup> An action in ejectment against a tenant, however, must be brought by all the co-sharers.<sup>8</sup>

An assignee pendente lite of the property is not a necessary party to a suit for possession inasmuch as he will be bound under Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act by the decree in the suit.<sup>9</sup> But he may be added as a proper party.<sup>10</sup> In an ejectment suit by a landlord against his tenant the Court should not bring on the record the person from whom the plaintiff holds the land nor persons claiming to hold it from a third party nor such third party.<sup>11</sup> Where A sues his lessor B for possession of land and C intervenes claiming it to be his, he can be added as a proper party if he does not claim adversely both to the plaintiff and the defendant.<sup>12</sup> In a suit for ejectment of a sub-tenant's sub-tenant, the sub-tenant is a necessary party.<sup>13</sup> In a suit for possession of attached property under Section 146, Criminal Procedure Code, the Government is not a necessary party.<sup>14</sup> Nor is a Hindu reversioner a necessary or proper party to a suit by the adopted son for possession against the widow where the validity of the adoption could not be questioned.<sup>15</sup> Where B is made a co-plaintiff with A in a suit for possession, on the ground that under an agreement between them, B is entitled to share in the property in the event of success in the litigation, and subsequently A compromises the suit with the defendant, B cannot claim to continue the suit, as he has no present subsisting interest in the property.<sup>16</sup>

19. Suits by joint promisees. — All co-promisees are necessary parties to a suit to enforce the promise.<sup>1</sup> The same principle will apply where a sole obligee dies leaving several co-heirs. In such a case, one of them alone cannot maintain a suit without impleading the others as parties.<sup>2</sup> Where several persons are jointly and severally liable for a single liability, all of them are not necessary parties to a suit against some of them only; but they may be added as proper parties in order to prevent multiplicity of suits.<sup>3</sup>

20. Suits for rent. — It has been already observed in Note 7 to O. 1 R. 1, that where a right to enforce a liability is jointly vested in several persons, all of them are necessary parties to a suit to enforce such liability.<sup>1</sup> In rent suits only those persons who are liable to pay rent should be impleaded as "defendants".<sup>2</sup> The general principle governing the joinder of necessary parties does not enable persons who are not likely to be affected by the result, to come in and raise altogether new questions which do not properly arise. Therefore, a tenant cannot ordinarily insist on impleading a third party in a rent suit, so as to raise questions of title and thus convert a simple rent suit into a complicated title suit; nor can such party be allowed to come in on his own application.<sup>3</sup>

Note 20

Where, however, the third party claims a share of the rent sued for,<sup>4</sup> or where the defendant in a suit for rent by the lessee against the sub-lessee pleads payment to the third party with the owner's consent,<sup>5</sup> or where the third party is alleged to be a transferee from the tenant with the landlord's consent,<sup>6</sup> he may be impleaded as a proper party to the suit. Where, during the pendency of a rent suit, a receiver is appointed in respect of the property of the defendants, he must be impleaded as a necessary party to the suit.<sup>7</sup> It has been held by a Full Bench of the Calcutta High Court that the heirs of a tenant do not take the tenancy as an entire body, but take as tenants-in-common each being liable jointly and severally for the whole rent to the landlord and that therefore a suit against some of the heirs alone for rent without impleading the others is not bad,<sup>8</sup> though of course they may be added as proper parties.<sup>9</sup>

proved<sup>13</sup> or unless the other co-sharers are alleged to have been paid off their shares<sup>13</sup> or the other sharers do not contest the plaintiff's claim<sup>14</sup> or collude with the defendant.<sup>15</sup> A person who is a necessary party to a suit for rent is also a necessary party to the appeal against the decree in such suit.<sup>16</sup>

It has been held that where in a rent suit the intervener alleging purchase of the holding claims that he should be added as a party to the suit, the Court must add the intervener as a party even though the statutory recognition as transferee has taken place after the institution of the suit.<sup>17</sup>

22. Mortgage suits. — See Order 34 Rule 1, infra.

23. Suits on negotiable instruments. — A suit on a negotiable instrument must be instituted in the name of a person who, on the face of the instrument, is entitled thereto or by a holder deriving title from him.<sup>1</sup> Where the suit is by a benami-holder upon a promissory note, the Court may add the real creditor as plaintiff.<sup>2</sup> In a suit on a lost cheque by the endorsee of the cheque against the endorser for a duplicate of the cheque or for refund of money paid, the drawer of the cheque must be made a party.<sup>3</sup> The mere fact that the drawer and acceptor of a bill are partners does not give rise to the presumption that they are partners in respect of the drawing of the bill. The fact that the acceptor of the bill is not liable, having been joined as a party after lapse of time does not discharge the drawer from his liability where the suit has been instituted against him in time.<sup>4</sup> Where in a suit on a promissory note by the endorsee, the endorser seeks to be joined as co-plaintiff alleging that he endorsed the pro-note to the plaintiff merely for collection, it was held that he was a proper party and might be added as a defendant.<sup>5</sup>

24. Suits for specific performance. — The general rule is that a person who is a stranger to the contract is not a proper party to a suit for specific performance of the said contract.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the promisor defendant acts in concert with another person in order to defeat the plaintiff's rights under the contract, such person may be added as a proper party to the suit.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where A enters into a contract with B for sale of land, and subsequently sells the same land along with his son C to D, C will be a proper party in a suit by B against A for specific performance of the contract.<sup>3</sup> The transferee from the vendor after the contract of sale may also be added as a party.<sup>4</sup> Where A on behalf of himself and his minor brother B entered into an agreement to sell with C, and C sued for specific performance of such agreement, it was held that B was properly impleaded as a party even though a decree could not be given against him, as his presence was necessary to have the question of the binding character of the agreement decided in the suit.<sup>5</sup> Under a single contract to convey land to several persons it is not open to some of the joint contractees only to enforce specific performance thereof.<sup>6</sup>

25. Government. — Where any act of the Government is questioned or the proprietary right or right to revenue of the Government is likely to be affected, the Government is a necessary party to the suit.<sup>1</sup> See also Note 6 to Section 79 ante.

In some cases, the Government may have such an interest in the matter that the joinder, though not necessary, might be proper.<sup>2</sup> Where the Government has no suit. He may be added under O. 1 R. 10 sub-clause 2 if the Court considers his presence necessary.<sup>16</sup> Where the question is whether the plaintiff or defendant is the real purchaser, a third party claiming adversely to both of them cannot be impleaded in the suit.<sup>17</sup> As to the necessity of impleading all the attaching creditors in a suit for declaration against one of them that the property is not liable to attachment, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>18</sup> See also the cases cited below.<sup>19</sup>

Notes 27-29

28. Addition introducing new cause of action. — The Court will not give leave to add a party where the result would be to introduce a new cause of action with which the plaintiff has nothing to do.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where A, an importer and seller of watches, sues B for an injunction restraining him from importing and selling similar watches, the manufacturer cannot be allowed to be added as a party.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where A, who purchased goods by sample from B, sued B for damages on the ground that the goods purchased were not according to sample and B applies to implead C, his vendor who sold the sample, so that the question between him (B) and C may also be decided, it was held that such joinder would introduce a new cause of action and should not be allowed.<sup>3</sup> In a suit for a decree in terms of an award to which the defendant consents, a creditor of the defendant who impugns the award as fraudulent should not be added as party.<sup>4</sup>

29. Addition altering nature of suit. — Parties should not be added so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of a different character.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a simple suit for rent cannot, by adding parties, be converted into a suit for title.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, a suit for plaintiff's share of the estate of a deceased person cannot be converted into an administration suit by addition of all the persons interested in the estate.<sup>2</sup>

30. "Questions involved in the suit." — The expression "questions involved in the suit" does not mean all claims which may possibly be put forward by anybody to the property involved in the suit.<sup>1</sup> It means questions as between the parties to the litigation, i. e., questions with regard to the right set up and the relief claimed on one side and denied or withheld on the other,<sup>2</sup> and not questions which may arise between co-plaintiffs and co-defendants inter se.<sup>3</sup> The said words would, in the case of a suit for partition, include not only the questions arising out of the plaint, but those arising out of the plaint considered along with the statement of defence.<sup>4</sup>

31. "Improper addition of plaintiff or defendant." — It has been observed already in Note 10 above that sub-rule 2 of this rule is subject to the limitation that the Court has no power to join a person as a party if he could not have been originally impleaded under O. 1 R. 1 or R. 3. Nor does this sub-rule override the effect of O. 2, R. 3. Thus, a person claiming under a title quite distinct from that under which the parties to the suit claim is an improper party, as his joinder as party will result in a misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action, or a misjoinder of defendants and causes of action.<sup>1</sup>

Where a person whose right to join as a co-plaintiff is denied by the plaintiff on the record,<sup>2</sup> or where such person objects to be added as a plaintiff,<sup>3</sup> his joinder as co-plaintiff is improper, though he may be made a defendant.<sup>4</sup> A defendant already on record cannot take such objections as are available to the defendant newly added. Such objections are to be taken by the newly added defendant himself.

32. Parties may be added at any stage of the proceedings. — The power to add a party can be exercised at any stage of the suit.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a party can be added before the final decree is actually drawn up<sup>2</sup> or after a suit has been reinstated on an application under O. 9 R. 13 of the Code.<sup>3</sup> The Court has, however, no jurisdiction to add a party in the following cases —

O. 1 R. 10
Notes 82-83

- (1) Where a final decree has been passed and drawn up in the suit, and the matter, so far as regards that Court, becomes conclusive.<sup>4</sup>
- (2) Where an appeal has been filed against the preliminary decree passed by the Court, and the Appellate Court thus becomes seized of the matter.<sup>5</sup>
- (3) Where the suit has been remanded to the Court under O. 41 R. 25 of the Code.<sup>6</sup>
- (4) Where the suit has been terminated by the parties by a lawful compromise.<sup>7</sup>

There is a conflict of views as to whether, after a preliminary decree and before a final decree, a Court has power to act under this rule and add a party and thus re-open the proceedings. The High Courts of Madras,<sup>8</sup> Bombay,<sup>9</sup> Calcutta,<sup>10</sup> Allahabad<sup>11</sup> and Rangoon<sup>12</sup> hold that it has. So also do the Courts of the Judicial Commissioner of Sind<sup>13</sup> and Peshawar.<sup>14</sup> The Nagpur<sup>15</sup> and the Oudh<sup>16</sup> Judicial Commissioner's Courts, on the other hand, hold that it has no such power. The latter view seems to proceed upon the view that such addition involves the setting aside of the preliminary decree and that this cannot be done by the Court. Really, however, the proceedings are re-opened only so far as the added party is concerned and this is not affected by O. 20, R. 3. It is therefore submitted that the former view is the correct one.

When the suit is re-opened in appeal the Appellate Court has the same powers of adding a party as the first Court till a final decree is passed by it.<sup>17</sup> The same principle will apply to the Court of second appeal.<sup>18</sup>

Where the suit is a representative one, such as a suit contemplated by O. 1 R. 8 or by Section 14 of the Religious Endowments Act, the persons represented by the actual party are really parties to the suit and their being brought on the record after the decree in the place of the actual party does not affect the rule that a Court cannot implead a new party after decree.<sup>19</sup>

33. Striking out name of party improperly joined. — The impropriety in the joinder of a party lies in the fact that a party is introduced who has no connexion with the reliefs claimed in the plaint.<sup>1</sup> In the case of an improper joinder of plaintiffs the Court can ask them to elect one among themselves to proceed with the suit and to amend the plaint by striking off the others.<sup>2</sup> In the case of improper joinder of defendants the proper course is to strike out the names of such defendants and not to dismiss the suit as against them.<sup>3</sup> The parties whose names are thus struck out, cease to be parties to the suit, and must be treated as persons who have been dismissed from the suit and not as persons against whom the suit has been dismissed.<sup>4</sup>

The provision in this rule as to the striking out of the names of the parties who have been improperly joined refers to the suit as framed. Hence, where in a suit as framed, a certain person appears properly on the record as a plaintiff, the mere fact that after trial it is found that he is not entitled to maintain the suit does not justify his name being struck out under this rule. The proper course in such a case is to dismiss his claim.<sup>5</sup>

Where a defendant is brought on the record, the Court has no power to strike out his name merely because notice could not be served on him owing to the non-discovery of his whereabouts<sup>6</sup> or because he does not resist the plaintiff's claim.<sup>7</sup> Nor can such striking off be made after the first hearing.<sup>8</sup> Where the plaintiff states that he has no claim against some of the defendants, the proper course is to strike out the names of such defendants and not to dismiss the suit as against them.<sup>9</sup>

When a party's name is struck out, the suit comes to an end so far as he is concerned.<sup>10</sup> All the evidence produced by him should be removed from the record.<sup>11</sup> If, on the removal of his name the Court finds that it has no jurisdiction to try the case, the plaint should be returned to be presented to the proper Court.<sup>12</sup>

A Court of Appeal has a power of striking out parties similar to that of the first Court.<sup>13</sup> It has also power to direct the first Court to do so.<sup>14</sup> It is not competent for the lower Court, however, to strike out the name of a party added by the Appellate Court.<sup>15</sup> Where one Judge has ordered a party to be added leaving the issue of misjoinder to be decided later, the successor is competent to strike out the name of the party improperly joined.<sup>16</sup> Where the Appellate Court finds that a defendant has been improperly added by the lower Court, it should strike out his name and dismiss the suit against him with costs both in the lower Court and before itself and not merely dismiss the appeal preferred by such defendant.<sup>17</sup>

Notes 33-34

Where a suit is dismissed against a defendant on the ground that he has been improperly joined, it will amount to a striking off of his name under this rule even though the striking out was not formally done, and he ceases to be a party to the suit.<sup>18</sup> But where the plaintiff gives up a defendant properly made a party, but his name is not formally struck out, he nevertheless continues to be a party to the suit within the meaning of Section 47 of the Code.<sup>19</sup>

A party who ought not to have been impleaded and who is not affected by the decree passed, is not competent to figure as an appellant and where he so figures, his name should be struck out.<sup>20</sup>

Where an order impleading a party is appealed from and the appeal is dismissed, the impropriety of the addition cannot again be questioned at the stage of the appeal from the decree itself.<sup>21</sup>

The rule expressly provides that an order adding or striking out the names of any parties may be made subject to such terms as may seem just to the Court. Where, on the application of the plaintiff, an order striking out the names of certain persons as defendants is made and no terms are inserted in the order, the effect is the same as if the suit were withdrawn against those defendants and a fresh suit against them would be barred under the provisions of Order 23 Rule 1.<sup>22</sup>

When the names of parties are struck off as improperly added, the Court can order the costs of such parties to be paid by the party at whose instance they were joined.<sup>23</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>24</sup>

34. Transposition of parties. — The power to add or strike out parties includes, as has been seen in Note 9 above, the power to transpose them as well and to order amendments consequent upon such transposition.<sup>1</sup> This power should be exercised wherever the ends of substantial justice require it and a transfer of parties from one side to the other should always be granted where the refusal to do so would prejudicially affect the applicant by driving him to another suit.<sup>2</sup> Thus, in a suit for partnership accounts where the plaintiff wishes to withdraw the suit, but defendants wish to continue the suit, the plaintiff should be transferred as defendant and the defendant as plaintiff and the suit continued.<sup>3</sup> Transpositions of parties are frequent in partnership suits,<sup>4</sup> partition suits<sup>5</sup> and in suits for administration.<sup>6</sup>

Under O. 1 R. 10 sub-rule 2 and Section 107 of the Code, the Appellate Court has the power to transpose a respondent as an appellant in order to further the ends of justice.<sup>7</sup> Even the High Court in second appeal has the power to permit a transposition of parties.<sup>8</sup>

It is no valid objection to an application for transposing a party that the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court would be affected by such transfer; if it is exceeded, the Court can afterwards return the plaint to be presented to the proper Court.<sup>9</sup>

35. Transposing of defendant as plaintiff.—The transposition of a defendant as a co-plaintiff should always be allowed "where it is necessary for a complete adjudication upon the questions involved in the suit and to avoid multiplicity of proceedings."<sup>1</sup> A sues B, the mortgagor, and C, the subsequent mortgagee for foreclosure. A preliminary decree is passed, and thereafter, C pays off the amount due thereunder before the passing of the final decree and applies to be transposed as a plaintiff. The Court has power to so transpose him and pass a final decree for foreclosure in his favour.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where one of two co-trustees sues a third person for recovery of the trust property and impleads the other trustee as a defendant and pending suit the plaintiff dies, the other trustee defendant can be transposed as a plaintiff and the suit proceeded with.<sup>3</sup> So also where A, alleging that he was appointed trustee by C, a deceased person, sues B for moneys due by B to C, and makes C's widow D also a defendant to the suit and it is found that A was not the trustee for that amount, it being C's absolute property, the proper course is to transpose D as a plaintiff and proceed with the suit.<sup>4</sup>

So also, where A sues B and C on a promissory note executed by B to C, on the ground that C was really a benamidar for A, and finding that such a suit is not maintainable by A under the Negotiable Instruments Act, C applies to be transposed as a plaintiff, the application should be allowed. Such a transposition does not prejudice the debtor and does not affect limitation under Section 22 of the Limitation Act.<sup>5</sup> But a transposition of a defendant as a plaintiff should not be granted if it results in changing the character of the suit.<sup>6</sup> Nor can a transposition be made where it would deprive the plaintiff already on record of his power to sue and ask for a determination of the claim advanced by him. Thus, where A claims to have the sole right to a certain sum of money due from a defendant B and makes a third person C, who claims as against himself (A), a party to the suit, C cannot be transposed as a plaintiff in the place of A, as to do so would be to deprive A of his right to have his claim determined.<sup>7</sup>

Even in cases to which O. 1 R. 10 does not apply, the Court has inherent power to order the transposition of a defendant as a plaintiff.<sup>8</sup>

When a pra forma defendant becomes on his own application a co-plaintiff, he must be taken to adopt only those statements in the plaint which are essential to support the cause of action stated in the plaint and not any other statements.<sup>9</sup>

36. Transposing of plaintiff as defendant. — Under O. 1 R. 10 one of the plaintiffs can be transposed as a defendant, if his original joinder was improper.<sup>1</sup> The Court has also, apart from O. 1 R. 10, inherent power to transpose one of the plaintiffs as a defendant.<sup>2</sup> If the transposition is made at the instance of a co-plaintiff, the Court can make such co-plaintiff give security for the costs of the original defendants incurred up to the date of transposition.<sup>3</sup> But as regards future costs of the original defendants, the Courts cannot, merely because of the transposition of one of the plaintiffs as a defendant, order such co-plaintiff to furnish security for their future costs.<sup>4</sup> But it would seem that if apart from the transposition there are special circumstances, such as the plaintiff suing in the capacity of a "puppet" for another, the Courts may order security for future costs as well.<sup>5</sup>

37. Misdescription of parties.—Where it is clear who the person who intends to sue or who is intended to be sued is, but he is described wrongly, it is a case of misdescription of parties which can be corrected by the Court at any time.<sup>1</sup> Similarly,

Agent is sued personally, the amendment of the title as abovementioned will really amount to a substitution of a new party which will not be allowed after the period of limitation.<sup>5</sup>

2. A suit is wrongly filed in the name of the Chairman, District Board, Dacca, instead of the District Board, Dacca. The case is one of misdescription and can be corrected by striking off the word "Chairman."<sup>6</sup> Similarly, where A sues the Municipal Committee of Gorakhpur through its Secretary instead of through its President as he ought to have done, and the relief claimed is against the Committee, the misdescription can be corrected at any time.<sup>7</sup>

3. A brought a suit against "Shivlal Ramprasad, a firm doing business as merchants at Ahmedabad." It was found subsequently that Shivlal Ramprasad was a joint Hindu family and that the provisions of Order 30 would not apply. The title of the plaint was sought to be amended by substituting the names of the members of the family for the firm's name "Shivlal Ramprasad." It was held that the amendment was only a correction of misdescription and did not amount to an addition of any new parties.<sup>8</sup>

4. A suit was instituted for damages by "H. Hogarth & Sons", it being alleged that they were the owners of the vessel "Baron Jedburgh". The real name of the plaintiff was, however, "Hogarth Shipping Co., Ltd.," and was not described as such owing to a bona fide mistake. It was held that the description could be corrected at any stage.<sup>9</sup>

The principle of the rule applies to miscellaneous applications also. Thus, where an application was made by "The Official Assignee of Bombay" instead of by the "Official Assignee of Bombay as an attorney of the Official Assignee of Madras" it was held that the misdescription could be corrected by the Court.<sup>10</sup>

Where a party is wrongly described and the Court orders amendment giving a correct description, and in spite of it the amendment is not carried out, the Court can strike out the name of such party.<sup>11</sup> against the plaintiff's consent<sup>3</sup> even though he may thereby be in a position to counter-claim against the plaintiff.<sup>3</sup>

Persons who are made parties to a suit in the appellate stage cannot be made liable for costs, simply because they encouraged the plaintiff to bring the suit.<sup>4</sup>

39. Amendment of plaint, sub-rule 4. — The amendment referred to in this sub-rule is such amendment as is necessitated by the addition of a defendant and not such an amendment as would add to or alter the nature of the suit as originally brought.<sup>1</sup> A case of misdescription is also one for amendment of the plaint.<sup>2</sup> Where the amendment as per the order of the Court is not made, the proper course is to reject the plaint.<sup>3</sup> But if the parties proceed with the trial without the amendment, and if they are not prejudiced, the trial is not bad.<sup>4</sup> In such a case, the petition may be treated as a part of the plaint.<sup>5</sup>

40. Suit by or against a dead person. — A suit instituted in the name of a sole plaintiff<sup>1</sup> or against a sole defendant<sup>2</sup> who is dead at the time of the institution of the suit is a nullity and the plaint cannot be amended by bringing his legal representatives on the record. The Nagpur High Court has recently held that even when a suit has been filed in the name of a dead person as a plaintiff the plaint can be amended under this rule by the substitution of the name of his legal representative where the mistake has been bona fide.<sup>3</sup> The decision is based on the view that there is really no difference between a suit instituted in the name of a wrong plaintiff and a suit instituted in the name of a dead plaintiff and that the applicability of this rule does not depend upon whether the "wrong person" referred to in it is alive or dead.

Where, however, there are several plaintiffs or several defendants and one of them dies, the suit cannot be said to be void ab initio.<sup>4</sup> The proper procedure in such a case is to strike out the dead person's name and proceed with the suit.<sup>5</sup> If the deceased person was a necessary party, the plaint can be amended by adding his legal representatives as parties.<sup>6</sup>

An appeal against a person who was dead at the date of the presentation of the appeal is incompetent, but as the Court is only acting in a proceeding in a suit, it has full power to allow amendment of the appeal by adding the legal representatives of the deceased respondent as parties.<sup>7</sup> The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur has, however, held that where an appeal has been filed on behalf of a person who was dead at its institution the Court cannot add the legal representatives of the deceased person as appellants.<sup>8</sup> But this view has been dissented from in a later decision of the same Court.<sup>9</sup>

Notes 40-41

41. Limitation Act, Section 22.—Section 22 of the Limitation Act (XV of 1877, now Act IX of 1908) provides that where a new plaintiff or defendant is added, or substituted, the suit shall, as regards him, be deemed to have been instituted when he was so made a party.<sup>1</sup> Thus, when a new plaintiff is substituted for the plaintiff already on record after the period of limitation prescribed for that suit, it must be dismissed.<sup>2</sup> If on the addition of a new defendant the suit is barred against him it will have to be dismissed as against him.<sup>3</sup> But does the addition of a party after the period of limitation affect the suit as regards other parties who are already on the record? The answer to this depends upon the question whether the added party is a necessary party or is only a proper party or whether he was already constructively a party to the suit though not actually so. If he was a necessary party, i. e., if the suit will not be a properly constituted one, unless he is made a party, his addition after the period of limitation will entail the dismissal of the whole suit, inasmuch as the suit becomes a properly constituted one only when he is made a party, and inasmuch as at that time the suit is barred against all.<sup>4</sup> Where the party added is only a proper party but not a necessary

one, the suit as regards the other parties will not be barred.<sup>5</sup> Where the added party is already constructively a party to the suit, as in the case of representative suits, it is really not a case of adding or substituting new parties, and Section 22 does not apply to such a case.<sup>6</sup>

1. A, one of the two heirs of a deceased Khoja Mahomedan, institutes a suit to recover a debt due to the estate of the deceased. Here the suit is not a properly constituted one without adding the other heir as a party, and if the other heir is added after the period of limitation, the whole suit will be barred.<sup>7</sup>

2. A, B and D are partners carrying on business in partnership. A sues B for partnership accounts without impleading D as party. In this case also the suit is not a properly constituted one without impleading D as party, and if he is added after the period of limitation, the whole suit will become barred.<sup>8</sup> The same principle will apply to one of several joint promisees suing without impleading the other joint promisees as parties.<sup>9</sup>

3. A, the landlord, sues C, a sub-tenant of B, who is himself a sub-tenant of A, for ejectment without impleading B as a party; B is made a party after the period of limitation. The whole suit must be dismissed as barred.<sup>10</sup>

4. A, the manager of a joint Hindu family, sues B for rent due in respect of family property. After the period of limitation C, a member of the family, is added as a co-plaintiff for the purpose of protecting A's interest and of removing any possible objections by the defendant. Here C is only a proper but not a necessary party and his addition after the period of limitation will not affect the suit by A, who in his own right as manager of the family was entitled to institute the suit.<sup>11</sup> The same result may also be arrived at on the principle that the manager represents the other members, that the latter are constructively parties to the suit and that therefore their subsequent addition is not an addition of any new parties within Section 22 of the Limitation Act.<sup>12</sup>

5. A, as executrix of B's will files a suit for recovery of possession of lands belonging to the deceased B. O and D, the beneficiaries under the will are substituted for A after the period of limitation. The suit is not barred by Section 22 of the Limitation Act. The reason is that an executor, trustee or administrator represents the persons beneficially interested and the addition of C and D in the above case is not the addition of any new party.<sup>13</sup>

The mere fact that the Court of its own motion orders the name of any person to be added as a party does not render the provisions of Section 22 of the Limitation Act inapplicable.<sup>14</sup>

Section 22 does not apply to a case of transposition of parties, as sub-section 2 of that Section itself shows.<sup>15</sup> Similarly, the Section does not apply to the correction of a misdescription of a party.<sup>16</sup> So also the Section does not apply where an amendment of the plaint merely alters the ground on which relief is claimed against a person who is already a defendant.<sup>17</sup>

Under sub-clause 5 of this rule, a person will be deemed to have been made a party, and proceedings begin against him only on the service of summons on him.<sup>18</sup>

Applying this sub-clause, some cases<sup>19</sup> have held that the suit as against such a person will be barred unless the service is within the period of limitation. But as the sub-clause is expressly made subject to Section 22 of the Indian Limitation Act, the suit as against a newly added defendant must be deemed to have been instituted when he is made a party so far as regards the question of limitation.<sup>20</sup> When a person is added as a party on an application made for the purpose, such addition must be deemed to have effect from the date of the application and not merely from the date of the order on the application.<sup>21</sup> The same principle applies even where the addition is made by the Appellate Court in appeal from an order by the lower Court refusing to make the addition.<sup>22</sup>

A party once discharged and subsequently reinstated is a party only from the date of reinstatement.<sup>23</sup> See also Notes to Section 22 in the Authors' Limitation Act.

42. Appeal. — An order under O. 1 R. 10 is not an appealable order and no appeal lies therefrom.<sup>1</sup> Thus, an order adding<sup>2</sup> or refusing to add a party<sup>3</sup> or an order striking out the name of a party as having been improperly or unnecessarily joined<sup>4</sup> or an order awarding costs under sub-rule 2<sup>5</sup> is not appealable. But if in substance the order amounts to a "decree" within the meaning of Section 2 (2), it will be appealable as a decree. Thus, where the defendant's name is struck out on the ground that the plaintiff has no cause of action against him, and the suit is dismissed as against him, the order, in substance, determines the rights of the plaintiff to bring the suit against the defendant and amounts to a decree and is therefore appealable as such.<sup>6</sup> Similarly, in a suit under Section 92 of the Code an order refusing to join persons as parties finally adjudicates or concludes the matter as against those persons inasmuch as such suit operates in rem. It is therefore appealable as a judgment within the meaning of Clause 13, Letters Patent (Rangoon).<sup>7</sup> Similarly, in a partition suit, where the name of one of the defendants is struck out leaving undecided the defendant's claim to a share in the partition, the order amounts to a decree and is appealable.<sup>8</sup>

But the mere fact that the order under this rule is drafted in the form of a decree will not make it really a decree, so as to confer a right of appeal.<sup>9</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>10</sup>

Where the respondents did not raise any objections in the trial Court to their being joined as defendants, it was held that they should not be allowed to raise it for the first time on appeal.<sup>11</sup> See also Note 11 ante.

See also Notes 6 and 7 to Section 2 sub-section 2.

43. Revision. — An order passed in the exercise of the Court's discretion under this rule is not ordinarily revisable under Section 115 of the Code<sup>1</sup> even if it is erroneous.<sup>3</sup> But where the order amounts to a failure to exercise jurisdiction, as where the Court considers it has no power to act under this rule,<sup>3</sup> or where it fails to consider whether the application should be granted or not,<sup>4</sup> a revision will lie. Similarly, where the order is such that the Court will be deemed to have acted illegally or with material irregularity in the exercise of jurisdiction, as where a necessary party is improperly refused to be added<sup>5</sup> or where a party is improperly added causing a misjoinder of parties<sup>6</sup> or resulting in a continuation of litigation,<sup>7</sup> or where the application for joinder is refused on the ground that the applicant has no locus standi, or that the plaintiff objects to such joinder<sup>8</sup> or where the order is manifestly unjust,<sup>9</sup> a revision will lie under Section 115.

Under Section 107 of the Government of India Act, 1915, the High Court could also interfere with orders passed under this rule in the exercise of its powers of superintendence where they amount to a denial of fair trial<sup>10</sup> or where irreparable injury or manifest injustice is likely to result thereby.<sup>11</sup> It may be noted that this power has been taken away by the Government of India Act, 1935. Note 1

1. Scope of the Rule.—The word "person" means a party to the suit, and the Court has no power to give the conduct of the suit to a stranger.<sup>1</sup>

Under the English Law, the Court has as much power to give the conduct of the defence to one of the defendants as the conduct of the suit to one of the plaintiffs.<sup>2</sup> The substitution of the word "person" for the word "plaintiff" in Section 32 of the last Code would seem to make it clear that the law is the same under the present rule.

Under this rule, read with O. 1 R. 10, the Court has power to transpose a defendant as plaintiff and give him the conduct of the suit.<sup>3</sup>

(2) The authority shall be in writing signed by the party giving it and shall be filed in Court.

[1877, S. 35; 1859, S. 115.]

1. Scope of the Rule. — The rule provides that all objections on the ground of misjoinder or nonjoinder not taken at the earliest opportunity shall be deemed to have been waived. It is based on the principle that a technical objection, which, if taken at an earlier stage of the proceedings, might have been cured, and which has not been so taken, should not be allowed to be raised at a later stage, so as to defeat the rights of the parties.<sup>1</sup>

The rule applies to nonjoinder or misjoinder of parties to appeals, as well as to suits.<sup>2</sup> It also applies to references to arbitration.<sup>3</sup> But it does not apply to any objection on the ground of want of cause of action or right of suit in the plaintiff, which is disclosed only after evidence is taken.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that such an objection is not one on the ground of misjoinder or nonjoinder.

The rule, although it limits the right of a defendant to object, does not in any way affect the Court's power under O. 1 R. 10 to add or strike out parties; nor does it limit the right of the plaintiff to add parties.<sup>5</sup>

2. Objection not taken at the earliest opportunity cannot be taken later on. — It follows from what has been stated in Note 1 that objections as to misjoinder and nonjoinder of parties not raised in the lower Court should not be allowed to be raised for the first time in the Appellate Court.<sup>1</sup> It has, in fact, been held that such objection, if not taken in the written statement and before the first hearing, must be deemed to have been waived.<sup>2</sup> But where the objection is taken at the proper time, the Court is bound to adjudicate upon it.<sup>5</sup> If after objection is taken by the defendant the plaintiff proceeds with the suit without adding the necessary parties, and the Court finds that the objection is well founded, the suit must be dismissed.<sup>4</sup> Where, however, the objection raised in the lower Court is not pressed, it cannot be allowed to be re-opened in the Appellate Court.<sup>5</sup> It is for the party who raises the objection to show which person is necessary to be joined.<sup>6</sup>

Where the defendant opposes the plaintiff's application for joinder of certain parties and the Court rejects the application, the defendant cannot subsequently raise the plea of nonjoinder with respect to such parties.<sup>7</sup> Where a suit was first heard ex parte and, on the defendant's application, the suit was ordered to be re-heard, and he was allowed to put in a plea of nonjoinder, it was held that the objection was taken in proper time.<sup>8</sup>

It has been held that where a guardian of a minor defendant neglects to raise the plea in his written statement, it will not be deemed a waiver against the minor so as to preclude him from raising it in his written statement after attaining majority.<sup>9</sup>

This rule does not apply to the nonjoinder of necessary parties.<sup>10</sup> (For full discussion of this question, see the Authors' Limitation Act, Section 22 Note 25.)

An objection on the ground of nonjoinder cannot be taken by a defendant who is found to have no interest in the subject-matter of the suit.<sup>11</sup>

3. "Unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen." — These words did not occur in the old Section. But, even under the old Section, which required that the objection to nonjoinder or misjoinder of parties should be taken at the earliest possible opportunity, and in all cases before the first hearing, it was held that where the ground of objection came into existence after the first hearing, there was no bar to raising the objection after such hearing provided the objection was taken at the earliest possible opportunity after such ground came into existence.<sup>1</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Madras that an objection as to nonjoinder of parties cannot be allowed to be raised after settlement of issues merely by reason of the fact that the ground of objection was not known to the defendant at or before the

- |                        |                             |
|------------------------|-----------------------------|
| 1. Scope of the Order. | 3. Subjects in dispute.     |
| 2. Scope of the Rule.  | 4. "As far as practicable." |

1. Scope of the Order. — The provisions of this Order dealing with the frame of suits should be so construed as not to conflict with the provisions contained in O. 1, which deal with the joinder of parties to suits, on the well-known principle that a statute should be construed as a whole.<sup>1</sup>

2. Scope of the Rule. — The object of this rule is, that all matters in dispute between the parties and relating to the same transaction should as far as possible be disposed of in the same suit.<sup>1</sup> The penalty for non-compliance with the rule is provided partly by Section 11, Explanation IV and partly by O. 2 R. 2.<sup>2</sup>

Section 11, Explanation IV provides that any matter which might and ought to have been made a ground of attack or of defence in a former suit will be deemed to have been a matter directly and substantially in issue in such suit and will not be allowed to be re-opened in a subsequent suit between the same parties although it was not actually adjudicated upon in the former suit. O. 2 R. 2 provides that every suit should include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the same cause of action, and that if he omits to include any portion of such claim he shall not be entitled to sue again in respect of it.

This rule has reference mainly, if not exclusively, to correct joinder of causes of action, adequate inclusion of reliefs claimed, and so forth, rather than to joinder of parties.<sup>3</sup>

3. Subjects in dispute. — The expression "subjects in dispute" has nowhere been defined in the Code and the decisions bearing on the question are not always reconcilable. But an examination of these decisions leads on the whole to the view that the expression "subjects in dispute" refers to the right claimed by one party against the other with reference to a particular legal relation or transaction between the parties. In other words, the words mean "the cause of action or the subject-matter of litigation, that is, the right which one party claims as against the other, and demands the judgment of the Court upon."<sup>1</sup> Applying this construction, the present rule requires the plaintiff to bring forward his whole case as to the particular legal relation or transaction on which his suit is based but does not require him to raise in the same suit matters pertaining to a different legal relation or transaction, although such matters may have a bearing on the right claimed by the plaintiff.

Thus, where A sues B to recover certain property on the ground that he had acquired a title to the property by adverse possession and he fails to prove his claim, he cannot sue again to recover the same property on the ground of his general title.<sup>2</sup> The reason is that where a plaintiff sues as owner he should bring before the Court in the same suit all the grounds of attack available to him with reference to his claim for ownership.<sup>3</sup>

But suppose X sues Y to recover certain lands on the ground that Y held them as lessee under X and that the lease had expired. X fails to prove the lease and sues again for the recovery of the same lands on the strength of his general title. The second suit is not barred because the legal relationship between the parties in the second suit is different from that in the first.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, a person suing to redeem a specific mortgage of a certain property is not debarred, upon his failure to prove the mortgage from suing to redeem another specific mortgage on the same property, because the transactions between the parties on which the suits are based are different.<sup>5</sup>

The following are some more examples of cases bearing on this branch of the subject —

- (1) As a general rule, a suit for partition should embrace the whole partible property belonging to the parties.<sup>6</sup> (But this rule is subject to various

- (5) A suit to enforce, or to redeem a mortgage partially is, as a rule, not maintainable.<sup>13</sup> In a suit by the vendee to recover possession of the property from the vendor, the equity in favour of the vendor arising on account of the non-payment of the whole or part of the purchase money may also be enforced.<sup>14</sup>
- (6) Although in a suit on the mortgage, full accounts should be taken between the mortgagor and the mortgagee, the mortgagor is not entitled to claim an account, of an entirely independent transaction.<sup>15</sup> Where in proceedings under Section 145 of the Criminal Procedure Code, the property is placed in the possession of a receiver, and a civil suit is brought for the determination of the rights of the rival claimants, the right of the successful claimant to obtain possession from the receiver is not a "subject in dispute" in the suit, and hence the suit need not include a prayer for possession.<sup>16</sup>

(1) The word "relief" in paragraph 3 has been substituted for the word "remedy" in the old Section.

(2) The words "obtained before the first hearing" which occurred in the old Section have been omitted.

(3) The expression "successive claims arising under the same obligation" has been added in the Explanation.

(4) The illustration has been redrafted so as to cover a case of rent due for a period subsequent to that for which the suit was instituted.

2. Scope and object of the Rule. — Order 2 Rule 2 is based on the principle that the defendant should not be twice vexed for one and the same cause.<sup>1</sup> This rule merely deprives the claimant of his remedy and does not vest any right in any of the defendants.<sup>2</sup> The rule is directed against two evils, the splitting of claims and the splitting of remedies.<sup>3</sup> It provides that if a plaintiff omits any portion of the claim which he is entitled to make or any of the remedies which he is entitled to claim in respect of the cause of action for his suit, he shall not thereafter sue for the portion of the claim or for the remedy so omitted.<sup>4</sup> It follows from this, that the rule does not preclude a second suit based on a distinct and separate cause of action.<sup>5</sup> (See Note 23 below.)

[See ('10) 6 Ind Cas 226 (227) (All).]

5. ('83) AIR 1983 Lah 542 (542).

The rule has reference to the subject-matter of the claim and not to the persons against whom it may be made.<sup>6</sup> Hence, an objection on the ground of nonjoinder of parties is not within the rule. (See Note 21 below.) It is not open to parties by agreement between themselves to override the rule laid down by the Legislature, as regards the splitting of causes of action.<sup>7</sup> The rule being penal in its nature should be construed strictly.<sup>8</sup>

It has been held that Section 141 ante does not apply to an application for restitution. This rule, therefore, does not apply to an application for restitution. Hence, an application for restoration of possession by way of restitution does not bar an application for mesne profits.<sup>9</sup> (See also Note 31, infra.)

3. Distinction between this Rule and Explanation IV to Section 11. — See Note 2 to Section 11, ante.

4. Suit to include the whole of the claim in respect of the cause of action. — Sub-rule 1 provides that every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action, on which the suit is based. But under sub-rule 3 where the plaintiff is entitled to several reliefs, he may sue for one or more of such reliefs, and reserve his right, with the leave of the Court, to sue later on for the other reliefs. A is entitled to recover from B Rs. 15,505 personally, as well as from out of B's properties on which the amount is charged. A sues for Rs. 4,000 only out of the claim for Rs. 15,505, and subsequently sues for the balance. The subsequent suit is barred inasmuch as the whole claim, namely for the recovery of Rs. 15,505, cannot be split up.<sup>1</sup> Suppose now that A sues for the recovery of the whole of Rs. 15,505 personally from B, and later on brings a fresh suit for sale of the properties charged. This he can do, inasmuch as in this case there is no splitting of claim, but only of remedies, which a mortgagee is entitled to do.

See the undermentioned decision.<sup>2</sup>

5. Plaintiff must have been aware of the claim. — In order that the bar contained in O. 2 R. 2 may apply, the plaintiff must have been aware, at the time of his first suit, of his right to the portion omitted by him or of the facts which would have entitled him to sue for it.<sup>1</sup> If he was so aware of his right, the fact that omission

6. Court must have jurisdiction to try the claim. — The bar of O. 2 R. 2 does not apply unless the Court which tried the former suit had jurisdiction to try the claim omitted by the plaintiff.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where the prior suit was in a Revenue Court, and the later suit was in a Civil Court in respect of a claim not triable by the Revenue Court, the later suit is not barred under this rule.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where the addition of the claim would offend the provisions of O. 2 R. 4 or R. 5, it may be omitted, and subsequently sued on.<sup>3</sup> So also, where the sanction of the Government<sup>4</sup> or a certificate under the Pensions Act<sup>5</sup> was a necessary condition to the entertainment of the suit and such condition was wanting in the former case, a subsequent suit is not barred.

But the fact that the addition of a relief would have deprived the Court of jurisdiction to try the suit as distinguished from the particular claim omitted, does not affect the applicability of the rule.<sup>6</sup>

7. "Same cause of action." — For a full discussion as to the meaning of the expression "cause of action," see Section 20 Notes 14 to 30. See also the under-mentioned case.<sup>1</sup>

The expression "cause of action" in this rule means the cause of action for which the suit was brought.<sup>2</sup> A rough test, although not a conclusive one, as to whether the cause of action in a subsequent suit is the same as that in the former suit, is to see whether the same evidence will sustain both suits<sup>3</sup> and regard should be had to the allegations in the two suits and not the facts found by the Court in the former suit.<sup>4</sup> The question is, however, one of substance rather than of form<sup>5</sup> and the causes in the two suits may be the same though the facts alleged may not be exactly identical in the two cases.<sup>6</sup> It is not open to the plaintiff to split up the parts really constituting the same cause of action and file different suits in respect of them.<sup>7</sup>

Where a plaintiff's first suit is based on facts which entitle him to be the sole heir of a deceased person and his second suit is also based on such facts, the mere fact that in the first suit the plaintiff (erroneously) claims only the position of one of the heirs of the deceased and that in the later suit he claims to be the sole heir does not make the causes of action different.<sup>8</sup>

9. Successive claims arising under the same obligation. — Under the Explanation to the rule, successive claims arising under the same obligation constitute a single cause of action. Thus, in the case of suits on instalment bonds the plaintiff should claim the amount of all the instalments in arrears at the same time. Otherwise he will be barred from suing for the instalments omitted to be so claimed.<sup>1</sup> So also where rent for several successive years is in arrears, but the plaintiff sues only for the rent of some years, and omits to sue for the rents due and in arrears for the years previous to or subsequent to the year of his suit, he cannot subsequently sue for such omitted rents.<sup>2</sup> The same rule holds good in the case of suits for royalty,<sup>3</sup> profits,<sup>4</sup> annuity,<sup>5</sup> etc.

But where a lessee undertakes to pay a portion of the rent reserved, to the lessor's superior landlord, and fails to do so with the result that the lessor has to pay the superior landlord, the lessor may sue separately for that portion of the rent treating it as damages for breach of covenant by the lessee.<sup>6</sup> The reason is that in such a case the causes of action for the two suits are different. For other instances where the lessor can bring several suits, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>7</sup>

But though the rule bars a fresh suit in respect of one of several successive claims arising under the same obligation, not included in the former suit, it does not prevent the plaintiff from taking any other remedy which he may have for its recovery. Thus, where rent was due for the years 1905, 1906 and 1907 and the former suit was for the rent of 1905 only, the plaintiff cannot sue for the rents of the years 1906 and 1907 but can distrain for the rent due for those years, under the rent laws.<sup>8</sup>

10. Omission to sue in respect of a portion of a claim. — The penalty for the omission to sue for the whole claim is that the plaintiff shall not afterwards sue for the portion so omitted.<sup>1</sup> The plaintiff cannot avoid the bar by expressly stating in his plaint in the previous suit that he reserves his right to sue for the omitted portion of the claim.<sup>2</sup> Nor can he avoid it by obtaining the leave of the Court to sue in respect of the portion of the claim omitted, inasmuch as the only leave that can be granted by the Court is to sue for one of several reliefs under sub-rule 3 of the rule.<sup>3</sup>

The rule refers to the cases where a suit has been filed and the plaintiff has omitted therein to sue for a portion of the claim.<sup>4</sup> It has no application where no suit is filed at all as where the plaint has been returned for presentation to the proper Court, or where the suit is filed and is withdrawn under O. 23 R. 1.<sup>5</sup>

The words 'any portion of his claim' refer not only to the physical quantum claimed by a plaintiff but also to the interest claimed by him; so that where a plaintiff who is entitled to a larger interest in the property claims only a smaller interest therein, the bar under this rule will apply.<sup>6</sup>

Suits were filed on different dates in the Civil Court for arrears of rent for different periods. The plaints in all the suits were returned for presentation to the Revenue Court. The plaints were re-presented to the Revenue Court on the same day. It was contended that as the date of presentation in the Revenue Court is the date of the institution of the suit in that Court, the plaint must comprise a claim for all arrears of rent up to the date of the presentation in the Revenue Court and as the plaintiff had not presented in the Revenue Court any plaint including all the arrears up to the date of presentation, one or the other of the suits must be held to be barred under this rule. It was held, overruling the contention, that in the circumstances of the case all the plaints must be taken together and treated as one document and that the fact that the Court numbered the suits separately or that the plaintiff omitted to ask the Court to treat them as one suit and give it one number did not amount to an omission to sue or a relinquishment of any portion of the claim within the meaning of this rule.<sup>7</sup>

As to the meaning of the words "he shall not afterwards sue," see Note 27 below.

Suits for breaches of contract. — Where the plaintiff in a suit for damages for breach of contract omits to claim a portion of the damages due to him, he cannot subsequently sue for such portion<sup>8</sup> although the omitted portion may relate to a different stipulation in the contract.<sup>9</sup> But where the covenants although contained in the same contract create distinct obligations, the breach of each of them will give rise to a distinct cause of action.<sup>10</sup> A person enters into a contract of service with another for, say a year, but before the expiry of the year, wrongfully dismisses the servant. In such a case the servant's suit for damages for breach of contract should include the payment due to him for the whole year. It is not open to him to split his claim into twelve monthly instalments and sue for each of them separately.<sup>11</sup> Similarly, where the defendant commits breach of a contract of sale of goods by refusing to accept a portion of the goods contracted to be purchased by him, and also by refusing to pay for the goods accepted, there is only one cause of action. The plaintiff cannot split it up and sue separately for the price of the goods accepted by the defendant, and for damages for the non-acceptance of the other goods.<sup>12</sup>

A contrary view, however, was taken by Garth, C. J., in the undermentioned case.<sup>13</sup> According to the learned Chief Justice a claim for the price of goods sold is essentially a claim for debt and is therefore a cause of action of a different nature from a claim for compensation for not accepting goods which is essentially a claim for damages. But, Wilson, J., who sat with him in that case held that there was only one cause of action in such circumstances and his view was approved of in I. L. R. 19 Calcutta 372 (F. B.).

Prima facie each separate order and delivery of goods constitute a separate cause of action.<sup>14</sup> But if all the goods were to be delivered under a single contract, then it would be a case of successive claims arising under the same obligation within the Explanation to O. 2 R. 2 and there would be only one cause of action.<sup>15</sup> But where the parties expressly provide in the indent that each monthly shipment should be treated as a separate contract, there would be a separate cause of action in respect of each monthly shipment.<sup>16</sup>

This is so even though the plaintiff<sup>18</sup> or the defendant<sup>19</sup> may claim the properties under different titles. Thus, a suit by a reversioner on the death of a Hindu widow to recover properties improperly alienated by her must include all the items alienated by the widow.<sup>20</sup> Similarly, a suit by a coparcener attacking the mortgage of certain coparcenary properties is a bar to a similar suit in respect of another property included in the same mortgage.<sup>21</sup>

Suit for rent. — A suit for rent must include the whole amount due to the plaintiff as rent.<sup>22</sup> Thus, though there may be separate muchilikas for each fasli, and the rent for a particular fasli is thus payable under the particular muchilika, yet, non-payment of rent by the tenant at a particular time is but one cause of action as far as the landlord is concerned.<sup>23</sup>

hence the payee sued on the original cause of action. But in so suing, he sued only for such of the instalments as were due on the date of the suit, and obtained a decree. He subsequently sued for the remaining instalments. This subsequent suit was held by Spankie, J., to be barred by Section 43 (O. 2 R. 2), while Oldfield, J., held it was not so barred.

Several transactions may give rise to one cause of action, if they form one continuous course of dealing or form parts of one transaction. Thus, even where there are different contracts, yet if they form part of one transaction a breach of all such contracts is only one cause of action.<sup>29</sup> This is because the expression "cause of action" might include claims upon several contracts provided they form part of a continuous course of dealing. When a tradesman has a bill against a party for any amount in which the items are so connected together that it appears that the dealing is not intended to terminate with one contract, but to be continuous, so that one item if not paid shall be united with another and form one continuous demand, the whole together forms but one cause of action and cannot be divided.<sup>30</sup>

Where in a suit for accounts the defendant says that on a taking of accounts he will be found entitled to get some amount but does not specify such amount, or pay court-fee thereon, he cannot be deemed under O. 2 R. 2 to have waived his right for such amount.<sup>31</sup>

Suits on mortgages. — A mortgagor suing for redemption and failing to claim recovery of a portion of the property cannot sue again for it.<sup>32</sup> A puisne mortgagee who pays off a prior mortgage must include in the suit on his mortgage any further claim he may have by reason of such payment.<sup>33</sup> As to the question whether a person holding successive mortgages on the same property is bound under this rule to sue in respect of all the mortgages, see Note 40 to Section 11 ante. A mortgagee holding a separate money bond against the mortgagor is not bound to enforce the money bond, along with the mortgage.<sup>34</sup>

First suit for interest on a mortgage, and second suit for the principal. — Where there is a single obligation to pay the interest and the principal under a mortgage, a suit for interest alone when the principal also has become due will bar a subsequent suit for the principal.<sup>35</sup> But where there is an independent obligation to pay interest, a prior suit for interest on the basis of such obligation is no bar to a later suit on the mortgage although at the time of the prior suit the principal sum had

Mortgage bonds providing that on default in paying interest or instalments of principal at the stipulated time, the whole amount should become payable at once — Default occurring — Maintainability of separate suits for unpaid interest or instalments, and for balance of mortgage money.

(1) A mortgage bond provides that on default in paying the interest at the stipulated time, the mortgagee would be entitled to claim the mortgage money at once without waiting for the expiry of the term fixed for the redemption of the mortgage. The mortgagor next defaults in paying interest according to stipulation but the mortgagee thereafter sues only for the arrears of interest. Can he sue again for the principal money?

(2) A mortgage bond provides that the mortgage money should be paid in certain instalments but that if there is a default with regard to any instalment, the whole of the unpaid amount would be claimable at once. Default occurs, but the mortgagee sues only for the unpaid instalments. Can he sue again for the balance?

The question in both the above cases is the same, viz., whether the mortgagee has in such a case the option of waiving the benefit of the default clause. On this question there was a conflict of judicial opinion. It was held by the High Court of Madras<sup>38</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>39</sup> that in such a case the mortgagee had an option of waiving the privilege accorded to him by the default clause and that a suit by him for the interest or instalments in arrears, as the case may be, would not bar a subsequent suit for the mortgage money. But a contrary view was taken in Bombay,<sup>40</sup> Lahore<sup>41</sup> and Oudh.<sup>42</sup>

In this connection two decisions of the Judicial Committee have to be noticed.<sup>43</sup> In these two cases it was held that a second suit for the principal after the first suit for interest alone was barred under O. 2 R. 2. But these two cases were distinguished in the undermentioned Madras cases<sup>44</sup> on the ground that in both of them the first suit for interest was instituted after the expiry of the mortgage term.

Note 10

An opinion has been expressed by Ramesam, J., that in cases where terms such as "when you require," "when required," "if you choose," etc., are used, the mortgagee may be held to have an option of the kind referred to above.<sup>45</sup> It was also held in the undermentioned case<sup>46</sup> that the use of the expression "when required by you," clearly made a demand necessary for the cause of action to arise to sue for the entire amount. But it was also held in that case that apart from this consideration, the mortgagee had an option to sue for the principal or interest alone in such a case. This view was adopted by Venkatasubba Rao, J., in a later case<sup>47</sup> who also held that the absence of such words in the mortgage bond did not affect the question. But if the prior suit was based on an obligation independent of that upon which the later suit is based, then the later suit will not be barred. This would be the case where, apart from the mortgage, there is an independent personal obligation to pay the debt<sup>48</sup> or the interest thereon<sup>49</sup> and the prior suit for interest is based on such personal obligation and the later suit on the mortgage.<sup>50</sup> In such a case, though there may be a default clause in the mortgage deed providing that on the default being made in payment of interest the whole mortgage amount should become due and though the default may have occurred at the time of the prior suit, the prior suit on the personal obligation will not bar the later suit on the mortgage.

The conflict above referred to has now been set at rest by the Privy Council in Lasa Din v. Mt. Gulab Kunwar, A. I. R. 1932 Privy Council 207. Referring to clauses in mortgage deeds providing for the mortgage amount becoming payable on default in payment of instalments, their Lordships say :

"There can be no doubt that as pointed out by Lord Blanesburgh (in A. I. R. 1926 Privy Council 85), a proviso of this nature is inserted in a mortgage deed 'exclusively for the benefit of the mortgagees' and that it purports to give them an option either to enforce their security at once, or if the security is ample to stand by their investment for the full term of the mortgage."

Thus, the Madras view is upheld and the money will "become due" on default only if the "mortgagee exercised the option reserved to him."

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>51</sup>

If the default clause provides that on default in payment of interest at the due time the mortgagee should be entitled to sell the properties for principal and interest, out of Court, and default occurs, but the mortgagee sues for interest alone, a subsequent suit for the principal is not barred. The reason is that the default did not entitle the mortgagee to sue for the mortgage money but only to have the properties sold out of Court.<sup>52</sup>

In the undermentioned case<sup>53</sup> the Allahabad High Court held that where a creditor has an option either to sue for the whole amount or to sue for the instalments only, and he sues only for the instalments, a second suit by him when further instalments fall due will not be barred under this rule. The decision proceeds on the ground that in such a case, on the creditor exercising his option of suing for the arrears of instalments alone, he has no cause of action to sue for the balance and therefore, there is no omission by him of any portion of the claim which he is entitled to make in respect of the cause of action. But the Rangoon High Court held in the undermentioned case<sup>54</sup> that where an instalment bond provided that on default occurring, the creditor should be at liberty to sue for the whole, the provision was only intended for the benefit of the debtor and the creditor had no option, in case of default, of suing for the arrears of instalments alone and that if he failed to sue for the balance of the money, as he was entitled to do under the bond, he would be precluded from doing so subsequently under this rule.

First suit for interest under a mortgage, second suit for possession. — A mortgage deed provides that on default in the payment of interest on the due date, the mortgagee should be entitled to take possession of the mortgaged property. Default occurring, the mortgagee sues only for interest. On fresh default occurring he sues for possession. Is the suit maintainable? The answer to this question seems to depend on whether on the first default the mortgagee was entitled to sue both for interest and possession or whether he was entitled to sue either for interest or possession. In the former case the plaintiff is bound to claim both the reliefs on pain of his second suit for possession being barred.<sup>55</sup> In the latter case the second suit will not be barred.<sup>56</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>57</sup>

Lease to mortgagor by mortgagee with possession — First suit for rent, second suit for principal. — A mortgages his land with possession to B and as part of the same transaction B leases the land to A. In such a case, the lease forms in reality only an arrangement for the payment of interest. Hence, where after the principal money has become due, the mortgagee sues for rent alone, he cannot sue again for the principal.<sup>58</sup> But separate suits will lie where the lease and the mortgage constitute distinct and separate transactions.<sup>59</sup>

Partition suits. — A suit for partition of joint property must include the whole of the properties jointly held by the parties.<sup>60</sup> Where the suit does not comply with this rule, the penalty is not the dismissal of the suit but the bar of a fresh suit for the partition of the omitted items.<sup>61</sup> For instances of cases where such a subsequent suit has been entertained, see the decisions cited below.<sup>62</sup> The following are the exceptions to the rule that such a suit would be barred —

- (1) Where at the time of the previous suit the omitted portion was not available for partition at that time,<sup>63</sup> as for instance where it was in possession of a usufructuary mortgagee.<sup>64</sup>
- (2) Where the omitted properties were in a different district.<sup>65</sup> The better view seems to be that even in such cases the bar of O. 2 R. 2 applies, as, under the present Code, there is no objection to the plaintiff bringing a single suit in such a case.<sup>66</sup>
- (3) Where the omission in the previous suit was due to ignorance of existence of the omitted items.<sup>67</sup>

A suit for partition of property held jointly by a Hindu family does not bar a suit for partition of property held by the family jointly with strangers, as the causes of action for the two suits are distinct.<sup>68</sup>

Where the alienee of a share of joint family property sues for partition, he must sue for general partition.<sup>69</sup> But in 14 Indian Cases 524 it was held that an alienee's suit for partial partition is not liable to be dismissed solely for that reason but that the defendant coparceners can claim that there should be a general partition. Further, the defendant can always in such a suit insist that the suit must be for general partition.<sup>70</sup>

Where the plaintiff acquired the shares of two out of five members of a joint family by two separate sale-deeds, it was held that his cause of action on both the sale-deeds was one, i. e., the right to sue the coparceners for partition, and he cannot maintain two actions one on each sale-deed.<sup>71</sup> For examples of suits for partition

12. Intentional relinquishment. — Sub-rule 1 of this rule provides that a plaintiff may relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring his suit within the jurisdiction of a particular Court. That means that in bringing the suit he can, in his plaint, relinquish any portion of his claim in order to bring it within the jurisdiction of a particular Court; if the suit is once instituted in a Court having no jurisdiction to grant the relief prayed for, the only order that the Court can pass is to return the plaint under the provisions of O. 7 R. 10, and not to allow the amendment of the plaint by relinquishment of reliefs, inasmuch as to allow such amendment will be to deal with a suit over which the Court has no jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup>

Where the plaintiff intentionally relinquishes any portion of his claim, he cannot subsequently bring a fresh suit in respect of it.<sup>2</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>3</sup>

13. Suit to include all reliefs in respect of the same cause of action. — Sub-rule 3 provides that where a plaintiff is entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action, he may sue for all the reliefs or he may sue for one or more of them reserving, with the leave of the Court, his right to sue for the rest.

As to the effect of the omission to sue for all the reliefs, see Note 14 below.

14. Omission to sue for all reliefs. — If a plaintiff omits, without the leave of the Court, to sue for any of the reliefs which he is entitled to claim in respect of the cause of action, he shall not afterwards sue for the relief so omitted by him.<sup>1</sup> The mere fact that reliefs are claimable in the alternative will not prevent the applicability of this rule.<sup>2</sup> There are, however, exceptions to this rule :

(2) By virtue of the special provisions of O. 34 R. 14, where a mortgagee has asked for and obtained only a personal decree against the mortgagor for the mortgage amount, he may, notwithstanding O. 2 R. 2, subsequently institute a suit for sale in enforcement of the mortgage.<sup>4</sup>

(3) Under the special provisions of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act, 1879, Section 15D, (inserted by Act XXII of 1882) the mortgagor can sue his mortgagee first for an account and subsequently for redemption.<sup>5</sup>

The rule only applies where the plaintiff is entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action, but omits to sue for all such reliefs. This implies that the first suit is one for a relief to which the plaintiff is entitled. Hence a plaintiff who sues for a relief to which he is not entitled is not debarred from suing for a relief to which he is entitled.<sup>6</sup> have, on the other hand, held that the causes of action for the two suits are different and the second suit is therefore not barred. See also the case cited below.<sup>6</sup> But in a recent case<sup>7</sup> the Allahabad High Court has held that where under a contract of lease of this kind the lessor first sues for rent, and subsequently for ejectment, the latter suit is barred under Order 2 Rule 2.

15. Suits for possession and rent. — Where, under a contract of lease, A, the lessee, is bound to pay the rent at the stated periods, and on default, to deliver up possession to the lessor B, and on such default occurring, B sues A for possession first and then brings a subsequent suit for rent, is the latter suit barred? The answer to this depends upon the question whether the two suits are treated as being based on the same, or on different causes of action. It has been held by the High Court of Bombay that there is one cause of action for both the suits and that therefore the second suit is barred.<sup>1</sup> The High Courts of Allahabad,<sup>2</sup> Lahore,<sup>3</sup> Madras<sup>4</sup> and Rangoon<sup>5</sup>

16. Suits for specific performance and other reliefs. — Where A sues B for specific performance of an agreement to sell, and subsequently on the basis of the same agreement sues for possession, the suit is barred under this rule inasmuch as the reliefs in both flow from the same cause of action.<sup>1</sup> But where the subsequent suit is based on the conveyance obtained in pursuance of the decree in the first suit, the cause of action is different, and the suit is not barred.<sup>2</sup> Where A first sues for possession and later on for specific performance, both being based on the same agreement, the latter suit is barred.<sup>3</sup>

A first agrees to sell his property to B, and then agrees to sell the same to C. Thereupon, B sues A for an injunction restraining A from executing a sale deed to C. The suit is dismissed on the ground that a suit for a permanent injunction does not lie. B then sues A for specific performance of his agreement. The suit is not barred.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that in such a case the plaintiff is not "entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action" as required by this rule.

17. Partition suits. — A partition suit should, as has been seen in Note 10 ante, include the entire divisible property of the parties. Similarly, a plaintiff who omits to ask for any relief which he could have claimed in a suit for partition cannot bring a separate suit for such relief. Thus, matters such as a charge of negligence against the manager should be dealt with when accounts are taken in the partition suit and not by separate suit.<sup>1</sup>

But a suit for damages for use and occupation during the period the partition suit was pending is based on a different cause of action<sup>2</sup> as also a suit on a promissory note executed by one member of a joint Hindu family in favour of another.<sup>3</sup>

18. Mortgage suits. — Ordinarily a suit on a mortgage bond should be for the whole amount due under the mortgage to avoid multiplicity of suits and neither the mortgage money, nor the security can be split up without the consent of the parties or permission of the Court.<sup>1</sup>

In a suit for redemption, all claims between mortgagor and mortgagee should be settled, and a separate suit for excess profits received by the mortgagee cannot be brought even though such profits may accrue after the institution of the suit.<sup>2</sup> But a separate suit is maintainable for the mesne profits accruing after the date of payment under the preliminary decree.<sup>3</sup> There is, however, one case in which it has been held that the plaintiff is bound to claim mesne profits up to delivery of possession<sup>4</sup> while, on the other hand, there is a decision to the effect that a separate suit lies for mesne profits accruing after the decree.<sup>5</sup>

Where a usufructuary mortgagee being deprived of possession, sues for possession alone, and fails to pray in the alternative for the return of the mortgage money, under Section 68, Transfer of Property Act, he cannot, on his suit for possession being dismissed, sue for the mortgage money.<sup>6</sup>

But where the two suits are based on distinct causes of action, the second suit will not be barred although the claim to relief may arise out of the same mortgage.<sup>7</sup>

Leave of Court. — Under sub-rule 3, where a plaintiff is entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action but omits to ask for some of them, he shall not, except where the omission has been with the permission of the Court, sue again for them.<sup>1</sup> The leave need not be express but may be inferred from the circumstances of the case.<sup>2</sup> The competence of the Court to grant leave is not affected by the value of the relief sought to be omitted.<sup>3</sup> But, as has been seen in Note 10 ante, its power is confined to reliefs only and does not extend to allowing a splitting up of claims.<sup>4</sup> of the first. The High Court of Allahabad<sup>3</sup> and the Oudh Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>3</sup> have taken a contrary view. There is also a conflict of opinion as to the maintainability of a separate suit for mesne profits accruing after the institution of a prior suit for possession, some cases being in favour of the maintainability of such a suit<sup>4</sup> and others against it.<sup>5</sup> But where the claims for possession and mesne profits are based on the same allegations of facts, the reliefs cannot be split up.<sup>6</sup>

Though a suit for possession and a suit for mesne profits may be treated as being based on distinct causes of action, a claim for mesne profits cannot itself be split up; the plaintiff should include the whole of the mesne profits accrued due at the time of the suit.<sup>7</sup>

It has been held in the undermentioned cases that a suit for mesne profits is no bar to a subsequent suit for possession.<sup>8</sup> The contrary view has been taken in the cases cited below.<sup>9</sup>

26. Other Examples. —

(1) A sues B for declaration of his title and for injunction restraining B from interfering with A's possession. The suit is dismissed as A is found not to be in possession. A then sues B for declaration and possession. The suit is not barred.<sup>1</sup>

(2) A sues B for declaration of his right to certain land. The suit is dismissed on the ground that A might and ought to have sued for possession also. Then he sues B for possession. The suit is not barred as the causes of action for the two suits are not the same.<sup>2</sup>

(3) The dismissal of a suit for specific performance of an agreement to transfer land is no bar to a suit for the return of the consideration money.<sup>3</sup>

O. 2 R. 2
Notes 27-31

The bar of the rule applies only to a later suit. It does not apply to any other remedy open to the plaintiff.<sup>5</sup> Thus, a landlord who is precluded by the rule from suing for the rent of any particular year can enforce the summary process of distrain provided for by the Madras Rent Recovery Act.<sup>6</sup>

The burden of establishing a bar of the suit under this rule is on the defendant,<sup>7</sup> and the Court is not bound to take up the point proprio motu.<sup>8</sup> Further, the objection under the rule should be treated as a preliminary point and the defendant cannot raise it for the first time in appeal except on terms which would indemnify the other side for the omission to take it at the proper time.<sup>9</sup>

28. Set-off. — A defendant who claims a set-off under O. 8 R. 6 is in the position of the plaintiff [vide O. 8 R. 6 (2)] and if he omits any portion of the claim he is entitled to make by way of set-off, he cannot subsequently sue in respect of it.<sup>1</sup>

29. Plea in defence not barred. — The rule precludes only a subsequent suit. It does not bar a plea in defence.<sup>1</sup>

30. Insolvency proceedings, not suits. — The rule, as has been seen already, merely bars a fresh suit on the same cause of action. It does not enable the Official Assignee to apply to the Insolvency Court for a declaration that the right of a certain creditor of the insolvent to sue for a certain debt is barred under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

31. Execution Proceedings. — Order 2 Rule 2 does not apply to execution proceedings.<sup>1</sup> (See Notes under Section 141, Civil Procedure Code.) Thus, where a decree grants different reliefs, as for example, possession of land and mesne profits, the decree may be executed by means of separate and successive applications in respect of each relief.<sup>2</sup>

The rules applicable to proceedings in execution are applicable to proceedings for restitution also, and hence, this rule does not apply to such proceedings.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 2, ante.

But where a particular sum of money is due under the decree and the decree-holder fails, in his application for execution, to claim the whole amount, he cannot, on general principles of res judicata, be allowed to apply again for the balance of the amount so omitted in the first application.<sup>4</sup> It has however been held by the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur that where the judgment-debtor does not raise objection to a partial execution of a decree, he cannot be heard to say later on that a subsequent application for the execution of the rest of the decree does not lie.<sup>5</sup>

32. Proceedings under Paragraph 20 of Schedule II of the Code. — The rule does not apply to an application to file an award under Schedule II, Paragraph 20 of the Code. Hence, the failure to ask for possession in such an application does not preclude a separate suit for possession.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where only one matter arising out of a dispute is referred to arbitration, a separate suit in respect of other matters arising from the same dispute is not barred.<sup>2</sup>

But the privilege of abandoning a portion of his claim to bring his suit within the jurisdiction of any Court applies also to an applicant for the filing of an award.<sup>3</sup>

33. Application to sue in forma pauperis. — An application to sue in forma pauperis becomes a suit only after it has been accepted. Hence, where it has been rejected it does not amount to a suit and therefore the provisions of this rule do not apply to it.<sup>1</sup>

34. Exceptions to the rule as to the splitting up of claims. — See Note 14, ante.

35. Amendment of plaint. — The bar of suit under this rule applies only where a decree has been passed in the previous suit. The rule does not preclude the amendment of plaint by the addition of the claim which had been omitted.<sup>1</sup>

36. Revenue and Village Courts. — The rule has been held to apply to proceedings in the Revenue Court for the recovery of the rent.<sup>1</sup> But proceedings in the Revenue Court for partition are not "suits" and the rule does not consequently apply to them.<sup>2</sup>

The provisions of the Civil Procedure Code are not applicable to Village Munsif's Courts and hence this rule does not apply to a suit brought in such Courts.<sup>3</sup>

R. 3. [S. 45, Paras. 1 and 3.] (1) Save as otherwise provided,<sup>2</sup> a plaintiff may unite in the same suit several causes of action<sup>3</sup> against the same defendant,<sup>6</sup> or the same defendants jointly;<sup>7</sup> and any plaintiffs having causes of action in which they are jointly interested against the same defendant<sup>10</sup> or the same defendants jointly<sup>12</sup> may unite such causes of action in the same suit.

1. Scope of the Rule. — Order 1 relates to parties to suits. Order 2 relates to frame of suits. But the two Orders cannot be treated as relating to two distinct topics. The question of parties involves that of a cause of action, and vice versa. A person is made a party because there is a cause of action against him, and when causes of action are joined, parties are joined.<sup>1</sup> This rule must, therefore, be read with O. 1 Rr. 1 and 3.<sup>2</sup> The Legislature, has in fact, effected a compromise of two fundamental principles by means of the rules, embodied in Orders 1 and 2, first, that needless multiplicity of suits should be avoided and secondly, that the trial of suits should not be embarrassed by simultaneous investigation of totally unconnected controversies.<sup>3</sup> The rules in Orders 1 and 2 may thus overlap to some extent in their application to concrete cases.<sup>4</sup> A plaintiff may not only join different causes of action against the same defendant or the same defendants as provided in this rule but he may also join different causes of action against different defendants if he is able to bring his case within the purview of O. 1 R. 3.<sup>5</sup>

The fact that several causes of action have been properly joined under this rule does not prevent the Court, whenever necessary, from holding separate trials of the different issues that may arise in the suit.<sup>6</sup>

The question of misjoinder must be decided on the allegations in the plaint and not on what is found to be correct ultimately.<sup>7</sup>

2. "Save as otherwise provided." — This rule is to be applied subject to any provisions of law to the contrary, such as Rules 4 and 5 of this Order,<sup>1</sup> or the provisions of the Agra Tenancy Act which enacts that a joinder of several causes of action against the same defendant in a rent suit is not competent.<sup>2</sup> This rule is also subject to the general principles of pleading, and a plaintiff cannot, on the authority of this rule, claim on alternative titles which arise out of inconsistent facts, though he may claim even on inconsistent titles.<sup>3</sup>

3. The Rule presupposes several causes of action. — This rule enables the joinder of several causes of action in one suit subject to certain restrictions.<sup>1</sup> It presupposes that there are several causes of action to be united in a single suit; so where there is really but a single cause of action no question of misjoinder arises.<sup>2</sup> A joinder of several reliefs is not a joinder of several causes of action, in a suit based on a single cause of action,<sup>3</sup> nor does an ancillary relief claimed in a suit amount to a distinct cause of action.<sup>4</sup>

See also Section 20 Note 20, "Cause of action".

4. Cause of action. — See Section 20 Notes 14 to 31.

5. Alternative reliefs. — Alternative reliefs may be claimed either on the same cause of action against different defendants or on different causes of action against the same defendant or defendants. The former class of cases is provided for in Order 1, Rule 3. The present rule deals with the latter class of cases.<sup>1</sup>

Though, in the case of several defendants, this rule uses the word "jointly" and does not use the word "in the alternative" found in O. 1 Rules 1 and 3, joinder of alternative causes of action will not be repugnant to this rule, provided in respect of each of the alternative causes of action, the several defendants are "jointly" interested.

6. One plaintiff, one defendant, several causes of action. — This rule authorises a plaintiff to unite several causes of action against a single defendant<sup>1</sup> subject, however, to the limitation that if all the causes of action cannot be moulded as to apply distributively to the separate holdings.)]

conveniently tried together, an order may be made directing separate trials of the same. But the joinder of numerous causes of action amounting to an abuse of the process of the Court is not contemplated by this rule.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where the plaintiffs joined in one action claims for infringement of 23 patents, Collins, M. R., said: "Prima facie a dozen causes of action cannot be combined in one writ; they must be so intimately connected as to justify their being included in one writ."<sup>3</sup>

A person who is made a defendant in different capacities is not the "same defendant" within the meaning of this rule.<sup>4</sup>

7. One plaintiff, two or more defendants — Causes of action joint against all the defendants. — It is a condition precedent to the applicability of the rule that the defendants must be jointly liable in respect of each and every one of the causes of action sought to be joined.<sup>1</sup> It is not, however, necessary, that each of such defendants should be interested in all the reliefs claimed provided they are interested jointly in the main questions raised in the litigation.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where two agents are jointly liable to render accounts, though not each for the same period of time,<sup>3</sup> or where several defendants are sued for refund of monies by each under a wrong order for rateable distribution,<sup>4</sup> there is no misjoinder.

Where there is only a single cause of action against several defendants there can be no misjoinder of causes of action. Thus, where A sues B and his mortgagee C for a declaration of his right to his share of the property and for possession thereof, the cause of action is the infringement of A's right by the mortgage and dispossession effected by B and C respectively, and consequently there is no misjoinder of defendants and causes of action.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, when A sells a certain property to B and thereafter in execution of a decree obtained by X against A the property is sold and purchased in portions by C, D and E, and B sues A, X, C, D and E to set aside the execution sale, the cause of action is only one against all the defendants and there is no misjoinder.<sup>6</sup>

Where possession is claimed against A and also against persons holding by derivative titles under A, the cause of action is a single one and there is no misjoinder.<sup>7</sup> Thus, where a reversioner sues to set aside the alienations by a Hindu widow in favour of several defendants, the suit is not bad for misjoinder<sup>8</sup> inasmuch as the plaintiff's cause of action against the alienees is the same as that against the alienor from whom they derive their title.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, where A leases certain lands to B and thereafter, ignoring the lease, again leases out the same in separate parcels to C and D and on that basis A, C and D dispossess B, a suit by B against A, C and D is not bad for misjoinder.<sup>10</sup> The position will be different where the defendants do not claim under the same trespasser<sup>11</sup> or where the unity of the cause of action is broken up by joining with it a cause of action on an alienation by a stranger.<sup>12</sup>

8. One plaintiff, separate causes of action against several defendants, (i.e.) misjoinder of defendants and causes of action. — A suit against several defendants for causes of action accrued against each of them separately and in respect of which they are not jointly liable is bad for misjoinder.<sup>1</sup>

"Such a joinder complicates the case before the Judge and renders it exceedingly difficult for him in dealing with the case of each defendant to exclude from his consideration those portions of the evidence which may not be admissible against him, though admissible against one or more of the others. Moreover, it is vexatious and harassing to the different defendants."<sup>2</sup>

In Seturatnam Aiyar v. Venkatachela Goundan,<sup>3</sup> where a single suit was filed to eject several tenants in possession of different parcels of the land of the plaintiff Sir Lawrence Jenkins, in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council, said :

"They (the defendants) are not in joint possession; on the contrary, they have separate holdings and should have been separately sued . . . . But the plaintiff, in disregard of the provisions of the Code, has united in the same suit not merely several causes of actions but several actions or suits against separate defendants with the result that the litigation has been conducted throughout as though the defendants were a community with common interests."

The principle underlying the said observation equally applies to suits for possession against several trespassers,<sup>4</sup> unless the trespass is committed jointly by all the defendants.<sup>5</sup>

Where the first defendant was the executant of a bond to the plaintiff and in a suit for the money due on the bond the other defendants were joined on the ground that they had colluded with the first defendant in taking assignments of his property to defraud the plaintiff, their Lordships of the Privy Council held that there was a misjoinder, as the plaintiff's cause of action for the money was only as against the first defendant and not as against the other defendants.<sup>6</sup>

In suits on contracts, strangers to the contract having distinct interests by themselves cannot be joined,<sup>7</sup> but if the third party is only a benamidar<sup>8</sup> or is otherwise liable in law for the contract,<sup>9</sup> there is no distinct interest. Where several defendants enter into contracts with the plaintiff but each is liable only for his transaction separately,<sup>10</sup> or where there is a separate cause of action against each of the several defendants,<sup>11</sup> a single suit against all of them is incompetent.

A cause of action arising out of a joint liability of some defendants cannot be united with another cause of action under a transaction in which one of them alone was concerned.<sup>12</sup> Nor can separate causes of action against separate sets of defendants be joined in one suit.<sup>13</sup>

In suits for partition no cause of action can be joined which has no bearing on the question of partition.<sup>14</sup>

Regarding suits for specific performance of contracts and suits for contribution, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>15</sup>

Though a suit may fall outside this rule by reason of joinder of distinct causes of action against different defendants, it may be supported by the terms of O. 1 R. 3, if the several causes of action are so connected with the same act or transaction as to give rise to a common question of law or fact at the trial.<sup>16</sup> See also Notes to Order 1 Rule 3.

Thus, where A and B combine together to assault C<sup>2</sup> or to keep him out of possession of certain lands,<sup>3</sup> a suit by C against A and B for damages for the assault or for declaration of his right to the property is maintainable. The view that the joinder will be bad if the conspiracy or common design is found against ultimately does not seem to be sound inasmuch as the question of misjoinder must be decided on the allegations made in the plaint. See Note 1, ante.

Notes 9-11

10. Two or more plaintiffs, one defendant — Plaintiffs jointly interested in the causes of action. — Where two or more plaintiffs are jointly interested in two or more causes of action against the same defendant, they can join all the causes of action in the same suit.<sup>1</sup> It is enough if the plaintiffs are jointly interested though not equally interested in the causes of action.<sup>2</sup> Conflicting or antagonistic interests among the plaintiffs cannot be joint interest.<sup>3</sup>

This rule has no application when the cause of action is a single one, because, in such a case, there is no question of any joinder of causes of action. In such cases, the several plaintiffs entitled to sue on the cause of action may join as plaintiffs in the same suit under O. 1 R. 1 ante.<sup>4</sup> As has been seen already in Note 8 above, this rule is subject to O. 1 R. 1 and therefore several plaintiffs may unite several causes of action in the same suit though they may not be jointly but severally interested in them all, provided their rights to relief arise out of the same act or transaction and a common question of fact or law arises for trial.<sup>5</sup>

Suppose A and B sue C for recovery of certain property. A bases his title on inheritance and B on purchase of a portion of the property from A. In such a case, is the cause of action one and the same for both the plaintiffs or distinct? On this question there is a conflict of decisions. The Allahabad High Court has held that A and B have distinct causes of action in such a case,<sup>6</sup> while the contrary view has been held by the Calcutta High Court.<sup>7</sup>

11. Two or more plaintiffs, one defendant — Causes of action in which plaintiffs are severally interested — Misjoinder of plaintiffs and causes of action. — Under this rule more plaintiffs than one, having distinct causes of action, might join in a suit against the same defendant, only if they are all jointly interested in the causes of action. But this rule is to be read subject to the provisions of

O. 1 R. 1. O. 1 R. 1 enables several plaintiffs to unite in one suit, though their causes of action may be distinct and separate, if their rights to relief arise out of the same act or transaction or series of acts or transactions, and a common question of fact or law would arise if they brought separate suits. Thus, two or more plaintiffs cannot properly unite in one suit two or more causes of action, in which they are separately interested unless they can do so under O. 1 R. 1.<sup>1</sup>

Where a single wrongful act or infringement gives rise to separate causes of action in favour of several plaintiffs, a single suit by all of them is maintainable under O. 1 R. 1.<sup>2</sup> The undermentioned cases<sup>3</sup> held to be bad under the old Code may, it is submitted, be maintainable under O. 1 R. 1 of the present Code. It was decided under the old Code that claims to property by several plaintiffs under independent titles to portions thereof cannot be joined in the same suit.<sup>4</sup>

Five persons brought a single suit against the same defendant basing their claim on a single contract. But the evidence revealed five different contracts, one with each of the plaintiffs. In such a case no question of misjoinder of parties or causes of action can arise. The suit will have to be dismissed on the ground that there was no single contract in respect of which the plaintiffs could maintain a single suit. Nor could any one of the plaintiffs be granted the benefit of election under O. 1 R. 2 as no one plaintiff could be said to be entitled to the contract as set up.<sup>5</sup>

12. Two or more plaintiffs, two or more defendants — Plaintiffs jointly interested in each of the causes of action against all the defendants jointly. — Two or more plaintiffs suing two or more defendants on several causes of action must be jointly interested in each of the causes of action against all the defendants.<sup>1</sup>

13. Two or more plaintiffs, two or more defendants—Plaintiffs severally interested against defendants severally — Misjoinder of parties and causes of action. — Where each plaintiff has only a separate right against each defendant<sup>1</sup> or the defendants jointly,<sup>2</sup> or different sets of plaintiffs are separately entitled against different sets of defendants,<sup>3</sup> the suit is bad for misjoinder.

14. Procedure in cases of misjoinder.—Under the old Code where the plaint was bad for misjoinder of parties or multifariousness, the Court could return the plaint for amendment, or reject it or dismiss the suit if the necessary amendment was not made. If the suit was dismissed, and the plaintiff appealed, the Appellate Court might

15. Addition of unnecessary parties. — The question of misjoinder will have to be determined only with reference to necessary parties in the suit. So in suits for pre-emption where the vendor is not a necessary party to the suit, the joinder as defendants of different vendors of the same vendee will not make the suit bad for misjoinder.<sup>1</sup>

16. Jurisdiction. — The value of a suit in which more causes of action than one have been united is the aggregate value of the several subject-matters at the date of suit.<sup>1</sup>

17. Revision. — Where the lower Court either misunderstands the nature of judicial discretion or otherwise wrongly holds that a suit is bad for misjoinder of causes of action, a revision will lie.<sup>1</sup>

O. 2 R. 4

R. 4. [S. 44, Rule A.] No cause of action shall, unless with the leave of the Court, be joined with a suit for the recovery of immoveable property, except —

Only certain claims to be joined for recovery of immoveable property.

- (a) claims for mesne profits or arrears of rent in respect of the property claimed or any part thereof;
- (b) claims for damages for breach of any contract under which the property or any part thereof is held; and
- (c) claims in which the relief sought is based on the same cause of action:

Provided that nothing in this rule shall be deemed to prevent any party in a suit for foreclosure or redemption from asking to be put into possession of the mortgaged property.

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "or to obtain a declaration of title to immovable property," which occurred in the old Section 44 (a) have been omitted.
2. The words "or any part thereof" have been added to clause (a).
3. Clause (c) of the old Code has been omitted and a new clause has been substituted.
4. The proviso to the rule is new.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule declares that, in suits for the recovery of immovable property, only the claims specified in the three clauses can be joined.<sup>1</sup> If any other claim is sought to be added, the leave of the Court must be obtained; and such leave may be granted if the claims joined may be conveniently disposed of in one suit. The object of the rule appears to be to avoid a joinder of claims of a character dissimilar to a claim for recovery of immovable property,<sup>2</sup> and to prevent consequent embarrassment in the trial of the suit.

The rule does not apply to a joinder of several claims where the relief sought is based on the same cause of action. Nor does it apply to joinder of several claims, all for the recovery of immovable property.<sup>3</sup> On the contrary, Rule 3 warrants the joinder of such claims against the same defendant or defendants jointly.

This rule applies to counter-claims also.<sup>4</sup>

O. 2 R. 4
Notes 3-6.

3. Suit must be for the recovery of immovable property. — This rule will have no application unless the suit is for the recovery of immovable property.<sup>1</sup> The omission of the words "or to obtain a declaration of title to immovable property" in Section 44A of the Code of 1882 has rendered this rule inapplicable to a suit for declaration of title. Such a suit is not one for the recovery of immovable property.<sup>2</sup> A suit upon a mortgage for recovery of money and a claim for arrears of rent on the lease of the mortgaged property executed by the mortgagor<sup>3</sup> or a suit for a share in a mortgage decree<sup>4</sup> or a suit for specific performance of an agreement to sell immovable property<sup>5</sup> is not a suit for recovery of immovable property within the meaning of this rule. So also a suit to restrain a trespass on immovable property is not a suit for the recovery of immovable property.<sup>6</sup>

4. Leave of Court — When can be granted. — Though the leave of the Court must ordinarily be obtained before instituting the suit, it can be obtained even afterwards in proper cases.<sup>1</sup> Where leave of the Court would be necessary for the joinder of several claims, it is optional with the plaintiff either to apply for leave under this rule or to file separate suits in respect of each of them; this rule does not compel him to obtain leave and assert all his claims at the same time.<sup>2</sup>

Where leave is not obtained as required by this rule and a suit is dismissed on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action, the time occupied in the previous proceedings may be deducted in computing the period of limitation for instituting separate suits.<sup>3</sup>

5. Joinder of claims for mesne profits or arrears of rent—Clause (a). — As to whether claims for recovery of immovable property and claims for mesne profits before suit constitute one cause of action or distinct causes of action, there is a conflict of opinion. According to one view, clause (a) itself shows that they constitute different causes of action. According to the other view clause (a) is not really an exception but is merely an explanation. See the cases in Note 24 to Order 2 Rule 2.

6. Claims in which relief is sought on the same cause of action — Clause (c). — Clause (c) is not really an exception to the rule, but has been inserted in order to avoid the possibility of mistake and to make the rule perfectly clear.<sup>1</sup> This rule has to be read with O. 2 R. 2, which directs that every suit shall include the whole of the claim which the plaintiff is entitled to make in respect of the same cause of action.<sup>2</sup> Therefore, there is nothing irregular in seeking to recover in one suit immovable and moveable property, if the cause of action is the same in respect of both.<sup>3</sup>

1. A Hindu widow sues her husband's coparceners for recovery of immovable and moveable properties, being her deceased husband's share in the family properties under a partition which had not been completed during her husband's lifetime. The suit is not bad for misjoinder under this rule: Ganesh Dutt v. Tewach, I. L. R. 81 Calcutta 262 (P. C.).

2. A files an administration suit in which he joins a claim to a relief in regard to a partnership business and a claim for the recovery of immovable property on the same cause of action. The suit is not bad for misjoinder.<sup>4</sup>

But if, in Illustration 2 above, the two claims are based on different causes of action, the joinder of the two claims will violate this rule.<sup>5</sup> Thus, in a suit against an administrator to recover damages for malfeasance, a claim for the recovery of immovable property in the hands of the administrator and certain others, cannot be joined.<sup>6</sup> But, though the plaintiff may sue on a single cause of action, it may entitle him to various kinds of relief. In such a case no leave of the Court is necessary to bring a suit for all such reliefs. Thus, no leave is required to join a claim for an injunction, or for an account of rents and profits, or for appointment of a receiver, or for any declaration that merely establishes the plaintiff's right to possession, inasmuch as all these things are simply machinery to enforce the plaintiff's one cause of action.<sup>7</sup>

7. Suit for foreclosure or redemption—Proviso.—The High Court of Patna has held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that, where in a suit for redemption, the plaintiff claims to be put into possession of the mortgaged property not only as against the mortgagee but also against persons in possession under a paramount title, leave of the Court is necessary for a joinder of those claims.

8. Objection as to misjoinder of causes of action. — See Rule 7 below.

9. Appeal. — An order rejecting an application for leave to join two causes of action is not appealable, though, if the plaint is rejected, it will be appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup>

Moneys in hands of executors as such—Not attachable for personal claims. See Note 1.

1. Scope of the Rule. — The following propositions follow from this rule —
  - (a) Subject to the provisions of Rules 1 to 3 ante, any number of claims by or against an executor, administrator or heir may be joined in one suit, provided the plaintiff or defendant, as the case may be, sues or is sued as such.
  - (b) A claim by or against an executor, etc., as such cannot be joined with a claim by or against him personally in the same suit, except
    - (i) where the personal claim arises with reference to the estate of the deceased, or
    - (ii) where the plaintiff or defendant was jointly entitled to or liable for with the deceased in regard to the personal claim.

This rule deals with suits by or against only three classes of persons, viz., executors, administrators or heirs. But those are not the only classes of persons who owe their legal condition to the death of another. A legatee or the next of kin, for example, also will come under the same category. The reason why executors, administrators and heirs are alone singled out by the Legislature in the rule is that, while acquiring title from the deceased in the same manner as the legatees or the next of kin, they, in addition, represent him. The closing words of this rule indicate this reason.<sup>1</sup> For the application of the principle of this rule to execution proceedings, see the case cited below.<sup>2</sup>

It makes no difference to the applicability of this rule that the two claims are made in the alternative.<sup>3</sup>

2. Claim by or against executor, administrator or heir as such. — A person is said to claim qua heir when, in making the claim, he is alleged to represent the estate of a deceased person. The words "claim by an heir as such" mean claim by him in a representative capacity, that is, as representing the person whose heir he claims to be.<sup>1</sup> He is not claiming as an heir if he claims for himself; for the fact of his being an heir is only the foundation of his claim and does not give him a representative capacity. Where, for example, a Mahomedan widow sues her daughters for her share in her deceased husband's estate,<sup>2</sup> or A sues the executors of B for property in their possession on the ground that A inherited the property from B,<sup>3</sup> the claim of the plaintiff is not as an heir but in his own and personal right. It has been held that a claim as the surviving coparcener of a joint Hindu family and a claim as the sole heir of a deceased member of the family for the recovery of a debt due on a promissory note executed in favour of the latter cannot be joined in the same suit.<sup>4</sup>

In a suit to administer the assets of a deceased person, various acts of maladministration may be sought to be redressed in the same suit.<sup>5</sup>

Under Section 328 of Act X of 1865, an administrator is liable for neglect to get in any part of the property of the deceased person.<sup>6</sup>

3. "Estate," meaning of. — The word "estate" means not only the estate rightly and properly held by executors, but also the "estate" which they hold in the belief that they are executors.<sup>1</sup> The claim of a Hindu widow of a deceased undivided coparcener for maintenance against the surviving coparceners, is not against the estate of the deceased husband.<sup>2</sup>

4. Joinder of personal claims, when permissible. — A personal claim can be joined with a claim as representing the estate, if it arises with reference to the same estate. Thus, a suit against an executor for the administration of the estate of a deceased person, and for an account of the partnership carried on by the executor and the deceased is not bad for misjoinder.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where A and B carried on a partnership and after A's death his son C continued the partnership with B, and subsequently C as administrator sued B for accounts of the partnership between A and B and also for dissolution of his own partnership, it was held that there was no misjoinder inasmuch as his personal claim arose out of the estate.<sup>2</sup> The expression "arises with reference to" is not to be narrowly construed.<sup>3</sup>

5. Amendment of plaint. — Where two claims are joined in contravention of this rule, the practice is to amend the plaint by striking out one of them and proceeding with the other.<sup>1</sup>

6. Objections as to misjoinder. — See Order 2 Rule 7.

3. Powers of the Appellate Court. — If the trial Court does not think fit to act under this rule but tries all the causes of action together, it is not proper for the Appellate Court to interfere with the discretion of the trial Court in that matter.<sup>1</sup>

4. Consolidation of suits. — Although the Code contains no express provision, it has an inherent power ex debito justitiæ to consolidate proceedings.<sup>1</sup> Such power will be exercised only where it is asked for before the trial of the suits begins, and only where the parties are the same and the evidence given is common in all cases.<sup>2</sup> But where the cases have very little in common and all parties except one are against it, a consolidation of the cases will be a material irregularity within the meaning of Section 115 of the Code.<sup>3</sup> If the trial Court consolidates cases, and passes a single decree, a single appeal may be preferred against the decree.<sup>4</sup> returned for amendment under Section 53 thereof; failure to comply with the order for amendment resulted in the rejection of the plaint. These provisions have not been re-enacted in this Code and this rule provides instead, that an objection on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action must be taken at the earliest possible opportunity, and, in all cases in which issues are settled, at or before such settlement of issues. The wording is similar to that in O. 1 R. 13.

R. 7. [New.] All objections on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action shall be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and, in all cases where issues are settled, at or before such settlement, unless the ground of objection has subsequently arisen, and any such objection not so taken shall be deemed to have been waived.

The plea of misjoinder cannot for the first time be taken in appeal or in second appeal.<sup>1</sup> The defect of misjoinder is not a ground for reversing a decree; for, Section 99 provides that no decree shall be varied or reversed on account of misjoinder of causes of action, unless the defect has affected the merits of the case or jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>2</sup> If an objection as to misjoinder is taken in the written statement, the Court must raise an issue and decide it.<sup>3</sup> Where, in a case requiring leave under O. 2 R. 4, an objection as to misjoinder is raised but nothing is said about it in the judgment, the Court must be deemed to have impliedly granted the necessary leave.<sup>4</sup> Where a suit is bad for misjoinder of causes of action, the Court should not dismiss the suit; but should give the plaintiff an opportunity to amend his plaint and to proceed with the claim in respect of one of the causes of action.<sup>5</sup>

2. Waiver of objections.—An objection on the ground of misjoinder of causes of action being of a "dilatory character and quite besides the merits" will be deemed to have been waived if not taken at the proper time.<sup>1</sup> The same will be the case where the objection is raised but not pressed.<sup>2</sup> It has been held by the Bombay

Local Amendments

LAHORE

Rule 8 — (1) Where an objection, duly taken, has been allowed by the Court, the plaintiff shall be permitted to select the cause of action with which he will proceed, and shall, within a time to be fixed by the Court, amend the plaint by striking out the remaining causes of action.

(2) When the plaintiff has selected the cause of action with which he will proceed, the Court shall pass an order giving him time within which to submit amended plaints for the remaining causes of action and for making up the court-fees that may be necessary. Should the plaintiff not comply with the Court's order, the Court shall proceed as provided in Rule 18 of Order 6 and as required by the provisions of the Court-Fees Act.

ORDER III.

RECOGNIZED AGENTS AND PLEADERS

R. 1. [S. 36.] Any appearance, application or act in or to any Court, required or authorized by law to be made or done by a party in such Court, may, except where otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, be made or done by the party in person, or by his recognized agent, or by a pleader appearing, applying or acting, as the case may be, on his behalf:

O. 3 R. 1

Appearances, etc., may be in person, by recognized agent or by pleader.

Provided that any such appearance shall, if the Court so directs, be made by the party in person.

[1877, Ss. 36, 49, 50, 417, 418, 435; 1859, Ss. 26, 16.]

a. Substituted by the Code of Civil Procedure (Second Amendment) Act, XXII of 1926, Section 2, for "duly appointed to act."

O. 3 R. 1
Notes 1-2

1. Amendments after 1908. — By the Code of Civil Procedure (Second Amendment) Act, 1926, the words "appearing, applying or acting" were substituted for the words "duly appointed to act" which occurred after the words "or by a pleader."

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule enacts that an appearance, application or act, in or to any Court may, except where otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force, be done —

- (1) by a party in person, or
- (2) by his recognised agent, or
- (3) by a pleader appearing, applying or acting on his behalf.

This is the general rule.<sup>1</sup> There are, however, other modes of appearances, applications, or acting, expressly prescribed by the Code for particular cases which, by reason of the words "except where otherwise expressly provided by any law for the time being in force" are taken out of the operation of the general rule to the extent so prescribed. Thus, O. 5 R. 1 sub-rule 2 enacts that a defendant to whom summons has been issued under sub-rule 1 may appear —

- (a) in person, or
- (b) by a pleader duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit, or
- (c) by a pleader accompanied by some person able to answer all such questions.

The form of summons given in Form No. 1 of Schedule B of the Code also requires the defendant to appear in the above manner. The test, therefore, as to whether a defendant has appeared is to see whether such of the requirements of O. 5, Rule 1 and of the summons, as relate to appearance have or have not been complied with.<sup>2</sup> A defendant who is not present in person at the hearing<sup>3</sup> and whose pleader is also absent or has no instructions to go on with the case<sup>4</sup> cannot be said to have appeared at the hearing.

Other express provisions to the contrary are furnished by O. 33 R. 3 and O. 44 R. 1 under which an application to sue or appeal in forma pauperis should be presented to the Court in person unless the applicant is exempted from appearing in Court.

This rule does not recognise the practice of parties, their agents or their pleaders making applications to the Court by post.<sup>5</sup>

It must be noted that if a party is entitled to take part in or to conduct an examination, the ordinary rule must prevail that he is entitled to do so with the help of a counsel.<sup>6</sup>

3. Appearance and act. — "These words have a well-defined and well-known meaning. To appear for a client in Court is to be present and to represent him in the various stages of the litigation at which it is necessary that the client should be present in Court by himself or by some representative. To act for a client in Court is to take on his behalf in the Court, or in the offices of the Court, the necessary steps that must be taken in the course of the litigation in order that his case may be properly laid before the Court."<sup>1</sup> Thus, 'acting' includes applying; so that a pleader who makes an application on behalf of a litigant 'acts' for him and cannot do so unless he is authorised in writing under Rule 4 infra.<sup>2</sup> The words "appearance" and "act" do not include "pleading" and a recognised agent who is entitled to appear and act for a party is not entitled to a right of audience.<sup>3</sup>

4. Appearance of party in person. — The mere presence of a party in Court at the hearing is sufficient to constitute "appearance." The purpose for which he appeared or the action which he took on appearance is immaterial.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the fact that he asks for adjournment which is refused,<sup>2</sup> or that he does not put in any answer or written statement,<sup>3</sup> will not prevent his presence from being an "appearance." Where the party does not actually appear before Court when the suit is called on for hearing, the fact that he was present in the precincts of the court-house<sup>4</sup> does not constitute appearance. But suppose a party has engaged a pleader and is also present in Court at the hearing. In such a case, it has been held by the High Court of Bombay<sup>5</sup> that where the pleader so engaged is absent at the hearing but the party himself is ready to go on with the case, he must be deemed to "appear" in the case. According to the High Court of Madras, where the pleader so engaged reports "no instructions" and the party takes no further part in the proceedings, his mere presence in Court will not make it an appearance in the suit.<sup>6</sup> The reason given is that the appearance contemplated by the rule must be not as a man but as a party and with the intention of acting as such party, and that his mere presence when his pleader reports no instructions will not amount to an appearance inasmuch as he is merely there as the person who is represented by the pleader. The High Courts of Calcutta<sup>7</sup> and Patna<sup>8</sup> have also taken a similar view.

A party can himself appear, act or make applications on his behalf. A barrister or a pleader appearing before the Court as a litigant ought not to address the Court

5. Appearance by recognized agent. — See Order 3 Rule 2 and also Section 9, Agra Tenancy Act, III of 1926 and Section 32 (ii) of the C. P. Land Revenue Act, II of 1917.

6. Appearance by pleader. — The appearance of the pleader of a party is, under this rule, equivalent to the appearance of the party himself.<sup>1</sup> The mere presence of the pleader, however, unlike the presence of the party, is not necessarily an "appearance" within the meaning of the rule.<sup>2</sup> It has been seen in Note 2 above that a defendant who has received a suit summons can under O. 5 R. 1 appear by a pleader only when he is duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit or when he is accompanied by some person able to answer all such questions. There is no specific provision that when a plaintiff appears by a pleader, the latter should be so instructed or accompanied. But it has been held that the principle of O. 5, R. 1 applies also to the case of a plaintiff appearing by a pleader.<sup>3</sup> In order therefore to constitute the presence of the pleader of a party, whether plaintiff or defendant, an "appearance" on his behalf, it is necessary that he should have been duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit.<sup>4</sup> Thus, where the pleader of a party is absent,<sup>5</sup> or refuses to appear for him,<sup>6</sup> or reports "no instructions,"<sup>7</sup> or is instructed only to apply for an adjournment on the refusal of which he withdraws from the case,<sup>8</sup> there is no "appearance" on behalf of the party. 7. "Except where otherwise expressly provided." — See Note 2 above.

8. Direction to appear in person — Proviso. — A Court has jurisdiction to direct, under the proviso, a party to appear in person, and on his failure to do so, to dismiss the suit or proceed ex parte as the case may be under O. 9 R. 12.<sup>1</sup> This should not however be done except for very good reasons.<sup>2</sup> The fact that one party desires the presence of the opposite party in Court for the purpose of examining him as a witness is not a good reason: the proper procedure in such a case is to adopt the procedure provided by O. 16.<sup>3</sup> In the undermentioned case, where in a suit for rent, the defendant pleaded discharge but was prepared to withdraw the plea if the plaintiff would depose that there was no discharge and thereupon the Court ordered the plaintiff's appearance under O. 10 R. 4, and on his failure to do so dismissed the suit under that rule, it was held that the proper procedure was to have ordered the plaintiff to appear under this proviso and not under O. 10 R. 4.<sup>4</sup> Where the Court directs the attendance of a party but omits to quote the Section under which the order is made, it must be deemed to be made under O. 10 R. 4.<sup>5</sup>

Local Amendment

BOMBAY

Clause (a) shall be read as follows :

"Persons holding on behalf of such parties either (i) a general power-of-attorney, or (ii) in the case of proceedings in the High Court of Bombay an Attorney of such High Court or an Advocate, and in the case of proceedings in any district, any such Attorney or any Advocate, or a Pleader to whom a sanad for that district has been issued, holding the requisite special power-of-attorney from parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application or act is made or done, authorizing them or him to make and do such appearances, applications and acts on behalf of such parties."

1. Legislative changes. — The word "general" preceding the words "powers-of-attorney" and the sentence "from parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which limits the appearance, application or act is made or done" which occurred in the old Section have now been omitted from sub-clause (a). The result is that the rule has become more comprehensive and authorises any person holding a simple power-of-attorney to act or make applications or appearances in Court. The clause making specific provisions for mukhtears was therefore found unnecessary and has been deleted.<sup>1</sup> See the undermentioned cases relating to mukhtears.<sup>2</sup>

The last paragraph of old Section 37 directing the Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, the Chief Commissioners of Oudh and the Central Provinces to declare from time to time, the persons competent to act as recognised agents of parties, has been omitted as being no longer necessary.<sup>3</sup>

2. Persons holding powers-of-attorney. — As seen in Note 1 already, it was necessary under the old Section 37 that the principal should be a person not resident within the jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>1</sup> But the term "non-resident" was construed very liberally.<sup>2</sup> The Bombay High Court has, however, amended the present rule by practically bringing it in conformity with the old Section.<sup>3</sup>

An agent who holds a power-of-attorney should be allowed to appear and act under this rule<sup>4</sup> but the defendant may question his authority to do so.<sup>5</sup> He can show that a plaint signed by an authorised agent is not valid by reason of the suit not having been instituted with the approval of the plaintiff.<sup>6</sup> It is the duty of the first Court to decide the question of authority; it should not be left for decision to the Appellate Court.<sup>7</sup>

A recognized agent is competent to refer a matter in dispute to arbitration<sup>8</sup> unless specially restricted by the power<sup>9</sup> and may file an affidavit of documents<sup>10</sup> or sign an amended plaint.<sup>11</sup> He can also offer to be bound by the oath of the other party under Section 9 of the Oaths Act,<sup>12</sup> but all acts and appearances should be done only on behalf of and in the name of the principal. He cannot bring suits in his own name.<sup>13</sup> He has no right of audience and cannot plead or examine witnesses.<sup>14</sup> No power can be given in such a way as to evade the special provisions relating to the appointment of pleaders.<sup>15</sup> An agent who has been given a general power of attorney authorising him to mortgage a certain property on behalf of his principal and do other necessary acts in respect of the principal's interest in the property, cannot bind the principal to a personal money decree for the balance remaining due after the sale of the property.<sup>16</sup>

Where there is a valid authority, mere formal defects will not invalidate the acts of the agent.<sup>17</sup> Thus, a defect in the signature in the plaint<sup>18</sup> or in the description of the agent<sup>19</sup> is only an irregularity and does not invalidate the proceeding. It has been held that even where there is no authority originally to do an act, it could be given subsequently by the principal ratifying the unauthorised acts.<sup>20</sup> A suit should not be dismissed for defect in the authority of the agent, but the Court should give the defaulting party an opportunity to remedy it.<sup>21</sup>

A power-of-attorney was filed not along with an application for execution but later. As it was filed within the period of limitation prescribed for the execution application, it was held that the application was properly presented.<sup>22</sup>

3. Power-of-attorney. — The term "power-of-attorney" is not defined in the Civil Procedure Code. Broadly speaking it is a formal instrument by which authority is conferred on an agent. Such an instrument should be construed strictly and as giving only such authority as it confers expressly or by necessary implication.

Every agent has got an implied authority to do whatever is necessary for, or ordinarily incidental to the effective execution of, his express authority in the usual way.<sup>1</sup> Thus, an authority to "prosecute a claim" will include an authority to file an appeal.<sup>2</sup> A person authorised to take all steps necessary to complete the execution of a decree can sign and present an execution application to save the decree from the bar of limitation.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, an agent authorised to get a postponement of a judicial sale has power to raise a loan for the attainment of that object.<sup>4</sup> A power of attorney to defend a suit includes a power to appeal against an order refusing to set aside a decree passed ex parte<sup>5</sup> as it includes a necessary step for the defence in the suit or to establish the grounds of defence in the suit.<sup>6</sup>

The authority given must, however, be construed with reference to the special purpose for which it is given. Thus, a power to conduct suits generally does not authorise the agent to bring them to a close in an out of the ordinary way.<sup>7</sup> An agent authorised to file a suit cannot, without the express authority of the principal, enter into an agreement with the pleader engaged by him promising to pay the latter more than a reasonable remuneration.<sup>8</sup> An agent authorised to act only in connection with one particular matter such as the realisation of an amount due, is one acting under a special power-of-attorney.<sup>9</sup> An authority to sign mortgage bonds on behalf of the principal does not include a power to enter into mortgage transactions.<sup>10</sup> Where the manager of a firm files the vakalat as its agent, it should be clearly described as such to avoid further litigation.<sup>11</sup>

4. Objection to authority. — An objection to the validity of a power-of-attorney must be taken very early at the trial Court, and if not taken must be deemed to have been waived.<sup>1</sup> A defect in the authority of the agent is only an irregularity not affecting the merits of the case within Section 99 of the Code and will not be a ground for interference in appeal.<sup>2</sup>

5. Persons carrying on business. — The person must really carry on business for and in the name of parties not resident within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court within which the applications, appearances or acts are to be done.<sup>1</sup> The clause refers to a gumastha or person acting for others, and does not include a partner carrying on business for himself and for others.<sup>2</sup> When a firm has ceased to carry on business, a person engaged in collecting the assets of such a firm is not a recognized agent according to the Calcutta High Court<sup>3</sup> but is one according to the Bombay High Court.<sup>4</sup>

The expression "carrying on business" in this rule must be interpreted in a restricted sense, viz., as relating to commercial business.<sup>5</sup> The appearance, application or act made or done must relate to matters connected with the trade or business.<sup>6</sup>

7. Recognized agent of Princes. — Section 85 does not prevent the institution of a suit by an independent Prince in his own name and through a recognized agent appointed under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

A political agent appointed by the Government to manage the estates of a Chief is not a recognized agent within the meaning of this rule so as to enable him to sue on behalf of the Chief in British Courts.<sup>2</sup>

1. Service of process on recognized agent. — This rule provides for the mode of service of processes on a recognized agent, and says that service on a recognized agent is as effectual as service on the party in person. "It is not a mere question of constructive notice or inference of fact, but a rule of law which imputes the knowledge of the agent to the principal, or, in other words, the agency extends to receiving notice on behalf of his principal of whatever is material to be stated in the course of the proceedings."<sup>1</sup> The rule, however, does not prohibit service on the parties themselves.<sup>2</sup> A person holding a power-of-attorney is at liberty to refuse to accept service of summons and appear in a suit brought against the principal even though he is authorised by the power to appear and defend suits.<sup>3</sup> Service of notice on a muktear who is not the recognized agent of the judgment-debtor is not sufficient service within the meaning of this rule.<sup>4</sup>

1. Amendments after 1908.—The present rule was amended by the Code of Civil Procedure (Second Amendment) Act, 1926. In sub-rule 2 the words "when accepted by a pleader" which occurred after the words "every such appointment" have been omitted. Sub-rules 2 to 5 and the proviso are new.

2. Scope of the Rule.—This rule provides in what manner a pleader should be appointed and till what time the appointment is to be in force. It assumes that a pleader who is appointed is competent to appear. It is only an enabling provision by which a pleader, when he accepts an engagement and files vakalatnama, is entitled to conduct the proceedings till he or his client dies, or till the termination of the proceedings. It does not give an absolute right to any practitioner to appear in Court in any matter he chooses. It is subject to the rules governing the qualifications of the various classes of pleaders and the rules governing the procedure of Courts.<sup>1</sup> The proviso to Rule 23 of the Appellate Side Rules of the Madras High Court requiring that when a vakalatnama is executed by a man who is either blind, illiterate or unacquainted with the language in which the vakalatnama is written, the officer before whom it is executed shall certify that the contents of the vakalatnama were explained to the executant who seemed to understand it and signed in his presence, is intra vires and does not conflict with anything that is contained herein.<sup>2</sup>

As to appointment of pleaders, see Note 14 infra.

3. Pleader. — The term "pleader" signifies all persons who are entitled to appear and plead and includes an advocate, vakil or attorney.<sup>1</sup> It must, however, be read in the narrowest sense and does not include agents.<sup>2</sup> A pleader in India combines in himself the duties performed in England by a barrister and attorney, in that he can both plead and act, whereas a barrister can only plead and an attorney can only act.<sup>3</sup>

The status of an advocate of the Calcutta High Court, it has been held, does not differ from that of a barrister in England.<sup>4</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> it was held that an advocate of the Allahabad High Court can also act for his client.

In Burma, barristers appear as advocates and not as barristers. Hence a memorandum of appearance filed by them without a power-of-attorney will not enable them to bind their client by a compromise entered into by them.<sup>6</sup>

A barrister is not technically his client's agent but the contract between a pleader and his client is governed by the law relating to agency.<sup>7</sup>

4. Authority to abandon issue or claim. — A pleader's general powers in the conduct of a suit include the power to abandon an issue, which, in his discretion, he thinks it inadvisable to press.<sup>1</sup> He may ask for an issue, or give up an issue, and the same will be binding on his client.<sup>2</sup> But he cannot relinquish a portion of the claim in the suit, unless specially authorised to do so.<sup>3</sup> It is the duty of the pleader in such cases to consult his client, and get his express consent before giving up any such portion of the claim.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, a pleader cannot, unless authorised to do so, bring the suit to a close by offering to be bound by the oath of the opposite party.<sup>5</sup> An opinion expressed by the pleader in the course of arguments adversely to the claims of the client, which he undertook to advocate, is also not binding on the client.<sup>6</sup>

5. Power to make admissions. — Verbal admissions made by a pleader should be received with caution,<sup>1</sup> must be taken as a whole and must not be unduly pressed, but the Court will nevertheless accept a statement of a pleader from the bar without burdening him with an oath.<sup>2</sup> An admission on a question of fact will always bind the client,<sup>3</sup> unless the pleader has been induced or misled by a mistake<sup>4</sup> or misapprehension<sup>5</sup> as to the actual facts. An order or judgment based on the admission of the pleader can, generally speaking, be set aside upon any ground which would invalidate an agreement.<sup>6</sup> But a party repudiating the admission should do so at the earliest possible opportunity.<sup>7</sup>

Admissions made by a pleader against instructions<sup>8</sup> or at a time when he was not engaged by the client<sup>9</sup> or as to what is beyond the scope of the suit<sup>10</sup> will not, however, bind the client.

An erroneous admission by a pleader on a question of law is of no effect and

Though statements made by pleaders are not pleadings in the strict sense of the term, yet they may be considered as explanatory of and supplemental to the pleadings.<sup>12</sup>

6. Power to withdraw suit. — A vakalatnama couched in general terms suffices prima facie to authorise a pleader to apply for a withdrawal of the suit and, in the absence of anything to show that the pleader has acted contrary to instructions or is otherwise guilty of misconduct, the client is bound by such act on the part of the pleader.<sup>1</sup>

7. Power to compromise suit. — In the absence of specific authority, a pleader ordinarily employed cannot enter into a compromise on behalf of the client, and, if he does so, the compromise is not binding on the client<sup>1</sup> unless the latter

acquiesces in or ratifies the same.<sup>3</sup> Where the original vakalatnama itself specially empowers the pleader to compromise the suit, no second or special vakalatnamah is again necessary to compromise it.<sup>3</sup> A strict interpretation ought to be placed upon the terms empowering the pleader to enter into a compromise.<sup>4</sup> Thus, a power to file a compromise does not include a power to make a compromise or sign it;<sup>5</sup> nor does an authority to compromise a suit necessarily give an authority to negotiate the terms thereof without reference to his client.<sup>6</sup>

A counsel, as distinguished from a pleader, can compromise a suit in the absence of any limitation on his authority. Express authority, as in the case of a pleader, is not required.<sup>7</sup> But his authority extends only to matters involved in the suit and not to collateral matters.<sup>8</sup>

As regards attorneys or solicitors, the law in England is that they are entitled in the exercise of their discretion to enter into a compromise on behalf of the client.

If they act bona fide and not against the express directions of the client, the compromise will be binding on him.<sup>9</sup>

A compromise entered into by a pleader duly authorised cannot be interfered with unless there is fraud, collusion, mistake or misapprehension on the part of the pleader.<sup>10</sup> But the Court has plenary powers to enquire into the justice or the bona fides of a settlement reported to it<sup>11</sup> and where grave injustice is likely to result by allowing the compromise to stand, it can interfere and set it aside.<sup>12</sup> Where the client expressly prohibits the compromise and notifies his dissent to the opposite side, the compromise is not valid and will be set aside.<sup>13</sup>

Where a pleader was engaged by two clients A and B who filed a suit and the vakalatnamah authorised him to compromise the suit but he did not act on the authority and merely acted 'as a messenger between the clients and the compromise was entered into by B, it was held that it would not bind A unless B was authorised by A to compromise the suit.<sup>14</sup>

A presentation by the pleader's clerk or by another pleader delegated for that purpose is equivalent to a presentation by the pleader.<sup>3</sup> But the Punjab Chief Court has held that the Code does not recognise the status of a pleader's clerk.<sup>4</sup> The presence of the pleader's clerk will not, however, amount to appearance by the pleader himself.<sup>5</sup> Nor can the pleader completely delegate to his clerk the duties he owes to his client without being responsible for his defaults.<sup>6</sup>

10. Control and conduct of suit. — A counsel has authority to do what he considers best for his client in the management and conduct of the suit and if, in the exercise of such authority, he enters into any agreement with the opposite side it will be binding on the client unless any limitation was imposed on his authority and unless such limitation was communicated to the opposite side.<sup>1</sup> Parties are bound by the bona fide acts of their pleaders acting within the scope of their authority and a mere error of judgment on their part affords no valid ground for avoiding such acts.<sup>2</sup>

If a party has employed more than one pleader, the senior among them has the entire control of the case.<sup>3</sup>

11. Liability of pleader for misconduct. — A pleader is liable to be suspended or dismissed from practising if he is guilty of misconduct of the kind specified in Section 13 of the Legal Practitioners Act, XVIII of 1879. As to what amounts to misconduct and what does not, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

Practising in contravention of Section 10 of the Legal Practitioners Act, i. e., without a proper certificate as required by Section 7 of the Act amounts to misconduct.<sup>3</sup> A pleader who has been convicted of any criminal offence implying a defect of character which unfits him to be a pleader is liable to be suspended or dismissed by the High Court<sup>3</sup> (Section 12 of the Legal Practitioners Act). But before any action is taken against a pleader he should be given notice of the charges levelled against him and an opportunity of vindicating his character.<sup>4</sup> The misconduct of a pleader cannot, however, be a ground for deciding the suit against his client.<sup>5</sup>

12. Privileges and rights of pleaders. — A pleader cannot, as a general rule, refuse to take up a case for any member of the public if a fair and proper fee is tendered to him, adequate instructions are given and the case is of a class which the lawyer is accustomed to take up. Such a refusal will amount to professional misconduct.<sup>1</sup> Of course, refusal to accept a brief for valid reasons like having to go to mofussil or having to attend some social function, or owing to physical incapacity cannot be questioned.<sup>2</sup> In the conduct of the suit he is entitled to examine witnesses in his chamber before examining them in Court.<sup>3</sup> He can also examine the documents produced by his witness or by his party before tendering them in evidence.<sup>4</sup>

A pleader is not liable for slander or libel in respect of words used by him in the course of a judicial enquiry.<sup>5</sup> The Court has no power to cut short his arguments unless they are irrelevant or involve a repetition.<sup>6</sup>

A pleader or solicitor has a lien on the papers entrusted to him until all his costs are paid off<sup>7</sup> and the Court will not grant the party leave to change his attorney

O. 3 R. 4 until such costs are paid.<sup>8</sup> The lien is, however, an equitable one and can be claimed only as against the client and not third parties.<sup>9</sup>

In certain circumstances the lien cannot even prevail over the rights of parties themselves.<sup>10</sup>

A pleader who has not been paid by the client his remuneration can file a suit for the recovery of the fee agreed upon<sup>11</sup> or by way of quantum meruit under Section 65 of the Indian Contract Act.<sup>12</sup> No written agreement is necessary for such a suit.<sup>13</sup> A promissory note taken by the pleader and not filed in Court as required by Section 28 of the Legal Practitioners Act was, under the Legal Practitioners Act as it stood before 1926, held to be invalid and unenforceable.<sup>14</sup> Section 28 of that Act, however, has been repealed by Act XXI of 1926.

Where a pleader receives a fee to conduct a case for his client, he is not bound to refund any portion of the fee, if the case is compromised by the parties before trial.<sup>15</sup>

It may be usefully mentioned here that a receipt given by counsel for payment made by the client is exempt from stamp duty.<sup>16</sup>

13. Duties. — When a pleader accepts a brief it is his bounden duty to attend to his client's interests throughout the proceedings in the case,<sup>1</sup> to represent his interests properly<sup>2</sup> and to prosecute the case with due diligence.<sup>3</sup> If he fails to do so, he is liable to be dealt with for neglect and is also answerable to the client.<sup>4</sup> If he is law and to refuse to give up his client's papers until his legitimate costs already incurred are paid. If on the other hand, the attorney puts an end to the contract himself, he is not so entitled. Though he retains his lien, it is postponed. It comes into effective operation only after the case is ended and after the other attorney has completed his work; he only retains a modified lien, the priority of his lien being sacrificed and to that extent impaired — There is, however, no lien in favour of an attorney who is discharged by his client for misconduct.]] unable to attend when the case is called on, the brief should be returned in good time.<sup>5</sup>

It is also the duty of a pleader to advise his client properly out of Court.<sup>6</sup> A pleader filing an obviously improper and groundless criminal complaint will be guilty of serious misconduct. It is his duty to make due enquiries of the clients and to act with such care and prudence that his good faith cannot successfully be questioned.<sup>7</sup> It is not proper for a pleader to associate himself with reckless charges of fraud and criminality or to indulge in abuse; nor should he put questions attacking a witness's honour unless he has reasonable grounds for believing them to be true.<sup>8</sup> Where, pending suit, counsel for the plaintiff sent a threatening notice to the defendant asking him to withdraw a plea taken by him in his written statement, it was held that such an action amounted to a contempt of Court. A counsel's capacity is not inviolable and his privileges cannot possibly extend to interference with the administration of justice. Counsel are expected to help and not to hinder the administration of justice.<sup>9</sup>

A pleader having once appeared for a client should not appear against him in another litigation arising out of the same dispute<sup>10</sup> and use the information received formerly in his professional capacity.<sup>11</sup> But before a counsel can be said to be engaged by a particular party so as to make it unprofessional for him to appear for the opposite party, the counsel must have had a definite retainer with a fee paid, or he must have had such confidential information from one of the parties as would make it improper for him to appear for the other.<sup>12</sup> Any contract entered into by the pleader with his client in respect of the subject of litigation or advice is liable to be questioned and undue influence will be presumed to have been exercised.<sup>13</sup>

Pleaders owe a duty not only to their clients but also to the Court and are bound to co-operate with the Court in the orderly and pure administration of justice.<sup>14</sup> Thus, a pleader is bound to correct any errors committed by the Court of which he is aware<sup>15</sup> and bring to the notice of the Court facts within his knowledge such as the death of a party.<sup>16</sup> When a matter is heard ex parte, he is bound to bring to the notice of the Court adverse as well as favourable authorities on the point.<sup>17</sup> He cannot make personal attacks or unfounded charges of impropriety against the trial Judge when the real ground is that he has failed to create an impression in his mind by arguments.<sup>18</sup> applies to all proceedings under the Code. The word "pleader" includes an attorney<sup>1</sup> as well as an advocate.<sup>2</sup> The words "personal appearance" include personal appearance to give evidence.<sup>3</sup>

A notice served on an attorney even after a decree nisi was passed and the party had left for England has been held to be equivalent to service on the party.<sup>4</sup> Until the engagement of a pleader is legally determined, any process served on him will be effectual in spite of the pleader's endorsement thereon that he is no longer appearing for the party.<sup>5</sup> But when a proceeding is at an end the pleader does not continue to act for the party thereafter and service on the pleader is of no avail. Thus, where an ex parte decree is passed and the suit comes to an end, a service on the pleader is not equivalent to a service on his client.<sup>6</sup>

The process, in order to be effectual, must be addressed to the pleader on whom it is to be served.<sup>7</sup> The pleader himself may, however, waive the correct formalities in effecting service.<sup>8</sup>

The presumption referred to in the rule can, according to the High Court of Calcutta, be rebutted by actual proof that the pleader did not communicate the matter to the party.<sup>9</sup> Where a pleader declined to accept notice of the transfer of a suit to another Court on the ground that he no longer represented the party and this fact was brought to the notice of the Court, and the Court nevertheless dismissed the suit for non-appearance of the plaintiff and his pleader, it was held by the High Court of Lahore that it was unfair to penalise the party notwithstanding the act of the pleader in refusing the notice was illegal.<sup>10</sup>

The High Court of Patna has, on the other hand, held that the presumption of communication is an irrebuttable one.<sup>11</sup>

The rule applies only when the Court orders that process be served on the pleader.<sup>12</sup> Though a service on the pleader of a party would be effectual as regards such party in relation to a civil suit, it cannot render the party liable to punishment under Section 174, Indian Penal Code.<sup>13</sup>

Local Amendments

ALLAHABAD

For sub-rule (1), substitute the following :

"1. (1) Every suit shall be instituted by presenting to the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf, a plaint, together with a true copy for service with the summons upon each defendant, unless the Court for good cause shown allows time for filing such copies.

(2) The court-fee chargeable for such service shall be paid in the case of suits when the plaint is filed and in the case of all other proceedings when the process is applied for."

NAGPUR

Substitute the following for sub-rule (1) :

"1. (1) Every suit shall be instituted by presenting to the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf a plaint, together with as many true copies on plain paper of the plaint as there are defendants, for service with the summons upon each defendant, unless the Court, for good cause shown allows time for filing such copies."

Add the following sub-rule (2) and renumber the present sub-rule (2) as sub-rule (3) :

"(2) The court-fee chargeable for such service shall be paid in the case of suits when the plaint is filed, and in the case of all other proceedings when the process is applied for."

ODDH

To sub-rule (2), add the following words :

"and except with the permission of the presiding officer, for reasons to be recorded, no plaint shall be admitted until the necessary process-fee has been paid into Court."

1. Legislative changes. — Sub-rule (2) is new.

1a. Suit, meaning of. — The word "suit" ordinarily means a civil proceeding instituted by the presentation of a plaint. A claim against a company in liquidation not made by the presentation of a plaint is not a suit.<sup>1</sup>

2. Plaint, meaning of. — See Section 26 Note 3.

3. Presentation of plaint. — The institution of a suit is ordinarily made by the presentation of a plaint to the Court or such officer as it appoints in this behalf and the time of institution for purposes of Limitation Act is the time of presentation of the plaint.<sup>1</sup> See Limitation Act, 1908, Section 3, and Explanation thereto.

4. Place of presentation of the plaint. — The Court in which the plaint has to be presented is the Court of the lowest grade competent to try the matter under Sections 15 to 20.<sup>1</sup> In the case of plaints presented to the Court which has no jurisdiction to try the same, see O. 7 R. 10 infra and Section 14 of the Limitation Act, 1908.

5. Plaint to whom to be presented. — The plaint must be presented either to the Court or to such officer as it appoints in this behalf.<sup>1</sup> The presentation, therefore, of a plaint to a person not so authorised,<sup>2</sup> or out of office hours, to an officer authorized to receive plaints only within office hours, is not a valid presentation, unless such presentation is ratified by the Court on that very day.<sup>3</sup> The mere registration of a plaint subject to objections does not cure the defect.<sup>4</sup>

6. Time of presentation. — A plaint may be validly received on a Court holiday<sup>1</sup> or out of office hours at the Judge's club or at his private residence.<sup>2</sup> By such act of acceptance, the Judge constitutes himself "an officer appointed in this behalf."<sup>3</sup> But the Court is not bound to accept it,<sup>4</sup> and when it refuses to do so the Appellate Court will not interfere.<sup>5</sup>

Section 4 of the Limitation Act, 1908, provides that when the period of limitation for a suit, appeal or application expires on a day on which the Court is closed, the suit, appeal or application may be presented on the re-opening day.<sup>6</sup> Again, under Section 14 of the Limitation Act, 1908, where the plaintiff prosecutes a suit bona fide in a wrong Court and upon a return of the plaint by that Court, re-presents it to the

Judge then sends it for disposal to a subordinate Court, the real date of presentation of the plaint is the date on which it is presented to the District Judge and not the date on which it is sent to the subordinate Court.]] proper Court, the period during which the suit was being prosecuted in the wrong Court will be excluded in computing the period of limitation for instituting the suit.<sup>7</sup>

As to the validity of other proceedings of Court on holidays, see Order 20, Rule 1, infra.

7. Mode of presentation. — The word “presenting” implies delivery to the Court or to its officer either in person or by a recognised agent or pleader of a party.<sup>1</sup> This is also made clear by O. 3 R. 1 ante, which provides that any appearance, application or act in or to any Court by a party in such Court may, except where otherwise expressly provided, be done by the party in person or by his recognized agent or by his pleader. See also the rules of practice framed by the various High Courts.<sup>2</sup> The sending of a plaint by post<sup>3</sup> or the placing thereof on a table when the officer is not present<sup>4</sup> is, therefore, not a proper presentation. Similarly, the presentation of a plaint by a servant of the plaintiff who is not his recognized agent is not a valid presentation.<sup>5</sup> Where a plaintiff has attained majority before the institution of the suit but the plaint is presented by a person purporting to be next friend, the presentation is not invalid if the mistake is bona fide.<sup>6</sup>

8. Suit when commenced. — See Section 26.

9. Presentation of plaint in Revenue Court. — Revenue Courts have no authority to specify certain days on which plaints shall not be received.<sup>1</sup> The general principles as to the place, time and mode of presentation of plaints apply to the Revenue Courts as well. Where a plaint is presented to the Collector instead of to the Deputy Collector, the institution of the suit is not void for want of jurisdiction but is only voidable at the instance of the defendant.<sup>2</sup>

1. "Summons may be issued." — Sub-rule (1) of this rule is based on the maxim audi alteram partem "hear the other side," i. e., no one should be condemned unheard. The use of the word "may" in this rule cannot be taken to mean that it is optional with the Court to issue summons or not.<sup>1</sup> It has been simply used in view of the alternative remedy (viz., of sending a letter instead of a summons) in Rule 30, infra.

The necessity for serving a summons is dispensed with, however, where the defendant voluntarily appears at the presentation of the plaint and admits the plaintiff's claim and this is what the proviso to sub-rule 1 enacts.<sup>2</sup> There is no time limit within which a summons to appear has to be issued.<sup>3</sup>

1a. Defendant. — It cannot be said that a person is not a defendant to a suit until the summons has been taken out and served.<sup>1</sup>

1. Court may order party to appear in person. — Under O. 5 R. 1, sub-rule (2), a defendant has the option to appear in any one of the modes prescribed therein. But the Court may require the defendant or a pro forma party,<sup>1</sup> when necessary, to appear in person; and in that case the summons shall order accordingly. A plaintiff may likewise be ordered to appear in person. On such an order the party is bound to appear in person only on the date fixed therein. He is not bound to appear in person on any other date to which the suit is adjourned and the dismissal of the case on such date under O. 9 R. 12 for non-appearance is without jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> Nor can a Court order the personal appearance of a party under this rule after the case has passed the stage of service of summons to the defendants.<sup>3</sup> For a proviso to this rule, see Rule 4, infra.<sup>4</sup> This rule is also subject to exceptions provided by the Code in favour of certain individuals such as a Ruling Prince<sup>5</sup> or a pardanashin lady.<sup>6</sup> See Sections 132 and 133.

2. Consequences of non-appearance. — See Order 9 Rule 12, Note 1.

Delete the first paragraph and substitute the following in lieu thereof :

"R. 5. The Court shall determine, at the time of issuing the summons, whether it shall be —

(1) for the settlement of issues only, or (2) for the defendant to appear and state whether he contests or does not contest the claim and directing him if he contests to receive directions as to the date on which he has to file his written statement, the date of trial and other matters, and if he does not contest for final disposal of the suit at once ; or (3) for the final disposal of the suit ; and the summons shall contain a direction accordingly."

1. Summons for final disposal. — It is, no doubt, for the Court to determine at the time of issuing the summons, whether it should be for the settlement of issues only or for the final disposal of the suit. But it is desirable to issue summons for the final disposal of the suit only in simple cases.<sup>1</sup> It is not proper to issue summons for the final disposal in mortgage suits.<sup>2</sup>

1. Sufficient time. — It is not open to a plaintiff to obtain an ex parte decree before the returnable date mentioned in the summons.<sup>1</sup> A defendant is entitled to sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer in person or by pleader,<sup>2</sup> and Courts should carefully see that reasonable time is allowed to the defendant in all cases in order that the Courts themselves may not be made the instruments of fraud and injustice by means of those processes, the vigilant superintendence of the issue and the service of which is one of the most important duties of the Courts.<sup>3</sup> Thus, it has been held that a service in the afternoon of 27th January on an old woman of 65 to appear and answer in a Court some distance off on the morning of 29th January is not a due service.<sup>4</sup> The expression, "duly served" under Article 164 of the Limitation Act, 1908, however, does not mean "served in sufficient time to enable the party to attend the Court on the hearing date" but means only that the summons had been served in such a way that the defendant has knowledge of the suit,<sup>5</sup> and an application to set aside the ex parte decree must be made within 30 days from the date of decree.<sup>6</sup> The date of service is prima facie that shown in the return.<sup>7</sup>

An acknowledgment purporting to be signed by the defendant or an endorsement by postal servant that the defendant refused to take delivery may be deemed by the Court issuing the summons to be prima facie proof of service."

1. Mode of service.

2. Service by post.

1. Mode of service. — The Code prescribes three principal modes of serving a summons on a defendant<sup>1</sup> :

(1) Under this rule read with Rules 12, 16 and 18 infra, i. e., by delivering or tendering a copy of the summons to the defendant personally or to his duly empowered agent and taking his signature in token of acknowledgment of such service. This is the mode of service that should normally be adopted unless it is not possible to do so.<sup>2</sup>

(2) Where the summons cannot be served in the above manner by reason of the fact that the defendant refuses to sign the acknowledgment of service or cannot be found or has no agent duly empowered to accept service, it should be affixed to the outer door or other conspicuous part of the defendant's residence under Rule 17, infra.<sup>3</sup>

(3) Where the summons cannot be served in either of the above two modes, or there is reason to believe that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding service, the Court may order substituted service under Rule 20, infra, i. e., by affixing a copy of the summons in the Court house and also in some conspicuous part of the defendant's last residence, or in such other manner as the Court thinks fit. This, however, unlike the other two modes of service, must be done after obtaining the order of the Court therefor.

Besides the three modes of service prescribed by the Code, the Court may, in particular cases, direct service of the summons by post. See Note 3 to Rule 9 and the following Note to this rule.

2. Service by post. — Although the Court may, in a particular case, direct that the summons should be sent by post, the normal mode of service is personal service.<sup>1</sup> Service by registered post is, at any time, a poor substitute for personal service; it is allowed to a litigant as a matter of convenience and very slight evidence is enough to displace the presumption of service raised by it.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where a summons sent by post was returned as "refused" by a person who was not shown to have been the defendant, it was held that it was not a good service.<sup>3</sup>

Under Section 27 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, where any Act, passed after 11th March 1897 authorizes or requires any document to be served by post, then unless a different intention appears, the service shall be deemed to have been effected, unless the contrary is proved, at the time, when a properly addressed and stamped letter containing the document, and sent by registered post would in the ordinary course of post reach the addressee. Where, therefore, a summons is sent by registered post, e. g., under the provisions of R. 25, infra, properly addressed and is returned endorsed "refused," the Court can treat the service as sufficient.<sup>4</sup> It has been held that the words "unless the contrary is proved" in Section 27, General Clauses Act, refer both to the service and the time. Consequently, when notice is sent by registered post the presumption even as regards service is not conclusive but rebuttable.<sup>5</sup> That Section, however, does not apply to service by post authorized by an Act passed before 11th March 1897. In cases, therefore, arising under the old Code it was held that where a summons sent by registered post was returned as refused, the service could not be deemed to be sufficient unless there was sufficient proof of residence of the defendant in the place to which the summons was sent by post.<sup>6</sup>

A summons cannot be sent by post to any place to which letters are not registered by a post office in India.<sup>7</sup>

Under the proviso added to this rule by the Lahore High Court, service by registered post may be ordered even in the first instance. But if the defendant fails to appear, ex parte proceedings should not be taken but summons should be directed to be served by the ordinary process.<sup>8</sup> The Peshawar Court has also added a proviso to this rule, similar to that added by the Lahore High Court.<sup>9</sup> The Court has, however, no power to compel the plaintiff to deposit both the process fee and the postal charges, and cannot dismiss the suit for non-payment thereof.<sup>10</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> it was held that service on a party by registered post who refused to receive a summons was not due service, under the law as it stood before the new proviso.

affixing of the summons on the door without any such attempt is not sufficient.<sup>3</sup>

A person whose name does not correspond to the description in the summons is justified in refusing it, but if A had posed as B, and had dealings with the plaintiff and if he is given summons addressed to B, he knows it is for him, and consequently service in the name of B is sufficient notice of the suit to A.<sup>4</sup>

2. Service on minor. — There are no special provisions as to service on infants and therefore the same rules which apply to adults apply to minors also. There should be personal service or such other service as is prescribed by the Code.<sup>1</sup> Service on the guardian ad litem alone of the minor is not good.<sup>2</sup> Where the guardian was evading service but the notice was served on the minor, the former must be deemed to have received information and under such circumstances it was held that the minor could not be allowed to plead that the service was irregular.<sup>3</sup>

3. Service on pardanashin lady. — When the summons has to be served upon a woman who is not accustomed to appear in public, as for example, a pardanashin lady, personal service is not possible, and the summons may therefore be served on any adult male member of the family or on her agent empowered to receive summons.<sup>1</sup> If there is no agent so empowered, it can be affixed to the outer door of the house in which she ordinarily resides.<sup>2</sup>

4. Service on agent. — A service on the agent is valid only if he is empowered to accept service on behalf of the defendant. By Rule 6 of Order 3 any person living within the jurisdiction of the Court may be appointed an agent to accept service of process, by instrument in writing signed by the principal.<sup>1</sup> Thus, gumastas and servants<sup>2</sup> and managers<sup>3</sup> merely looking after the affairs of the defendant or holding general powers-of-attorney cannot accept service. But a partner will be deemed an agent of the firm.<sup>4</sup>

(2) For the purpose of this rule the master of a ship shall be deemed to be the agent of the owner or charterer.

1. Manager or agent personally carrying on business. — In order that this rule may apply, two conditions are necessary to be satisfied —

- (a) the defendant residing without the jurisdiction of the Court must carry on business or work within jurisdiction through a manager or agent, and
- (b) the suit must relate to such business or work, that is, business or work either actually itself carried on by the agent or manager, or forming part of the business, in the sense of a connected course of transactions to the management of which he has been duly appointed.<sup>1</sup>

The manager or agent contemplated by the rule is one who has an initiative and independent discretion, though possibly subject to general orders for guidance.<sup>2</sup> Thus, a person simply employed for a particular voyage to obtain freight,<sup>3</sup> or a mere servant employed to do a particular work, or a person who acts also for other firms not initiating any business himself,<sup>4</sup> is not an agent or manager within this rule.

A service on an agent or manager as contemplated by this rule is valid service whether the fact of service is actually communicated to the principal or not.<sup>5</sup> In order that a service on an agent of a foreign corporation may be valid, the agent must have power to enter into contracts on behalf of such corporation.<sup>6</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule.
2. "Adult male member of the family."
3. Service on servant not valid — Explanation.

1. Scope of the Rule. — It is only when the defendant cannot be found and has no agent empowered to accept service on his behalf that service may be made on any adult member of his family. It cannot be said that the defendant "cannot be found" merely because he was not at home or had left for a particular place when the process-server went to effect service on him.<sup>1</sup> It is the duty of the process-server to take pains to find out the person to be served<sup>2</sup> and for this purpose he should make enquiries not only of the relations of the defendant but also of the neighbours.<sup>3</sup> In the absence of such an attempt at personal service on the defendant, the service on a member of the family is not sufficient.<sup>4</sup>

2. "Adult male member of the family."—A person above the age of 16 years has been held to be an "adult" within the meaning of this rule.<sup>1</sup> The service must be on an adult male member of the family. The law does not recognize service on any female member of the defendant's family.<sup>2</sup>

Where service was effected on an adult male member of the family under Rule 15 and the defendant was in communication with his family members, it was held that the service was sufficient.<sup>3</sup>

The adult male member on whom service is made must be one who is residing with the defendant.<sup>4</sup>

3. Service on servant not valid — Explanation. — As the Explanation shows, a servant is not a member of the family. Service on a servant therefore is not sufficient.<sup>1</sup> Service on a munim is similarly not one on a member of the family and is not valid.<sup>2</sup>

R. 16. [S. 79.] Where the serving officer delivers or tenders a copy of the summons to the defendant personally, or to an agent or other person on his behalf, he shall require the signature of the person to whom the copy is so delivered or tendered to an acknowledgment of service endorsed on the original summons.

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule.
2. "Shall require the signature."

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule contemplates three distinct classes of service —

- (a) On the defendant in person.
- (b) On the defendant's duly appointed agent.
- (c) Upon any other person on behalf of the defendant.

The third class of service is contemplated by the law only when the party cannot himself be found.<sup>1</sup>

The words "other person on his behalf" can, according to context, only mean persons as contemplated by the preceding Rules 13 to 15.

2. "Shall require the signature." — As far as possible the officer serving the process should carry out the service in one of the modes prescribed by this rule and Rule 17 infra.<sup>1</sup> In other words, the serving officer delivering or tendering a copy of the summons should require the person served to sign an acknowledgment of service under this rule, and on his refusal to do so, should affix a copy of the summons to the outer door or other conspicuous part of his residence as prescribed by Rule 17.<sup>2</sup> Where a copy of the summons is tendered or delivered to the defendant but the latter refuses to sign the acknowledgment of service and the process-server does not affix the copy as per Rule 17, the defendant cannot be taken to have been validly served.<sup>3</sup>

A refusal to receive the summons or sign an acknowledgment of service is not an offence under Section 173 of the Indian Penal Code.<sup>4</sup>

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The words "after using all due and reasonable diligence" are new. See Note 5 below.
2. The words "or on some other conspicuous part" have been added to provide for the contingency of the house having no outer door.
3. The words "or carries on business or personally works for gain" have been added.<sup>1</sup>
4. The words "and the name and address of the person (if any) by whom the house was identified and in whose presence the copy was affixed" have been newly added. See Note 11.

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule enacts the second of the three modes of service referred to in Note 1 to O. 5 R. 10, and provides that it should be resorted to when the first of the said modes of service, namely, that prescribed in Rules 10, 12 and 16, is not possible.<sup>1</sup> The rule is of a highly penal nature and must be strictly complied with in order to give validity to the service purporting to be effected thereunder.<sup>2</sup>

This rule applies also to notices served under Section 49 of the Bengal Tenancy Act<sup>3</sup> and to notices under the Oudh Rent Act.<sup>4</sup>

See also the undermentioned case.<sup>5</sup>

3. Refusal to sign acknowledgment. — When a summons was offered to the defendant with an intimation of its purport, but the defendant without accepting it, went into his house and shut himself up, and the process-server affixed the summons on the outer door of the defendant's house, it was held that it was due service.<sup>1</sup> Where the defendant or his agent or other persons referred to in Rules 13 to 16 refuse to sign the acknowledgment and the service is effected by affixture to the outer door of the defendant's dwelling, the Court is perfectly justified in treating the service as good.<sup>2</sup>

Where the defendant refuses to sign the acknowledgment, but the serving officer does not affix a copy of the summons on the outer door, there is no valid service. See Note 2 to Order 5 Rule 16.

4. Where the defendant cannot be found. — The affixture of summons will be a valid service under this rule only where, either —

1. the defendant or his agent or such other person as is mentioned in Rules 13 to 15 refuses to sign the acknowledgment, or
2. the serving officer, after using all due and reasonable diligence, cannot find the defendant and there is no agent or other person on whom the service can be made.

A person cannot be said to be “not found” within the meaning of this rule merely by reason of his being temporarily absent at another place.<sup>1</sup> The serving officer, before he can take advantage of the provisions of this rule, must use all due and reasonable diligence to find the defendant.<sup>2</sup>

But where, either by reason of the custom of the country or for some other reason it is impossible for the serving officer to obtain access to the person to be served, the case will be covered by the description “where the defendant cannot be found by the serving officer.”<sup>3</sup> Thus, a service by affixture will be good if the defendant is keeping out of the way to avoid service,<sup>4</sup> or if he shuts himself up in his house and does not come out for a reasonable time,<sup>5</sup> or where the defendant is a purdanashin lady who is not able to accept service personally and has no agent or other person to accept service on her behalf,<sup>6</sup> or where the defendant is lying sick and the serving officer cannot get access to him.<sup>7</sup>

The words “where the defendant cannot be found by the serving officer” will also cover a case where the absence of the defendant is for an indefinite period. The serving officer is not bound to wait indefinitely for the defendant in such a case and will be justified in making the affixture under this rule.<sup>8</sup>

5. "After using all due and reasonable diligence." — These words are new and have been added to give effect to the decisions under the old Code which insisted on the necessity of a bona fide attempt at personal service.<sup>1</sup> The serving officer will not be deemed to have exercised due and reasonable diligence unless he has made a real and substantial effort after proper inquiries, to find the defendant.<sup>2</sup> He must attend at the right place and time at which he may expect to find the defendant, and, if he is absent, must make reasonable inquiries and take steps to discover where he is.<sup>3</sup> In Cohen v. Nursing Dass, I. L. R. 19 Calcutta 201, Sir Comer Petheram, C. J., observed as follows:

"It is true you may go to a man's house and not find him, but that is not attempting to find him. You should go to his house, make inquiries and, if necessary, follow him. You should make inquiries to find out when he is likely to be at home and go to the house at a time when he can be found. Before service like this can be effected, it must be shown that proper efforts have been made to find out when and where the defendant is likely to be found—not, as seems to be done in this country, to go to his house in a perfunctory way, and, because he has not been found there, to affix a copy of the summons on the outer door of his house."

If the defendant has two residences, inquiries must be made at both the places.<sup>4</sup> As has already been seen in Note 4, a mere temporary absence will not justify affixture even though the defendant had previously refused to accept service.<sup>5</sup> Where the process-server, not finding the defendant at his residence, tendered the summons to his adult son who refused it and, without making any further inquiry of the son as to where the defendant was, affixed the summons to the outer door of the residence, it was held that the service was not proper.<sup>6</sup>

It has been held in the undermentioned case<sup>7</sup> that the applicability of the words "after using all due and reasonable diligence" is specially restricted to the case where there is no agent empowered to accept service nor any other person on whom the service can be made, and that, where there is such a person, a diligent effort need not be made to effect personal service. It has also been held therein that even if the agent or other person refuses the summons, it is still necessary to show that the defendant "cannot be found." It is submitted that this latter view is not correct inasmuch as the Section states: "Where the defendant or his agent or such other person aforesaid refuses to sign the acknowledgment.....the serving officer shall affix a copy," etc.

6. Proof of service. — See Order 5 Rule 19.

7. Affixture. — As to the conditions under which alone an affixture could be made under this rule, see Notes 4 and 5 above. The affixture should be made on the outer door or other conspicuous part of the house in which the defendant ordinarily resides or carries on business or personally works for gain.<sup>1</sup> Where the serving officer finds that the defendant never resided in the village, he must return the summons unserved. Affixture in such a case is absolutely useless.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, an affixture to the outer door of a house in which the defendant was actually found but which was not his ordinary place of residence is not sufficient.<sup>3</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>4</sup>

The rule requires that there should be actual affixture of the summons. Merely leaving a copy of the summons on the teapoy in the defendant's house is insufficient.<sup>5</sup>

Where summons is sent by registered post (see O. 5 R. 9 Note 3) and the defendant refuses to accept delivery, no affixture of the summons on the outer door of the house or any conspicuous place is prescribed by law.<sup>6</sup>

8. Service on minor. — See Order 5 Rule 12.

9. "Resides or carries on business or personally works for gain." — See Section 20.

10. Temporary residence of defendant. — See Notes 4 and 5 above.

11. Return of service. — The law requires that the action of the person charged with the service of summons should be set out in full and must be supported by an affidavit.<sup>1</sup> The return must show that the defendant could not be found, that there was no other person on whom service could be made, that the summons was affixed on the outer door or some other conspicuous part of the house and that the house was one in which the defendant ordinarily resided or carried on business or personally worked for gain.<sup>2</sup> A return that the defendant was not in the village<sup>3</sup> or that the summons was served on the defendant's paternal uncle who was a member of a joint family<sup>4</sup> was held to be defective in the absence of an endorsement that the defendant could not be found. So also a report that "respondent was not found" was held to be not good as it did not state that any effort or inquiry was made to find him.<sup>5</sup> The report must say that the copy of the summons was affixed to the dwelling house.<sup>6</sup> It must show that at the time of service the house was the ordinary residence of the defendant,<sup>7</sup> state the circumstances under which the affixture was made,<sup>8</sup> and also state the names and addresses of persons, if any, in whose presence the copy of the summons was affixed.<sup>9</sup> Failure to add in the return that the defendant's time of return was indefinite or was not known is, however, not a serious mistake.<sup>10</sup>

The addition of the words "the name and address of the person, if any . . . . . identified" merely gives effect to the existing practice. The words "if any" have been inserted to prevent a service without any identifier (e. g., where the defendant is known to the process-server in person) being deemed illegal.

1. Form of return. — See Appendix B to Schedule I, Form 11.

The service of a summons or of a notice upon a person is a very important step and the law very properly requires that the action of the person charged with the service of such notice or summons should be set out in full and be supported by his affidavit. Until this has been done the summons cannot be considered to have been duly served.<sup>1</sup>

See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>2</sup>

2. Person identifying defendant.—It is not incumbent on a party to provide an identifier for the purpose of identifying the person served. The identifier can be a person in the village knowing the defendant.<sup>1</sup>

(It cannot be held that the minutest departure from procedure laid down invalidates the entire service, and it is a matter of fact in every case, within the jurisdiction of the Court to determine what the departure is, and whether notwithstanding that departure from the prescribed procedure, the service has in fact been effected.)

1. ('28) AIR 1928 Pat 114 (114, 115),

3. Presumption as to service. — There is a presumption of service as stated in the process-server's report, and the burden lies on the party questioning it, to show that the return is incorrect.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, when there is any entry made ex parte in the order-sheet of the Court that summons has been served, there is no presumption that such entry is false and the party questioning it has to show that it is not correct.<sup>2</sup>

It has been held by the Calcutta High Court that the report of the serving officer that a summons was served on a person is not evidence as to service unless the serving officer is examined and the service is proved.<sup>3</sup> But where summons is sent under Rules 24, 26, 27 and 28, the return is evidence. See Rules 26 and 30 infra.

But an affidavit of the process-server is admissible in evidence and in the absence of contest it would normally be considered sufficient evidence of the regularity of the proceedings. But if the fact of service is denied, it is desirable that the process-server should be put into the witness-box and opportunity of cross-examination given to those who deny the service.<sup>4</sup>

4. Revision. — The mere fact that lower Courts are wrong on the question of law relating to service of summons is not enough for the High Court to interfere in revision under Section 115.<sup>1</sup>

CALCUTTA

Substitute the following :

"R. 19. Where a summons is returned under Rule 17, the Court shall, if the return under that rule has not been verified by the declaration of the serving officer, and may, if it has been so verified, examine the serving officer, on oath, or cause him to be so examined by another Court, touching his proceedings, and may make such further inquiry in the matter as it thinks fit; and shall either declare that the summons has been duly served or order such service as it thinks fit."

Synopsis

1. "Examine on oath."
2. "Shall declare that the summons has been duly served."
3. "Or order such service as it thinks fit."
4. Proof of service.

1. "Examine on oath." — If the return is not verified by the affidavit of the serving officer, the Court is bound to examine him before deciding as to the sufficiency of service; and the omission to do so is a material irregularity.<sup>1</sup> It cannot be said that there is due service in such a case.<sup>2</sup>

2. "Shall declare that the summons has been duly served." — The words "duly served" in this rule mean, served in such a manner as to give the defendant information of the proceedings against him.<sup>1</sup> Where, therefore, it appears from the return of the serving officer that there is no likelihood that the summons will come to the defendant's knowledge in due time or a probability that it will not so come to his knowledge, the Court should not declare the summons as duly served.<sup>2</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Bombay and by the Chief Court of Oudh that the Code in the matter of service of summons does not take into account the female members of the defendant's family and does not rely upon the presumption that they will take steps to inform the defendant of what takes place in his absence.<sup>3</sup> The High Courts of Madras and Calcutta have, on the other hand, held that an affixture of notice to the knowledge of the wife of the defendant is sufficient service under the law.<sup>4</sup>

Before the Court decides that there has been due service, it must be satisfied that the provisions of Rule 17 were really complied with, namely that the serving officer had used all due and reasonable diligence to find the defendant before affixing the summons<sup>5</sup> or that the defendant was keeping out of the way for purposes of avoiding service<sup>6</sup> or that he refused service.

There is a difference of opinion as to whether the declaration of due service under this rule should be express. In the undermentioned cases<sup>7</sup> the High Court of Madras has held that an express order is necessary. The High Court of Allahabad also seems to take the same view.<sup>8</sup> In two other cases, however, the High Court of Madras held that the declaration may be an implied one, e. g., where the Court orders attachment on receipt of the return by the process-server of the notice.<sup>9</sup> The Oudh Chief Court and the Lahore High Court have also taken a similar view.<sup>10</sup> It is submitted that the latter view is not correct. The provision for examination of the serving officer and for further inquiry in the absence of an affidavit by the serving officer, shows clearly that the spirit of the rule demands an express order.

The order should be made as early as possible after the summons is returned, and failure to pass such an order is not a mere irregularity.<sup>11</sup> An ex parte decree passed without a declaration of due service is liable to be set aside.<sup>12</sup> Where the summons is returned unserved, the Court should pass subsequent orders, not vaguely but very clearly, stating the reason for non-service.<sup>13</sup>

Where summons is sent by one Court to another Court for service, the serving Court is the proper Court to declare as to the propriety of the service.<sup>14</sup> See also Notes to Rule 23, infra.

3. "Or order such service as it thinks fit." — Even where the provisions of Rule 17 have been technically complied with, the Court may order fresh summons to another address or order service in another mode where it considers that the defendant could not get knowledge of the suit by the service effected. In Khiroda Sundari Dasi v. Nabin Chandra Saha,<sup>1</sup> the High Court of Calcutta observed as follows :

"It is open to the Court even where there has been a technical compliance with the provisions of Rule 17 to order service in another mode if the Court thinks fit to do so in the interests of justice. The Court may in a case of this description, direct the issue of summons to purdanashin ladies by means of notice sent by registered post, so that the cover may, in due course, reach the lady herself."

4. Proof of service.—The best proof of service is the return which the serving officer is bound to send to the Court and which must contain all that he has done in the matter of effecting service.<sup>1</sup> As to the admissibility of the report in evidence without the serving officer being examined as a witness, see Note 3 to Rule 18.

Service of process on unknown person. See Note 4.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule enacts the third of the three modes of service prescribed by the Code and referred to in Note 1 to O. 5 R. 10 and is called substituted service. It is to be adopted where there is reason to believe that the defendant is keeping out of the way for the purpose of evading service or that for some other reason the summons cannot be served in the ordinary way. But it should not be used in a way which is unbusinesslike or ridiculous, e. g., where substituted service is made by affixture to the door of the court-house by way of serving the defendant admitted on all hands to be in Natal, South Africa.<sup>1</sup>

The substituted service under this rule, unlike the two other modes of service, can only be taken by order of the Court to that effect.<sup>2</sup> And it can be ordered only in cases where a personal service could have been effected if there were no difficulties in the way.<sup>3</sup> Thus, a foreign sovereign over whom the Courts have no jurisdiction cannot be ordered to be served by substitution under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

It has been held by the High Court of Allahabad<sup>5</sup> that a notice to show cause why a person should not be appointed guardian of an infant, cannot be served by substituted service under this rule.

The procedure laid down by this rule will also be applicable to the service of notice in appeals.<sup>6</sup> See Order 48 Rule 2.

2. "Where the Court is satisfied." — Before ordering substituted service the Court should be satisfied that the conditions on which alone it can be ordered exist, namely, that the defendant is keeping out of the way to avoid service<sup>1</sup> or that for any other reason service cannot be effected in the ordinary way.<sup>2</sup> The Court is not bound to order substituted service merely because the defendant has refused to accept service.<sup>3</sup> The mere statement of the plaintiff that he cannot ascertain the address of the defendant, without proof of reasonable efforts having been made to find out his whereabouts, is not enough to enable the Court to pass an order for substituted service.<sup>4</sup> Where, however, the plaintiff has done his best to get the defendant served personally and fails<sup>5</sup> or the Court is satisfied from the affidavit of the serving officer that the defendant is purposely evading service,<sup>6</sup> an order for substituted service can properly be made.

The non-fulfilment of either condition necessary before an order under this rule can be passed is a material irregularity<sup>7</sup> and an ex parte decree passed on such service being accepted as sufficient, will be set aside on an application under O. 9, R. 13.<sup>8</sup> Thus, where the plaintiff knew the whereabouts of the defendant but obtained by false representation an order for substituted service by giving the Court to understand that the defendant had been deliberately avoiding service, it was held that the defendant had not been properly served as required by law and the ex parte proceedings against him were not binding on him.<sup>9</sup>

The advisability of effecting substituted service is a matter primarily for the trial Court, and the Appellate Court has no jurisdiction to consider whether the order of the trial Court is based on sufficient grounds. It has only to see whether the order issued is according to law and whether the trial Court was satisfied that the conditions of this rule were fulfilled.<sup>10</sup>

3. Evasion of service by the defendant.—The question when the defendant must be deemed to be keeping out of the way has to be determined according to the circumstances of each case.<sup>1</sup> Mere temporary absence on the part of the defendant does not amount to evasion.<sup>2</sup> Where the plaintiff knew all along that the defendant had left a certain place two or three years before the suit, and he further knew that the defendant had left his brother in that place and was in communication with him, it cannot be said that there has been an evasion of service by the defendant.<sup>3</sup> But where a man gets away from the serving officer and shuts himself up with the obvious intention of not allowing the process-server to hold any communication with him, it clearly amounts to evasion.<sup>4</sup>

4. Non-possibility of service for other reasons.—Even though the defendant is not keeping out of the way, the Court has got power to order substituted service if it is satisfied that for any other reason the summons cannot be served in the ordinary manner.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where by the custom in India the respondent, a Hindu woman of rank, could not be served personally, the Judicial Committee ordered service under this rule on her Dewan.<sup>2</sup> So also in the case of unascertained persons or persons who cannot be traced and about whom it cannot be ascertained whether they are alive or dead, substituted service can be ordered. Thus, it has been held that where one of the co-owners is missing, the only reasonable course is to make him and his heirs parties and take out substituted service.<sup>3</sup>

5. Mode of effecting substituted service.—Service under this rule is effected by affixing a copy of the summons on the Notice Board of the Court-house, by affixing another copy to the outer door of the house in which the defendant was known to have last resided and by advertising in such of the newspapers as the Court may direct.<sup>1</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Lahore that the service by affixture will be bad unless a copy of the plaint is also affixed along with the summons.<sup>2</sup> The fact that a

6. "Shall fix such time"—Sub-rule (3).— Under this rule the Court is bound to fix a time for the appearance of the defendant and it should see that ample and reasonable time is allowed for notice to come to the knowledge of the person concerned.<sup>1</sup> Thus, the publication of a notice in a newspaper in Lahore requiring a party at Hardoi to appear in Gurdaspur Court on the next day of the issue of paper is not a valid substituted service.<sup>2</sup>

7. Return of substituted service.— There is no provision in the Code for the return of such service showing how and when it was effected. But the Courts generally satisfy themselves by the affidavit or examination of the affixing officer and the production of the newspaper in which the notice was published.<sup>1</sup>

8. Substituted service is as effective as personal service.— Sub-rule (2) of this rule provides that service substituted by order of the Court shall be as effectual as personal service.<sup>1</sup> The words "as effectual" mean "as effectual for the purpose of enabling the Court to proceed with the suit."<sup>2</sup>

Where service has been effected under this rule and an ex parte decree is passed, the defendant is entitled to show that the circumstances justifying the order for such service did not exist, e. g., he can show that he was not keeping out of the way for the purpose of avoiding service.<sup>3</sup> The fact that the original summons was destroyed will be no ground for refusing to set aside an ex parte decree.<sup>4</sup>

As to whether substituted service under this rule "is due service," within the meaning of Article 164 of the Limitation Act and whether time for an application to set aside an ex parte decree passed after such service runs from the date of the decree or from the date of the defendant's knowledge of the decree, see the Authors' Commentary on the Limitation Act, Article 164 and the Notes thereto.

9. Revision.— An order made under this rule without ascertaining whether the necessary conditions exist is open to revision.<sup>1</sup>

1. Service of summons outside jurisdiction. — As a rule a Court cannot serve its own process outside its jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> Under this rule a summons against a defendant residing within the jurisdiction of another Court should be sent to that Court by one of the officers of the Court issuing the summons, or by post, and it is the duty of the Court so receiving the summons to serve it on the defendant. (See Rule 23.) The service of summons effected outside the jurisdiction of the Court issuing it, and without any order of the Court having jurisdiction, is irregular.<sup>2</sup>

Duty of Court to which summons is sent.

Synopsis

1. Sufficiency of service.

2. Form of return — See Form 10 Appendix B, Schedule I.

1. Sufficiency of service. — There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the Court to which the summons has been transmitted for the service has power to declare as to the sufficiency of service and the effect of such a declaration on the powers of the transmitting Court. According to the High Court of Calcutta, Section 85 (O. 5 R. 23) does not require the Court which served the summons, to make a return to the Court from which it issued touching the sufficiency of service. The duty of the serving Court, according to the Calcutta view, is to proceed on receipt of the summons, as if it had itself issued it, and then to return it, with the record, if any, framed under this rule, to the Court which issued it. It then devolves upon the Court issuing the summons to determine upon the sufficiency of service before proceeding to try the suit.<sup>1</sup> The Allahabad<sup>2</sup> and Bombay<sup>3</sup> High Courts as well as the Chief Courts of Oudh<sup>4</sup> and Lower Burma<sup>5</sup> have held, on the other hand, that the last sentence of Rule 19 enables the serving Court also to make a declaration as to sufficiency of service as that Court is in the best position to decide whether the process has been duly served or not, and that such a declaration raises a strong presumption of due and proper service. But this presumption obtains only donec probetur in contrarium (until the contrary be proved) and there may now and then occur cases, where there is something in the return distinctly negating that presumption.<sup>6</sup> Such occasions are of course rare and on those occasions, the Court issuing the process should not interfere unless it be on strong and good evidence. The certificate of return must, however, be signed by the Judge himself and not by the munsarim.<sup>7</sup>

1. Amendments after 1908. — The words within the brackets in clause (b) of this rule have been inserted by Act XVII of 1914. For other amendments, see footnotes to the text of the Rule.

2. Scope and object of the Rule. — A special bailiff cannot be sent to execute a civil process in a foreign territory.<sup>1</sup> This rule provides for the service of summons in a foreign territory through a Political Agent or Court. Such summons may be sent direct by the Court and not necessarily through the District Judge.<sup>2</sup> A Court is not bound to proceed under this rule but can proceed under Rule 25 even where this rule applies.<sup>3</sup>

As no resident of a foreign territory can be compelled to appear before a British Indian Tribunal, service according to this rule is unnecessary if a mere notification of the proceedings is valid under the law of the tribunal.<sup>4</sup>

2. Service on soldiers.

1. Amendments after 1908. — By the Repealing and Amending Act, 1927 (X of 1927), the words "or airman" were inserted after the word "soldier." See also foot-notes to the text of the Rule.

2. Service on soldiers. — When a summons is sent to a Commanding Officer for service on a soldier under him, he is bound to cause the summons to be served upon him.<sup>1</sup> He cannot refuse to have the same served, on the ground that under Section 144 of the Army Act of 1881 (44 & 45 Vict., Ch. 58) the soldier was entitled to protection, the debt sued upon being less than £30.<sup>2</sup>

A soldier, not serving in the army, but serving in the civil department, and residing beyond the military cantonments will be amenable to the ordinary civil jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>3</sup>

Similarly, a mechanic serving in the Indian marine is subject exactly to the same rules as every other person under the Code as regards service.<sup>4</sup>

When notice of an appeal was accepted by a sepoy in service, and received without demur, he cannot subsequently urge in an application to set aside an ex parte decree that he was not duly served as the same was not sent through the Commanding Officer.<sup>5</sup>

PLEADINGS GENERALLY

O. 6 R. 1

Pleading.

[Cf. Jud. Act, 1873, S. 100.]

Synopsis

1. Scope and object of the Order.

2. Purpose of pleading.

3. Counter-claim by defendant.

See Order 8 Rule 6.

1. Scope and object of the Order.—The whole of this Order except Rules 14 and 15 is new and has been based upon the system of pleading introduced by the Judicature Act in England which is generally admitted to be the best form of pleading in civil suits. The object of introducing this Order is, as is observed by the Select Committee in their Statement of Objects and Reasons, that : "It is most necessary that litigants in this country should come to trial with all issues clearly defined and that cases should not be expanded or grounds shifted without reference to the true facts."

In their Notes on Clauses, the Select Committee also observe that they have, however, endeavoured to modify the rigour of the English rules by providing in accordance with Section 55 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, that the Court may, notwithstanding the absence of a specific denial, require any fact to be proved by the party who relies upon it. This modification of the rigour of the English rules gives effect to the view that had been taken under the old Code that the strict rule that averments not traversed must be taken to be admitted is not applicable to India.<sup>1</sup>

"Pleading" means plaint or written statement. Thus, an application to sue as pauper is not a pleading inasmuch as it becomes a plaint only after it is granted.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, a statement by a pleader<sup>3</sup> or a petition for leave to execute the decree<sup>4</sup> is not a pleading. A defendant's pleading is the written statement. A plaintiff's pleading may be either a plaint or a written statement. Thus, where the defendant in his written statement pleads a set-off, the plaintiff can file a written statement in answer thereto, under O. 8 R. 8. The parties may, subsequent to the written statement of the defendant, also file written statements or additional written statements, by leave of the Court or under orders of the Court, under Order 8 Rule 9.

2. Purpose of pleading.—The object of pleadings is to narrow the parties to definite issues and to diminish expense and delay especially as regards the amount of testimony required on either side at the hearing.<sup>1</sup> In Sayad Muhammad v. Fattah Muhammad,<sup>2</sup> Lord Halsbury delivering the opinion of the Privy Council observed :

"Whatever system of pleading may exist, the sole object of it is that each side may be fully alive to the questions that are about to be argued in order that they may have an opportunity of bringing forward such evidence as may be appropriate to the issues."

Facts not material at the stage of the pleading. See Note 4.
General and fundamental rules of pleading and special applications thereof. See Note 1.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This is the main rule laying down the fundamental principles of pleading. It lays down —

1. Affirmatively, that a pleading shall contain and contain only, material facts on which the party pleading relies.
2. Negatively, that it shall not contain facts which are only evidence by which such material facts are to be proved.

The other rules in this Order are all special applications of the general rule laid down in this rule. It will here be convenient to summarise and refer to the other rules as to what the pleadings should or should not contain.

1. All necessary particulars must be stated in the pleadings (O. 6 Rr. 4 and 5).
2. The performance of conditions precedent need not be alleged but the non-performance of such conditions, if relied on, must be pleaded (O. 6 R. 6).
3. No pleading shall, except by way of amendment, raise any new ground of claim or allege any fact inconsistent with previous pleadings of the party pleading the same (O. 6 R 7).
4. A bare denial of a contract alleged by the opposite party shall not be construed as a denial of the legality or sufficiency in law of such contract (O. 6 R. 8).

O. 6 R. 2
Notes 1-8

5. Documents need not be set out at length unless the precise words are material (O. 6 R. 9).
6. Conditions of the mind such as malice, knowledge, etc., may be alleged as a fact without setting out the circumstances from which the same is to be implied (O. 6 R. 10).
7. Notice may be alleged as a fact without setting out the form, or the precise terms of such notice, or the circumstances from which it is to be inferred (O. 6 R. 11).
8. Implied contracts or relations between persons may be alleged as a fact and the series of letters, conversations or circumstances from which the contracts are to be inferred, need only be set out generally and not in detail (O. 6 R. 12).
9. Facts which the law presumes in a party's favour or as to which the burden of proof lies on the other side need not be pleaded unless first denied (O. 6 R. 13).

2. Pleadings must state only facts and not law. — A pleading must state only facts and not law.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that it is for the Court itself to find out and examine all pleas of law that may apply to the facts,<sup>2</sup> and the parties can urge them at any time before judgment is pronounced.<sup>3</sup> It is not enough to plead merely that a right or liability exists, or that an act was unlawful or wrongful, or that the defendant is guilty of negligence,<sup>4</sup> or that the plaintiff is entitled as the heir-at-law to certain properties,<sup>5</sup> or that there was a donatio mortis causa.<sup>6</sup> The facts which establish these pleas must be stated in each case. But it is not necessary to state the legal effect of the facts stated.<sup>7</sup> Nor is it necessary to reply to a plea of limitation that "the statute does not apply" or "that the case has been taken out of the statute."<sup>8</sup> If a person sues for recovery of land, he must state the nature and particulars of his title.<sup>9</sup> In regard to an allegation that the defendant did an act "wrongfully, unlawfully and improperly" or "without any justification therefor or right so to do" without setting out the facts from which such conduct is to be inferred, it was said: "These epithets under the present system of pleadings are useless and redundant. They add nothing whatever to the plaintiff's case. They are merely now epithets of abuse. They were formerly in declarations essential, because under that form of pleading, legal rights were stated for facts; but facts alone are stated now."<sup>10</sup>

3. The facts stated must be material facts. — The words "material facts" mean —

1. All facts upon which the plaintiff's cause of action or the defendant's defence depends; in other words, all those facts which must be proved in order to establish the existence of a cause of action or defence;<sup>1</sup> and

Note 3

2. All facts which, though not necessary to establish the cause of action or defence, but which the party pleading them is entitled to prove at the trial are also material facts. Thus, in a suit for damages for breach of a contract, the cause of action consists in the making of the contract and of its breach. A fact which is necessary to fix the quantum of damages may be proved by the parties at the trial, though the cause of action or the defence does not depend upon it. Such a fact is, therefore, also a material fact and must be pleaded in the pleading.<sup>2</sup>

It is essential that all the material facts should be stated<sup>3</sup> so as not to embarrass the opposite party and so as to put him on his guard and tell him what he has to meet when the case comes on for trial.<sup>4</sup> Thus, a plaintiff suing on his title is bound to state the nature of the deeds on which he relies in deducing his title.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, a party relying upon the fact that notice of dishonour is not necessary<sup>6</sup> or that the ordinary age of minority of the party has been prolonged up to 21<sup>7</sup> or that a property admittedly purchased by A in the name of B was for B's advancement<sup>8</sup> or that a woman claiming maintenance has lost her right on account of her incontinence,<sup>9</sup> is bound to allege those facts in his pleading.

If a party omits to state a material fact he will not be allowed to give evidence of that fact at the trial unless the pleading is amended under Rule 17 infra.<sup>10</sup> If, however, a party states facts which are not material, then, unless such statements are embarrassing or ambiguous, the Courts will not, as a rule, inquire very closely into the materiality thereof.<sup>11</sup> Thus, where the particulars of a claim are given with reasonable precision, an incorrect description of one particular fact would not be fatal to the claim.<sup>12</sup> Similarly, in a suit for restitution of conjugal rights the plea of denial of marriage was held to include the denial of the validity of marriage.<sup>13</sup> But a plaint which is unnecessarily prolix, argumentative, and full of irrelevant matter should either be rejected or returned for striking out the unnecessary matter.<sup>14</sup>

4. Facts to anticipate opponent's answer not to be pleaded.—It is no part of the pleading to anticipate the opponent's pleading and to state facts in answer thereto. In other words, a party should not plead to facts which have not become material at the stage of filing his pleading.<sup>1</sup> Thus, in an action for libel or slander by publishing particular words, the defendant should not plead that he used other words than those complained of, and that such words were justified in law.<sup>2</sup>

5. Alternative and inconsistent allegations.—In construing O. 19 R. 4 of the English rules corresponding to this rule, Lindley, L. J., observed in In re Morgan; Owen v. Morgan<sup>1</sup> as follows :

"Now I cannot myself construe that order as prohibiting inconsistent pleadings. One sees perfectly well what is meant by it, vis., that each party is to state succinctly and concisely and in a summary form, the material facts on which he relies. Now a person may rely upon one set of facts if he can succeed in proving them and he may rely upon another set of facts if he can succeed in proving them."

It was held by Mullick, J., of the Patna High Court in the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> that the scope of the Code is more limited in India and forbids a party who is not a stranger to the transaction and who has personal knowledge of the true state of facts from pleading inconsistent facts. And in the undermentioned cases<sup>3</sup> it was held that a party can plead inconsistent facts, at any rate where he is a stranger to the transaction, thus appearing to suggest that he cannot do so if he was not a stranger to the transaction. This view, it is submitted, is not correct and is distinctly opposed to the general trend of decisions of all the High Courts.<sup>4</sup> A perusal of O. 1 R. 3 (Joinder of defendants), O. 2 R. 3 (Joinder of causes of action) and O. 7 Rr. 7 and 8 (Reliefs that may be stated by the plaintiff) will clearly show that inconsistent sets of facts may be pleaded and relief claimed in the alternative. The object of permitting alternative reliefs to be claimed in one litigation is to obviate the necessity of another litigation, to dispose of the same controversy or the subject-matter of the same relief though the ground upon which the relief is claimed may be different.<sup>5</sup> In Bhutan Mohini Dasi v. Kumud Bala Dasi,<sup>6</sup> their Lordships of the Calcutta High Court observed as follows :

"It may be conceded that the Code of Civil Procedure does not prohibit inconsistent pleadings and that there is nothing to prevent either party from setting up two or more inconsistent sets of material facts and claiming relief thereunder in the alternative. A plaintiff may rely upon several different rights alternatively, although they may be inconsistent; so a defendant may raise by his statement of defence, without leave, as many distinct and separate, and therefore inconsistent, defences as he may think proper."

The following inconsistent pleas have accordingly been held not to be prohibited by the Code —

1. A plea of forgery and a plea of execution under undue influence or fraud, or a plea of want of consideration.<sup>7</sup>

8. Pre-emptor claiming to pre-empt half on the ground that the vendor had no title to half and alternatively claiming to pre-empt the whole if the vendor was found entitled to the whole.<sup>14</sup>

But the right to plead inconsistent sets of facts is subject to the provision in Rule 16 infra which provides that the Court may strike out any matter which may tend to prejudice or embarrass the fair trial of the suit. If, therefore, the inconsistent pleas will lead to the prejudice and embarrassment of the trial, they cannot be allowed.<sup>15</sup> Mere inconsistency of the pleas, however, will not necessarily lead to the embarrassment of the trial.<sup>16</sup> In order to avoid embarrassment in cases where inconsistent pleas are set up, the facts ought not to be mixed up leaving the other party to pick out the facts applicable to each case; they should be distinctly stated so as to show on what alternative facts each of the reliefs sought is founded.<sup>17</sup>

It may, however, be observed that the litigant who avails himself of the right to press inconsistent cases before the Court and endeavours to establish both by contradictory oral testimony, plainly places himself in peril and may find himself entangled in inextricable difficulty, for evidence adduced in support of two absolutely inconsistent cases which are mutually destructive can hardly be expected to secure confidence.<sup>18</sup>

being ready for other work are not inconsistent with each other.<sup>19</sup> Where a party has once taken up a certain position and the Court has passed a decision on the footing of such position being correct, the party cannot subsequently take up an inconsistent position with regard to the same matter.<sup>20</sup>

6. Matters affecting damages. — It has already been observed in Note 3 above that all facts which the party pleading is entitled to prove at the trial must be stated in the pleadings. Thus, it has been held in England that matters in aggravation of damages (i. e., facts which tend to increase the damages) are material facts which must be pleaded.<sup>1</sup> In Wood v. Durham,<sup>2</sup> however, it was held that facts, relied upon by the defendant, not as constituting his defence, but in mitigation of damages, are not material. The view seems to have turned upon the construction of O. 21 R. 4 of the English rules. It is submitted that, under the present Code, there is no room for any difference in the materiality of facts in aggravation and facts in mitigation of damages, as that rule has not been reproduced in the Code. In collision cases the plaint should be so framed as to set out the circumstances of the collision with clearness and accuracy in order to enable the adversary to know the case he has to meet.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, where special damages are claimed, the plaint should give full particulars showing its nature and extent, and showing with dates and items how the amount claimed is made up.<sup>4</sup> However, general damages can be claimed in a lump sum without giving particulars.<sup>5</sup>

7. Pleadings should not state the evidence by which the facts are to be proved.—As has been seen in Note 1 above, a pleading should not contain facts which are merely evidence to prove the material facts.<sup>1</sup> Thus, when the plaintiff alleged that certain of his windows were ancient, the defendant should not plead that in a previous suit the plaintiff had admitted that the windows were not ancient, inasmuch as that fact is only evidence disproving the plaintiff's case.<sup>2</sup>

8. The facts should be stated in a concise form.—Pleadings must be drafted with sufficient definiteness to enable the opposite party to understand the case he is called upon to meet.<sup>1</sup> The material facts must be stated precisely and coherently<sup>2</sup> and as briefly as is consistent with clearness.<sup>3</sup>

The forms of pleadings appended to the Code may, as specified in the next rule, be adopted with advantage whenever possible, to avoid objections on the score of prolixity.

The Code contemplates that pleadings must be in writing.<sup>4</sup>

See also Rule 4 infra as to certainty in pleadings.

9. Variance between pleading and proof.—A party's case may be disclosed—

- (1) by his allegations in his pleading,
- (2) by his answers to interrogatories delivered to him by the opposite party in the suit,
- (3) by allegations made on oath by him or by any persons present on his behalf, or made by his pleaders, and
- (4) by the contents of documents produced by him.<sup>1</sup>

Issues are framed on the case of the parties so disclosed, and evidence is directed at the trial to the proof of the case so set up and covered by the issues framed thereon. A party is expected and is bound to prove the case as alleged by him and as covered by the issues framed. This is in accordance with the main principle of practice that a party can only succeed according to what was alleged and proved: secundum allegata et probata.<sup>2</sup> He will not be allowed to succeed on a case not so set that no party should be taken by surprise by the change of case introduced by the opposite party.<sup>7</sup> In Nabadwipendra v. Madhu Sudan,<sup>8</sup> it was observed as follows :

Note 9

"The rule that the allegations and the proof must correspond is intended to serve a double purpose, namely, first, to appraise the defendant, distinctly and specifically, of the case he is called upon to answer, so that, he may properly make his defence and may not be taken by surprise; and, secondly, to preserve an accurate record of the cause of action as a protection against a second proceeding founded upon the same allegations."

Therefore, the test, when an objection of this kind is taken, is to see whether the party aggrieved has really been taken by surprise, or is prejudiced by the action of the opposite party.<sup>9</sup> In applying this test the whole of the circumstances must be taken into account, and carefully scrutinised to find out whether there has been such surprise or prejudice as will disentitle a party to relief.<sup>10</sup> Every variance, therefore, between pleading and proof is not necessarily fatal to the suit or defence<sup>11</sup> and the rule of secundum allegata et probata will not be strictly applied where there could be no surprise and the opposite party is not prejudiced thereby.<sup>12</sup> Thus, where a ground though not raised in the pleadings is expressly put in issue,<sup>13</sup> or where the new claim set up is not inconsistent with the allegations made in the pleadings and is based on facts alleged therein,<sup>14</sup> there is no question of surprise to the opposite party. Similarly, where the defendant makes an admission, a finding in favour of the plaintiff based on such admission is not incompetent even though it is at variance with the case set up by the plaintiff in his pleading, inasmuch as there could be no surprise or prejudice to the defendant in such a case.<sup>15</sup> But a party cannot be allowed to abandon his own case, adopt that of the defendant and claim relief on that footing where the latter is prejudiced by such a course.<sup>16</sup>

1. A and B jointly execute a bond in favour of C for a certain sum of money. A is compelled to pay off the whole amount to C and after so paying it, he brings a suit against B for the recovery of the whole amount on the ground that he (A) was only a surety for B. It is established that A was not a surety but that he and B were equally liable under the bond. In such a case a decree can be given for A for contribution of the amount paid by A for B also. Their Lordships said: "the plaintiff . . . . . ought not, by reason of his having claimed too much, to be precluded from recovering the proportionate amount of what he actually paid, to which he is undoubtedly entitled, a claim which the pleadings are wide enough to cover."<sup>17</sup>

2. A sues B for rent on the basis of lease-deed. It is found that the lease deed is, for some reason, not admissible in evidence; in such a case a decree can be given on the basis of use and occupation by the defendant.<sup>18</sup>

10. Construction of pleadings. — It has been uniformly held that pleadings in India,<sup>1</sup> especially those in the moffussil,<sup>2</sup> should not be construed very strictly. Courts in India have no power to non-suit the plaintiff merely because the pleadings are not in proper form<sup>3</sup> or the claim is wrongly described<sup>4</sup> or the Section wrongly given.<sup>5</sup> But, where a technical defence is set up against a just claim, the defence so set up must be strictly established and hence, the pleadings must be strictly construed.<sup>6</sup> The substance of the case should be kept in view and not merely the words used in the

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — O. 6 R. 2 requires, as has been seen already, that a pleading should contain material facts on which the party relies for his claim or defence. This rule requires that, wherever necessary, particulars of such material facts shall also be given. "Particulars" may be described as the details of the case set up.<sup>1</sup> The object of particulars is two-fold —

- (1) to enable the opposite party to know what case he has to meet and thus to prevent a surprise at the trial,<sup>2</sup> and
- (2) to limit the generality of the pleadings and so to define and limit the issues to be tried and thus save unnecessary expense.<sup>3</sup>

It must depend upon the facts of each case as to what degree of particularity is required.<sup>4</sup> It may, however, be stated as a general rule that such certainty and particularity will be insisted upon as is reasonable having regard to the circumstances and the nature of the acts themselves. "To insist upon less," as was said in Ratcliff v. Evans,<sup>5</sup> "would be to relax old and intelligible principles. To insist upon more would be the vainest pedantry."

Particulars must be distinguished from evidence and no party need state anything for the purpose of enabling the opposite party to ascertain the evidence by which he proposes to prove his case. The Courts have uniformly endeavoured to prevent the plaintiff or the defendant from prying into the brief of his opponent for finding out what is to be the evidence which is to be produced at the trial. On the other hand, the Courts have uniformly held that the plaintiff or the defendant is entitled to be told any and every particular which will enable him properly to prepare his case for the trial so that he may not be taken by surprise.<sup>6</sup> Thus, one party is not entitled to know the names of the witnesses of the other party for that will be knowing the particulars of evidence. But where the names of witnesses constitute a material fact in a party's case, he is bound to state them. Thus, where plaintiff sues for infringement of his trade-mark by the defendant, and alleges that on account of the infringement "diverse persons" were induced to buy defendant's goods as plaintiff's, the names of "diverse persons" suit by shebaita is only intended to show that the shebait of an idol may bring a suit as prescribed therein. There is nothing in the exemplar that it is the only way in which the suit can be brought on behalf of the idol. A shebait is entitled to bring a suit in his own name—82 Cal 129 (PC) Ref.]] constitute a material fact in the statement of the plaintiff's case and must be revealed though such "diverse persons" might be coming as witnesses for the plaintiff.<sup>7</sup>

Notes 1-2

Where a party omits to give particulars, or the particulars furnished are insufficient, the opposite party may apply under Rule 5 for a further and better statement of particulars,<sup>8</sup> and, if an order under that rule for particulars is disobeyed, then, if the plaintiff is in default, the action should be stayed, and, if the defendant is in default, his defence should be struck out.<sup>9</sup> When a party fails to ask for particulars at the proper time, he cannot afterwards be heard to say that he was taken by surprise.<sup>10</sup>

Where a plaint contains averments indicating with reasonable definiteness what the nature of the claim is, the claim will not be defeated by a small error in one particular. Thus, where A, as receiver of the properties of B, sues C on a promissory note executed by C to B, and the plaint correctly states the names of the promisor and the promisee and the date of the promissory note, but the amount is mentioned as Rs. 6000 instead of Rs. 5892 and this was due to the fact that A was not in possession of the promissory note, it cannot be said that the defendant is taken by surprise or that he was not aware of what the plaintiff was suing on and therefore the plaintiff should not fail by reason of such error.<sup>11</sup>

2. Fraud. — In suits on the basis of fraud, the allegation of fraud must be clear, definite, and specific.<sup>1</sup> General allegations of fraud, however strong the words in which they are stated may be, if unaccompanied by particulars, are insufficient to amount to an averment of fraud of which any Court ought to take notice.<sup>3</sup> A plaintiff seeking relief on the ground of fraud but omitting to give particulars does not disclose a cause of action<sup>3</sup> and should be rejected or returned for amendment but the suit should not be dismissed.<sup>4</sup> Fraud may be inferred from the surrounding circumstances,<sup>5</sup> but neither the fact that there are allegations in the written statement from which a plea of this kind can be spun out<sup>6</sup> nor the fact that the defendant himself has told an untrue story<sup>7</sup> is enough to relieve a plaintiff from his obligation to give particulars of the fraud pleaded by him. In the undermentioned case<sup>8</sup> where the plaintiff alleged that certain deeds were executed by a certain person in contravention of the terms of a family settlement, and were, therefore, not binding on him, and there were in the interval, circumstances of a fraudulent design to circumvent the provisions of the settlement, it was held that it was not necessary, in order to take such circumstances into consideration, that the plaintiff should have given particulars of the fraud.

must specifically state the particulars as to how he was kept out of knowledge of his rights by the fraudulent acts of the defendant, and the time when he discovered it.<sup>9</sup>

Notes 2-4

Allegations of fraud must be substantially proved by the party making the same<sup>10</sup> though it does not mean that every puzzling artifice or contrivance resorted to by the opposite party, should be unravelled.<sup>11</sup> When one kind of fraud is alleged, another kind of fraud cannot, on failure of proof of the fraud alleged, be substituted for it.<sup>12</sup> And even if the Court finds that fraud was practised, if such fraud is other than that alleged by the plaintiff, the defendant is entitled to have the suit dismissed.<sup>13</sup> This general rule, however, is not applicable where a pardanashin lady is concerned. The obtaining of property, or of any benefit, from such a lady, through the undue and unconscionable abuse of influence by a person in whom trust and confidence are placed, has always been treated as fraud of the gravest character; and if such frauds are alleged and proved, the allegation that they were parts of a scheme very early conceived and deliberately carried out is, whether it be made out or not, of no material consequence in such a suit.<sup>14</sup>

A person cannot be allowed to plead the fraud of his own predecessors in order to avoid the legal consequences of their transactions,<sup>15</sup> nor can a party plead his own fraud against one not a party thereto.<sup>16</sup>

A party who is not aware that a fraud has been committed and does not set up the plea in his pleadings is not estopped from doing so as soon as he becomes aware of the facts which show that a fraud has been committed.<sup>17</sup>

3. Breach of trust. — Particulars of the specific acts constituting the breach of trust must be given so as to entitle a plaintiff to get relief.<sup>1</sup>

particulars of the persons alleged to have been deceived by the inducement of the defendant should be given.<sup>2</sup> The party setting up the plea of misrepresentation must prove it.<sup>3</sup>

5. Undue influence and coercion. — Undue influence being a species of fraud must be pleaded with precision and unless it is supported by particulars it will not be investigated by Courts.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a particular transfer of property was challenged on the ground of unsoundness of mind of the transferor, but no case of undue influence was raised in the pleadings, it was held that the question could not be properly discussed.<sup>2</sup> The person alleging it must prove that another person was in a position to dominate his will and exercise influence and that he actually exercised such influence.<sup>3</sup> A mere suspicion or probability will be insufficient to prove coercion.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, if there are facts on the record to justify the inference of undue influence, the omission to make an allegation of undue influence specifically is not fatal to the plaintiff being entitled to relief on that ground;<sup>5</sup> all that the Court has to see is that there is no surprise to the defendant.<sup>6</sup>

6. "Other cases in which particulars may be necessary." — As a general rule where the onus of establishing a positive or negative allegation lies on the plaintiff, the Court will not order the defendant to give particulars of his traverse of that allegation.<sup>1</sup> In other cases, the necessity for particulars depends upon the facts and circumstances of each case. Thus, where a custom is set up, the particulars of the custom with the essential requisites to its validity and binding effect must be stated.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where in a suit on a bond the illegality of the consideration is raised as a defence, it must be definitely pleaded and particulars given.<sup>3</sup> So also a plea of waiver must be specifically raised.<sup>4</sup>

Any attack on the validity of the proceedings of a statutory body such as a municipal committee must be clearly defined and proved and particulars of the matters complained of must be given.<sup>5</sup>

The plaint in a suit under the Fatal Accidents Act should not only give full

7. Accounts.—Where a claim is for a general account, particulars as to the items need not be given.<sup>1</sup> But when a definite sum made up of several items is claimed, particulars of the items will be necessary.<sup>2</sup>

Where the plaintiff impeaches accounts which have been settled on the ground of errors, the errors must be specifically set out. But where no objection was taken to the frame of the suit on the ground that no particulars were given and no prejudice was caused to the defendants, the omission to give particulars becomes immaterial.<sup>3</sup>

In the case of suits on instalment bonds, particulars as to the payments must be alleged and the precise words of the bond should also be stated to show how the bar of limitation is got over.<sup>4</sup>

8. Contract.—Where a contract or agreement is relied upon, particulars should be given, stating its date and showing whether it is in writing, or is verbal, or implied, or partly one and partly the other. If it is in writing the document or documents must be identified and described, and if it is implied, the circumstances from which the implication arises must be stated.<sup>1</sup>

9. Defamation.—In an action for defamation the plaintiff should give particulars of as to when and where the libel or slander, as the case may be, was published, and the persons to whom it was published.<sup>1</sup> If, however, all the persons to whom the publication was made were not known to the plaintiff, he may plead that he is unable to give particulars until after discovery.<sup>2</sup>

As the defendant is entitled to know the precise charge against him, the exact words constituting the libel must be set out.<sup>3</sup> If they are contained in letters or articles in newspapers, all the letters or articles should be produced.<sup>4</sup> A plea of innuendo must be clearly brought out, and it must be shown how the words were capable of bearing a libellous meaning.<sup>5</sup>

Notes 9-12

A defendant relying on the plea of justification must similarly give particulars of the specific instances on which he intends to rely.<sup>6</sup> The defence should show whether the justification is as to the whole or part of the matter published.<sup>7</sup> Where the libellous words are capable of two meanings, the defendant must state whether the plea applies to both meanings or to one only and, in the latter case, to which one.<sup>8</sup>

A defendant who pleads fair comment is bound to give particulars of the facts on which he commented and that they are true and fair and made in the interests of the public.<sup>9</sup> Where the plea of justification is made in the form of a rolled up plea<sup>10</sup> and the plea indicates the materials on which the comment is based, particulars of those materials will not be ordered. If the materials are not indicated such particulars may be ordered.<sup>11</sup>

10. Claim for a lump sum.—Where a lump sum is claimed for money paid on several occasions, particulars as to when and to whom it was paid and the items composing such sum must be given,<sup>1</sup> so that defendant may see whether he may or may not plead a set-off or limitation.<sup>2</sup>

11. Malicious prosecution.—A defendant simply denying the want of reasonable and probable cause will not be asked to furnish particulars thereof inasmuch as the onus lies on the plaintiff to show want of reasonable and probable cause.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, reasonable and probable cause is affirmatively pleaded, particulars thereof may be ordered.<sup>2</sup>

12. Misconduct.—General allegations of misconduct are not sufficient. Where the defendant justifies his action on the ground of misconduct of the plaintiff, the specific acts of misconduct should be given.<sup>1</sup> The particulars must give full information as to what facts are relied on and the nature of the charge with sufficient detail to prevent the defendant from being taken by surprise at the trial.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, specific evidence on the point in dispute is exclusively in the hands of one party, it is not reasonable to insist upon the other party giving definite particulars of misconduct which an examination of that evidence alone will disclose.<sup>3</sup>

13. Negligence — Nuisance. — In an action for negligence, the plaintiff must give full particulars of the negligence complained of, and of the damage he has sustained.<sup>1</sup> Thus, in a case of collision the plaintiff must state when and where the accident took place and the particular act of negligence and give details of the loss and expenses incurred.<sup>2</sup> The plaint must clearly allege the duty enjoined on the defendant with the breach of which he is charged.<sup>3</sup> The same principles apply to cases of contributory negligence.<sup>4</sup> In a suit against a railway company for damages on account of the negligence of the company, no particulars of negligence were given nor were such particulars asked for. But at the trial the railway company understood the particular ground of negligence sought to be proved and led rebutting evidence. It was held that the railway company could not later on complain of want of particulars.<sup>5</sup>

But it is not open to the plaintiff to allege and seek to prove one kind of negligence and then ask the Court of Appeal to find negligence of another kind.<sup>6</sup>

Where in an action for public nuisance special damages are necessary to be proved, the plaint should state the full particulars of such damages.<sup>7</sup>

14. Recovery of land. — In an action for recovery of land, the plaintiff must give the nature and particulars of his title,<sup>1</sup> and must show that he has got a right to immediate possession.<sup>2</sup> If he claims as heir, he must show how he claims to be heir, and must set out the links of relationship through which he claims,<sup>3</sup> and if he claims as an assignee, the steps by which the estate became assigned to him.<sup>4</sup> A general statement that by virtue of certain deeds he got title will be struck out as being embarrassing.<sup>5</sup> He must state the effect of the deeds and documents<sup>6</sup> though the precise words are unnecessary.<sup>7</sup>

In a suit by a lessor against a lessee for possession, the lessor need not allege anything more than the lease.<sup>8</sup> A defendant in an action for the recovery of land, who is in possession of the land is not compelled to give particulars, but a defendant in an action to establish title to land who sets up a plea of purchase bona fide should give particulars.<sup>9</sup>

15. Public highway and private right of way. — Where a public right of way is pleaded, the termini need not be set out because the public have a right to use the way for all purposes at all times. In the case of private rights of way the termini of the way and the course which it takes must be shown with reasonable precision.<sup>1</sup>

In a suit in respect of a right of way the plaintiff should state specifically the manner in which he claims title whether by grant (actual or lost) or prescription at common law or under the statute.<sup>2</sup>

16. Particulars of defence. — Any party to a suit, be he the plaintiff or defendant, will have to give particulars of the circumstances on which he relies as the basis of his plea. The defendant also is subject to this rule.<sup>1</sup> But ordinarily, if a defendant merely denies the plaintiff's allegations, the defendant will not be required to give particulars as the plaintiff will have to establish his case.<sup>2</sup> Particulars may be however ordered in regard to positive allegations<sup>3</sup> as where justification is pleaded in an action for libel.<sup>4</sup>

pleading. The object of obtaining particulars is, as has been seen in Note 1 to Rule 4 above, to enable the opposite party to know what case he has to meet and to prevent a surprise at the trial so that he may not have to go to trial embarrassed by the obscurity or the incompleteness of the case which he has to meet.<sup>1</sup> Furnishing particulars of what has been pleaded insufficiently or vaguely is not a discretionary matter at all. It is ordering one of the parties to give the other his dues.<sup>2</sup> It is the duty of the Court as well to see that parties plead their cases so plainly, fully and clearly that each side knows the nature of the case which has to be met. If the pleadings are not definite the Court will have difficulty in excluding much irrelevant evidence and consequently much public time may be wasted.<sup>3</sup> The proper course in such cases would be, not to take the case off the file, but to order particulars to be given or to direct amendment of the plaint.<sup>4</sup>

The rule does not permit the submission of new material based on an entirely different cause of action.<sup>5</sup>

The rule permits a better statement of the claim being put in when it is ordered by the Court.<sup>6</sup>

2. Application for particulars—When to apply.—An application under this rule should specify the particulars or the further and better particulars required and should ask for the costs of the application also.<sup>1</sup> Though there is no time-limit for applying for particulars,<sup>2</sup> it should as a rule be applied for, within a reasonable time after the necessity arises; otherwise, if there is undue delay, the application may be refused.<sup>3</sup> But a defendant does not waive his right to apply for particulars by delivering a defence.<sup>4</sup> There will however be no necessity for amendment by giving particulars when the Court has already come to a definite finding on a point.<sup>5</sup> If a party having a right to apply for particulars, does not do so in the trial Court, he cannot complain of want of particulars in the appellate Court, for his failure to apply operates as an estoppel.<sup>6</sup>

3. Discovery before particulars.—In some cases like suits by a principal against his agent, when the defendant applies for particulars and the plaintiff does not know the facts necessary to enable him to give particulars and the defendant knows them, the practice is to order the defendant to give discovery and to postpone the application for particulars till then.<sup>1</sup> "It is good practice and good sense, that when the defendant knows the facts and the plaintiffs do not, the defendant should give discovery, before the plaintiffs deliver particulars."<sup>2</sup> But no hard and fast rule can be laid down to determine when particulars should precede discovery, or discovery should precede particulars. Each case will depend upon its own circumstances.<sup>3</sup> In a suit for libel characterising the plaintiff as an "imposter" and "a charity swindler," the defence was of justification. Plaintiff asked for particulars of the charge, but the defendant wanted inspection of the plaintiff's account books. The Court refused to allow the defendant inspection of plaintiff's accounts and Kay, L. J., said :

"To apply this practice to the case of a libel would be to sanction the publication of a libel, when the libellor knew no facts justifying the libellous statement, because he believed he could by the process of discovery, elicit such facts."<sup>4</sup>

From this case it is clear that discovery before particulars will not be ordered, where the particulars are within the knowledge or ought to be within the knowledge of the person applying for particulars.

4. When particulars need not be given.—All particulars delivered should be the best that the party delivering them can give. In some cases where the party is, or states he is, unable at the time, to give the particulars required, an order is made for the best particulars he can give, reserving him leave to deliver amended particulars (not less than a fixed time before trial of the suit.) A party will not, as a rule, be ordered to give particulars of facts or matters which the other party has to prove or as to which he merely traverses the allegations of his opponent.<sup>1</sup>

5. "Upon such terms as to costs and otherwise as may be just."—When ordering delivery of particulars, the Court may order the party in default to pay a specified sum to the other side for the costs occasioned by the application, such payment to be made on or before the delivery of particulars.<sup>1</sup>

6. Failure to give particulars after order.—When an order for delivery of particulars under this rule is not obeyed, if the plaintiff is in default the suit may be stayed, or, the defence may be struck out under Rule 16 infra, if the defendant is in default.<sup>1</sup> It has also been held that the Court has even got the power to dismiss a suit in the case of default of a plaintiff to obey the order of the Court.<sup>2</sup> The Court has got the power to stay a suit or to strike out a defence even if such a condition is not added to the original order for delivery of particulars, and this power is a discretionary one.<sup>3</sup>

Amendment of further particulars. — A party having delivered particulars in an action cannot withdraw, add to, or amend, them without leave of Court.<sup>1</sup> As a rule, however, leave will be granted when the amendment will cause no injury to the opposite party, but the applicant will be ordered to pay the costs of his opponent in any event.<sup>2</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule.

2. Specification, where necessary, must be distinct.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule is new and is identical with O. 19 R. 14 of the Rules of the Supreme Court of England.

It is not necessary for a party to plead expressly the performance of a condition precedent. It will, under this rule, be implied in his pleading. It is for the other party, if he contends that there was a condition precedent and that it has not been duly performed, to say what that condition is and to plead its non-performance. Otherwise, its due performance will be presumed.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a demand for payment to be made at Lloyd's Bank was a condition precedent, and it was not pleaded that such demand has been made, it was held that this rule applied.<sup>2</sup> Where there was a question of service on a lessee of the notice required by S. 14 of the Conveyancing Act (1881), it was held that the statement of claim must be read as if it contained an allegation that the plaintiffs had given the necessary notice before the commencement of the action.<sup>3</sup> See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>4</sup> If any party contests the performance of a condition precedent, then the other party must prove the performance of the condition.<sup>5</sup>

A condition precedent does not form part of the cause of action. It is some formality attached to the cause of action, until the performance of which the right of action is suspended. But, whenever a condition precedent goes to the root of the matter, it is proper and safer to allege performance of it in the plaint. For instance, in the case of a claim on a cheque, an allegation of notice of dishonour or of facts excusing such notice was held essential.<sup>6</sup>

The allegation contesting the performance of a condition precedent must not be vague or general but must be specific.<sup>7</sup>

2. Specification, where necessary, must be distinct. — Under the present rule an averment of the due performance of all conditions precedent is implied in every pleading and the opposite party must specify distinctly any conditions, the performance or occurrence of which he intends to contest.<sup>1</sup>

Synopsis

1. Scope and object of the Rule.
2. New ground of claim.
3. Inconsistent allegations.

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — It has been seen in Note 1 to Rule 1 ante, that the parties may, subsequent to the written statement of the defendant, file subsequent pleadings with the leave of the Court under the provisions of O. 8 R. 9, infra. It is at the stage of such subsequent pleadings that the provisions enacted in this rule against what is called "a departure in pleading" apply for the first time. A departure takes place when in any pleading the party deserts the ground that he took up in his preceding pleading and resorts to another and different ground. The object of this rule is to prevent such a "departure." A statement made by a party to the Court is in the nature of a supplementary pleading for the purposes of this rule.<sup>1</sup>

The provisions of this rule apply also to minors. Hence, when a guardian ad litem representing a minor defendant files a written statement and the minor attains majority during the pendency of the suit, he cannot claim to file a fresh written statement so as to supersede that filed by his guardian ad litem.<sup>2</sup>

2. New ground of claim. — Where a plaint is defective, it cannot be supplemented by a subsequent statement.<sup>1</sup> A claimed one-half of £500 alleging that B the defendant, had received it as trustee for himself and the plaintiff A in equal shares. B pleaded that he received only £311, half of which he paid into Court. A thereupon replied that B ought to have received the full £500, and that having wrongfully compromised with the debtor, is liable for half of £500. It was held that this was a new ground of claim which could not be allowed.<sup>2</sup>

3. Inconsistent allegations. — A party cannot in subsequent pleading make any allegation inconsistent with what he has alleged originally.<sup>1</sup> Thus, if a statement of claim (i. e., plaint) alleges merely a negligent breach of trust, the reply must not assert that such breach of trust was fraudulent.<sup>2</sup> If such inconsistent allegations are made in a subsequent pleading without obtaining leave to amend, the Court will be justified in ignoring it, and the fact that a formal order rejecting it is not passed will not be a ground for remanding the case for retrial.<sup>3</sup> But where both parties understand the real point in issue and give evidence, the fact that a pleading subsequent to the plaint and the evidence is at variance with the original pleading is immaterial.<sup>4</sup>

the grounds of his objection ; it is not sufficient merely to traverse any allegation the plaintiff may have made.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where in a suit on a contract of mortgage the defendant denied the consideration for the mortgage, it was held that he could not at the trial contend that the mortgage was not duly attested, and was therefore invalid.<sup>2</sup> But no Court will enforce an illegal contract, if the illegality is duly brought to the notice of the Court, and if the person invoking the aid of the Court is himself implicated in the illegality ; it matters not whether the defendant has or has not pleaded the illegality.<sup>3</sup> The reason is that a Court will not assist a plaintiff where his own case discloses the illegality of the transaction.

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule.

2. Precise words, when necessary.

1. Scope of the Rule. — Rule 2 of this Order provides that every pleading shall contain a statement in a concise form of the material facts on which the party pleading relies. Where such a material fact is mentioned in a document, it is sufficient under this rule to state the effect of the document as briefly as possible without setting out the whole or any part thereof. Thus, in an action brought by the devisee of land under a will, for the recovery of the land devised, it was held that it was not necessary to set out the precise words of the will.<sup>1</sup> A party is, however, bound to state the nature of the deeds on which he relies in deducing his title from the person under whom he claims.<sup>2</sup> It is not enough for him to say simply that by virtue of a certain deed he is entitled to the property claimed by him.<sup>3</sup>

2. Precise words, when necessary. — In an action for libel or slander the precise words complained of are material, and should always be set out verbatim.<sup>1</sup>

| 1. Scope of the Rule. | 3. Fraudulent intention |
| 2. Malice.            | 4. Knowledge.           |

1. Scope of the Rule. — The circumstances from which malice, fraudulent intention or other condition of the mind is to be inferred, constitute really the evidence in proof of such condition of mind, and need not therefore be pleaded, in accordance with the rule enacted in Rule 2 ante that only the material facts should be pleaded, but not the evidence by which they are to be proved. But, where a certain condition of mind such as insanity is relied on by a party for his claim or defence, he must allege it as a fact in his pleading and where he does not do so, and the fact of the existence of such state of mind is only brought out in the evidence, the Court should not act on such fact.<sup>1</sup>

2. Malice. — Where malice is a material ingredient of the plaintiff's case as being a necessary part of his cause of action, as in suit for damages for slander or malicious prosecution, it should be alleged specifically in the plaint.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where a mistaken bona fide belief and good faith are the grounds for applying the rule of equitable subrogation, they must be distinctly alleged in the pleadings and proved.<sup>2</sup>

3. Fraudulent intention. — See O. 6 R. 4 Note 2 ante. Where there is fraud there is no room for the doctrine of acquiescence to operate which is only a form of estoppel.<sup>1</sup> As to the requisites of an acquiescence, see the undermentioned case.<sup>2</sup>

4. Knowledge. — If knowledge or the absence of it is a material factor in the case, it should be expressly alleged.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where insanity is set up as a defence to an action for breach of contract, it must be alleged and proved that, at the time of the contract, the plaintiff had knowledge of such insanity.<sup>2</sup>

1. Pleading to be signed.—The object of requiring every pleading to be signed by the party is to prevent, as far as possible, disputes as to whether a suit was instituted with the plaintiff's knowledge and authority.<sup>1</sup> Judges are bound to see that the pleadings are signed properly.<sup>2</sup> In cases where the plaint contains allegations of fraud which must be false or true to the knowledge of the plaintiff, the defendant can insist on the plaintiff himself signing the plaint.<sup>3</sup> There is no difference between vakalats, affidavits and pleadings as to the procedure by which they can be signed.<sup>4</sup>

This rule is made applicable to proceedings under the undermentioned local Acts.<sup>5</sup>

2. Signature by persons duly authorized. — Under the corresponding Sections of the Codes of 1859 and 1877, there were no provisions for the signing and verification of the pleading by the authorized agent of the party, but it was held, by applying Section 36 of the Code of 1877 (now O. 3 R. 1), that an authorized agent could validly sign the pleading on behalf of the party.<sup>1</sup> In view of these decisions the Legislature expressly added a proviso in Section 51 of the Code of 1882 (now O. 6, R. 14), under which an authorized agent may validly sign a pleading under certain circumstances, namely, where the party pleading is by reason of absence or for other good cause unable to sign the pleading.<sup>2</sup> The absence must be of such a kind as makes it impossible for the party to sign the pleading, e. g., absence on a sea cruise or a journey into unknown regions where communication is impracticable; the words "other good cause" are, however, of wider significance and leave the matter entirely to the discretion of the Court.<sup>3</sup>

The question as to when a person can be said to be duly authorized by the party depends upon the circumstances of each case.<sup>4</sup> A pleading signed by an unauthorized person is not valid;<sup>5</sup> but, in such a case, the Court may permit the party himself to sign it later,<sup>6</sup> or, if the person signing it is subsequently authorized, treat the original plaint itself as valid, provided there is no question of limitation.<sup>7</sup>

As to the signing and verification of pleadings in suits by or against corporations, see O. 29 R. 1 Note 8, and as to the signing and verification of pleadings in suits by or against firms, see O. 30 R. 1 Note 13.

1. Scope and object of the Rule.—The object of verifying a pleading is to fix on the party verifying, responsibility for the statements that it contains.<sup>1</sup> The Court is bound to see in every case that the pleadings are verified in the manner prescribed and that the verifications are not treated as mere formalities.<sup>2</sup> In the case of pardanishin ladies, their pleadings will not be accepted as satisfactory proof of the contents thereof unless it is strictly proved that the pleadings were read out and explained to them.<sup>3</sup>

The verification of a pleading is not evidence of the facts contained in the pleading, and cannot form the basis for decree in an undefended suit.<sup>4</sup>

A contentious probate proceeding should, under Section 295 of the Succession Act (XXXIX of 1925), take the form of a suit, and should be verified by the parties.<sup>5</sup> But a petition presented by the Administrator-General under the Administrator-General's Act (III of 1913) need not, under the provisions of Section 29 of that Act, be verified by the Administrator-General.<sup>6</sup>

This rule is made applicable to proceedings under the undermentioned local Acts.<sup>7</sup>

- Section 4 of the Puri Lodging House Act (Bengal Act IV of 1871).
- Section 15 (2), Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1888).

2. Who can verify pleadings. — Under Section 28 of the Code of 1859, it was necessary to show, in order to enable a third person to verify the pleading, that the party himself was by reason of absence or other good cause, unable to sign the pleading.<sup>1</sup> Under this rule a pleading can be verified —

- (1) by the party, where there is only one party,
- (2) by one of the parties where there are several parties, and
- (3) by a third person who is proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case.<sup>2</sup>

It is, however, open to the opposite party to insist on the party himself verifying the pleading in important cases, e. g., where there are allegations of fraud or circumstances tending to affect any possible question of limitation, if particularly within the knowledge of the party,<sup>3</sup> or where there are allegations of a scandalous nature.<sup>4</sup>

The rule does not require that the verification of a plaint by a third person should be made in the presence of the Court; but having regard to the necessity of satisfying the Court that the person, other than the plaintiff, who verifies the plaint, is acquainted with the facts of the case, it is desirable that it should be made in the presence of the Court.<sup>5</sup>

3. Mode of verification. — Where a plaint contains averments of fact some of which are within the knowledge of the plaintiff and others which are made upon information which he believes to be true, as where, for example, the averments in first three paragraphs are made on his own knowledge, and the averments in paragraphs 4, 5 and 6 are made upon information and not on the knowledge of the plaintiff, the verification should be, as to averments of paragraphs 1, 2 and 3, that they are true to his knowledge, and as to paragraphs 4, 5 and 6, that they are made on information which he believes to be true. A verification in the form—"the contents of the plaint are true to the best of my knowledge and belief" is not in strict compliance with the Code though it substantially complies with it.<sup>1</sup> A verification is not faulty in form merely because it does not state the source of the information.<sup>2</sup>

cured by amendment at any stage of the suit.<sup>2</sup> It is not a ground of interference in appeal under the provisions of Section 99 of the Code.<sup>3</sup> In the case of an application in forma pauperis, however, the rule is stricter. Under the provisions of O. 33 R. 5 of the Code it is provided that, where the application is not framed and verified properly, the Court shall reject the application.<sup>4</sup>

See also O. 6 R. 14, Note 3.

5. Omission to verify. — The want of verification does not have the effect of making the plaint void. It merely amounts to an irregularity. It does not affect the merits of the case, and can be rectified by permitting the party concerned to make good the deficiency by amending the pleadings under O. 6 R. 17 of the Code.<sup>1</sup> The amendment may be made even though the period of limitation may have expired on the date of verification.<sup>2</sup>

6. Objection to verification. — Objection to verification should be taken at the earliest possible opportunity and if not so taken, will be deemed to have been waived.<sup>1</sup>

7. Effect of false verification. — Pleadings, far from being mere formalities, are required by law to be true.<sup>1</sup> Verifications being made under the sanction of a solemn declaration, a false verification will render the party verifying, liable to a prosecution for an offence under Sections 191 and 193, Indian Penal Code.<sup>2</sup> But a petition not required by law to be verified cannot, if verified falsely, be made the basis of a criminal prosecution.<sup>3</sup> A false verification will not, however, entail the dismissal of the suit, especially if the defendant takes no objection thereto at the proper time.<sup>4</sup>

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — Every party is entitled, ex debito justitiæ, to have the case against him presented in an intelligible form, so that he may not be embarrassed in meeting it.<sup>1</sup> This rule has been enacted to give effect to this principle. It enables a party to apply to strike out, or compel the amendment of, the whole or any part of his opponent's pleadings which may be unnecessary or scandalous, or which may tend to prejudice, embarrass or delay the fair trial of the action.<sup>2</sup> The Court may also suo motu strike out or amend such matters in such manner and on such terms as it thinks just.<sup>3</sup> The power to strike out or compel amendment under this rule is a discretionary one,<sup>4</sup> but should be exercised with great care and caution.<sup>5</sup> It will be exercised only when some substantial objection to the pleading complained of, or some real embarrassment is shown.<sup>6</sup> Thus, a written statement ought not to be struck out unless it is clear beyond all reasonable doubt that the allegations in it are such as cannot afford a defence to the action, and which, if not struck out, would unnecessarily delay the suit.<sup>7</sup>

Where part only of the pleading is objectionable, that part will, as a rule, be struck out if it is severable from the rest,<sup>8</sup> but if it is not so severable, the whole pleading may be struck out.<sup>9</sup> The principle underlying this rule with its limitation is given expression to in Knowles v. Roberts, (1888) 38 Ch. D. 263, where it is said by Bowen, L. J. :

"It seems to me that the rule that the Court is not to dictate to parties how they should frame their case, is one that ought always to be preserved sacred. But that rule is, of course, subject to this modification and limitation, that the parties must not offend against the rules of pleading which have been laid down by the law; and if a party introduces a pleading which is unnecessary and it tends to prejudice, embarrass and delay the trial of the action, it then becomes a pleading which is beyond his right."

2. "Unnecessary." — As a rule a pleading or allegation will not be struck out under this rule merely because it is unnecessary, unless it is also scandalous or embarrassing.<sup>1</sup> Merely unnecessary pleading without its being scandalous, or otherwise objectionable, will only affect the cost of the pleading.<sup>2</sup> But where the pleading in addition to its being unnecessary also attributes improper motives to the defendant,<sup>3</sup> or charges the defendant with dishonest conduct,<sup>4</sup> or makes it embarrassing for the defendant,<sup>5</sup> it will be ordered to be struck out. Where, however, a plaint<sup>6</sup> or a written statement<sup>7</sup> is unnecessarily prolix and verbose, or argumentative, or is full of matter which is wholly irrelevant or non-understandable, it can be dealt with under this rule.

3. "Scandalous." — A Court has a general jurisdiction to prevent any of its processes being used for the purpose of disseminating scandalous and irrelevant matter.<sup>1</sup> Where such matter is introduced in the pleadings, the Court may order the same to be expunged.<sup>2</sup>

Allegations made in a pleading for the mere purpose of abusing or prejudicing the opposite party and any indecent or offensive matters are scandalous.<sup>3</sup> Very often, if allegations made are unnecessary, they will likewise be scandalous.<sup>4</sup> Thus, where a plaintiff alleges in his plaint dishonest conduct against the defendant, but no relief is sought on that ground, the allegations will be struck out as scandalous and embarrassing.<sup>5</sup> Where, in an action by a wife against her husband for rectification of her marriage settlement, a statement was made in the plaint that the plaintiff declined to live with the defendant on account of his having committed an assault on a young girl, the allegation was held to be scandalous and was ordered to be struck out.<sup>6</sup> Allegations as to partiality against the Judge, made in a memorandum of appeal, were expunged by the High Court in the undermentioned case.<sup>7</sup>

But a pleading or allegation which is alleged to be scandalous cannot be struck out, if it is necessary or relevant to the issue or one of the issues in the action.<sup>8</sup> Indeed a matter cannot be considered as scandalous at all, if it is material to the issue (i. e., will affect the result of the action if proved to be true), however grave the imputations may be, whether of immorality or otherwise.<sup>9</sup> The Court will not, in an application to expunge or strike out allegations alleged to be scandalous, go into the question of their truth or falsehood. The only question is: are they relevant to the issues in the suit? If they are, they cannot be expunged.<sup>10</sup>

4. "Or which may tend to prejudice, embarrass or delay the fair trial." —

The question whether a pleading is embarrassing is, in each case, a question for the Judge to decide in view of the facts and circumstances of the particular case.<sup>1</sup> "The rule that the Court is not to dictate to the parties how they should frame their case, is one that ought always to be preserved sacred. But that rule is, of course, subject to the modification and limitation that the parties must not offend against the rules of pleading which have been laid down by the law and if a party introduces a pleading which is unnecessary, and it tends to prejudice, embarrass and delay the trial of the action, it then becomes a pleading which is beyond his right."<sup>2</sup> A claim or defence which a party is not entitled to make use of,<sup>3</sup> or a pleading which is ambiguous or unintelligible,<sup>4</sup> or a pleading which contains unnecessary or irrelevant allegations,<sup>5</sup> is embarrassing and may be struck out. But a pleading cannot be struck out as irrelevant unless the irrelevancy is quite clear.<sup>6</sup> Nor is a pleading necessarily embarrassing merely because of the fact that it states inconsistent or alternative allegations.<sup>7</sup> Where the plaint was verbose, extremely long, involved and impossible to understand, and did not raise any fact which would show that the Judge had jurisdiction to hear the case, it was held by the High Court of Allahabad<sup>8</sup> that the proper course was to strike out the plaint under this rule or to make an order for its amendment. Similarly, where particulars are called for from a defendant under O. 6 R. 5 and he fails to comply with the order, the defence may be struck out under this rule, if without the particulars his pleading is obscure, incomplete and embarrassing.<sup>9</sup>

This rule applies to a pleading which tends to prejudice or embarrass or delay a party at the actual trial of the suit as well as one which tends to embarrass him at any stage of the action.<sup>10</sup>

5. Matter may be struck out or amended at any stage of the proceeding.—

The rule empowers the Court to strike out or compel the amendment of any pleading at any stage of the proceeding.<sup>1</sup> But the rule being discretionary, the Court may refuse to exercise its power unless the application is made at the earliest opportunity.<sup>2</sup> An objection under this rule is no ground for interference when the point is taken for the first time in appeal.<sup>3</sup>

6. Power of the Appellate Court to expunge such matters.—The Appellate Court has power to return the memorandum of appeal where it contains allegations of partiality against the Judge whose decree is in question, and order the objectionable portion to be expunged.<sup>1</sup>

The High Court has power to expunge remarks appearing in the judgment of the lower Court, but the power will be exercised only in extraordinary cases, such as when the observations are pointedly seditious, blasphemous or irrelevantly scandalous.<sup>2</sup> Where a Subordinate Judge, while allowing amendment of a Devasthanam Scheme, remarked against a trustee that he "did not care a brass farthing for Devasthanam," it was held that it was not a fit case for the High Court to exercise the power of expunging the remarks.<sup>3</sup>

7. Appeal.—An order under this rule is not appealable either under Section 104 or O. 43 R. 1. Nor is the order a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent so as to be appealable thereunder.<sup>1</sup>

"The plaint may, at the discretion of the Court, —

- (a) at, or any time before, the settlement of issues, be rejected, if it does not disclose a cause of action ;
- (b) at, or any time before, the settlement of issues be returned for amendment within a time to be fixed by the Court, and upon terms as to the payment of costs occasioned by such amendment as the Court thinks fit, if it —
  - (i) is not signed and verified as hereinbefore required,
  - (ii) does not state correctly and without prolixity the several particulars hereinbefore required, or contains particulars other than those so required,
  - (iii) is wrongly framed by reason of non-joinder or misjoinder of parties, or joins causes of action which ought not to be joined in the same suit, or
  - (iv) is not framed in accordance with the provisions of Section 42 ;
- (c) at any time before judgment, be amended by the Court upon such terms as to the payment of costs as the Court thinks fit :

Provided that a plaint shall not be amended either by the party to whom it is returned for amendment, or by the Court, so as to convert a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character.

When a plaint is amended under this Section, the amendment shall be attested by the signature of the Judge."

The amendment of proceedings in Courts have been dealt with under this Code in various parts thereof —

1. Section 152 deals with amendments of judgments, decrees and orders.
2. Section 153 confers a general power on the Court to amend any defect or error in any proceeding in a suit.
3. Order 1 Rule 10 provides for the amendment of a plaint by striking off or adding parties to a suit.
4. Order 6 Rule 16 deals with the compulsory amendment of the opponent's pleading.
5. The present rule deals with the amendment, with the leave of the Court, by a party of his own pleading.

O. 6 R. 17
Note 1

6. Order 14 Rule 5 deals with the amendment of the issues framed in the case.

It will be seen from a comparison of Section 53 of the old Code with the present rule, that the latter is very much wider in terms than the old Section. It consists of two parts —

- (a) the Court may, at any stage of the proceedings, allow either party to alter or amend his pleadings in such manner and on such terms as may be just ; and
- (b) all such amendments as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties shall be made.

In dealing with the analogous provision as to amendment of issues, namely, O. 14 R. 5, their Lordships of the Privy Council observed that the first portion of that rule left the matter of amendment of issues entirely to the discretion of the Court, while the second portion made it imperative on the Court to make all such amendments as may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real matter in controversy between the parties.<sup>1</sup> This duty has, however, been interpreted to be only a rule of conduct, which is subject to the inherent power of the Court to prevent injustice and abuse of process of the Court.<sup>2</sup> In a case under the corresponding English Rule (O. 28 R. 1), Lord Esher said :

"A rule has been enunciated by the Court which is rather a rule of conduct than a rule of rigid law such as can never be departed from ; because I take it that the Court might depart from it, if there were very exceptional circumstances in any particular case leading the Court to think that it would not be right to apply it. It is nevertheless, a rule of conduct which must generally be followed."<sup>3</sup>

The object of the rule is that Courts should get at and try the merits of the cases that come before them, and should consequently allow all amendments that may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real question in controversy between the parties, provided it can be done without causing injustice to the other side. In Cropper v. Smith,<sup>4</sup> Bowen, L. J., observed as follows :

"It is a well established principle that the object of Courts is to decide the rights of the parties and not to punish them for mistakes they make in the conduct of their cases by deciding otherwise than in accordance with their rights . . . . . I know of no kind of error or mistake which, if not fraudulent or intended to overreach, the Court ought not to correct if it can be done without injustice to the other party. Courts do not exist for the sake of discipline, but for the sake of deciding matters in controversy, and I do not regard such amendment as a matter of favour or grace . . . . . It seems to me that as soon as it appears that the way in which a party has framed his case will not lead to a decision of the real matter in controversy, it is as much a matter of right on his part to have it corrected, if it can be done without injustice, as anything else in the case is a matter of right."

The provisions of this rule also apply to the trial of cases before the Sikh Gurdwaras Tribunal under the Sikh Gurdwaras Act (VIII of 1925),<sup>5</sup> to cases before a Subordinate Judge deciding a dispute under the Madras District Municipal Election Rules,<sup>6</sup> and to all suits, appeals and proceedings before the Deputy Commissioner and to all appeals from decisions therein, under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.<sup>7</sup>

This rule is not exhaustive of the powers of the Court as regards amendment and hence, though the rule only refers to pleadings the Court has also power to allow the amendment of applications.<sup>9</sup>

Section 5 of the Provincial Insolvency Act renders the provisions of this rule applicable to proceedings under the Act<sup>9</sup> and a petition in insolvency can be amended under this rule.<sup>10</sup>

2. The Court may allow either party to alter or amend — Discretion of Court. — As has been noticed in the above Note, the amendment of pleadings is in the discretion of the Court. Under Section 53 of the old Code, the discretion was somewhat limited as to the time and the extent of the amendment allowable. But this rule confers a very wide discretion on the Courts in the matter of amendment of pleadings.<sup>1</sup> The discretion must, however, be exercised on judicial principles and not in an arbitrary, vague or fanciful manner,<sup>2</sup> or so as to cause injustice to the opposite side. The main considerations to be borne in mind in exercising the discretion are that the rules of procedure have no other aim than to facilitate the task of administering justice,<sup>3</sup> that multiplicity of suits should be avoided<sup>4</sup> and that the interests of substantial justice should be advanced.<sup>5</sup> Thus, a Court should allow the amendment of a pleading where there has been a clerical error, or a bona fide wrong description of property or where there has been a mistake of law or fact,<sup>6</sup> provided there is no injustice to the other side which cannot be compensated by the award of costs.<sup>7</sup> It has been held that the Court can only allow the amendment of a plaint but not amend a plaint itself or direct its amendment.<sup>8</sup> Nor can a Court compel a plaintiff to change the character of his suit.<sup>9</sup>

3. Amendment of plaint introducing new case. — Under Section 53 of the old Code, the rule as to amendments was more rigid and restricted than it is under the present Code. It was specifically provided by the proviso to that Section that no amendment could be allowed which converted a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character.<sup>1</sup> Thus, in the following classes of cases it was held that the amendment prayed for altered the character of the suit and was consequently disallowed —

Suit against the defendant on the basis of his being a trespasser: amendment into a suit for rent based on a subsisting tenancy.<sup>2</sup> Suit for rent on the basis of tenancy: amendment into a suit for damages for use and occupation.<sup>3</sup> Suit based on one ground of claim: amendment into a suit based on another ground of claim.<sup>4</sup> Suit

As has been seen in Note 2 above, the powers of amendment under the present Code are much wider than they were under the old Code. The proviso in the old Section that no amendment could be allowed which changed the character of the suit has been omitted<sup>18</sup> and a new provision has been introduced by O. 6 R. 17 which implies that even an amendment introducing a new ground of claim or an allegation of fact inconsistent with the original pleading may be allowed in proper cases.

2. A sues B for the specific performance of a contract alleged to have been entered into by B with A. Subsequently he applies for the amendment of the plaint so as to convert it into a suit for damages for breach of the said contract. The Court has power to allow the amendment if it does not cause injustice to the other side.<sup>20</sup>

3. A files a suit against B for possession of lands on the basis of a compromise entered into by the parties and filed by them in a previous suit. The compromise was neither registered nor embodied in the decree. A subsequently applies for amendment of the plaint by converting it into a suit for the specific performance of the contract embodied in the compromise. The amendment could be allowed.<sup>21</sup>

4. A and B entered into an agreement for sale of goods by A to B, the goods to be taken delivery of by B on a certain date. B failed to take such delivery and A re-sold the goods more than two months after the date of the breach of the contract by B and then filed a suit for damages against B on the basis of such re-sale. Finding that, owing to the delay in making the re-sale, he may not get damages on the basis of re-sale, he applied for an amendment of the plaint by claiming damages on the basis of breach of contract itself. It was held that such amendment should be allowed.<sup>22</sup>

But though under the present Code there is no such rigid rule, as was enacted in the old Code, against the allowing of the amendment converting a suit of one character into a suit of another and inconsistent character,<sup>23</sup> and the whole matter is entirely in the discretion of the Court, still as a general rule the Court will not, in the exercise of such discretion, allow an amendment converting a suit of one character into a suit of another character.<sup>24</sup>

There is one limitation, however, on the wide powers of amendment that can be exercised by the Court under this Code and that is, that the Court cannot, by way of amendment, substitute one distinct cause of action for another, or change the subject-matter of the suit.<sup>25</sup> In Ma Shwe Mya v. Maung Po Hnaung,<sup>26</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"All rules of Court are nothing but provisions intended to secure the proper administration of justice and it is therefore essential that they should be made to serve and be subordinate to that purpose, so that full powers of amendment must be enjoyed and should always be liberally exercised; but nonetheless, no power has yet been given to enable one distinct cause of action to be substituted for another, nor to change, by means of amendment, the subject-matter of the suit."

The reason of the above rule is that the substitution of a totally new case in place of the original one cannot be said in any sense to be an amendment of the original claim. Nor can it be said that a totally new case is "necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties," that is, the controversy disclosed in the suit as originally framed.

It follows from the principles set forth above that under the present Code :

(1) An amendment will generally be allowed where the nature of the suit is not altered, provided it does not cause prejudice or surprise to the opposite party.<sup>27</sup> Such amendments were allowed under the old Code also.<sup>28</sup>

(2) An amendment may be allowed even if it introduces a new ground of claim or an allegation of fact inconsistent with the original pleading, where the Court thinks it just and necessary.<sup>29</sup>

refuse the application to amend.<sup>2</sup> A sued B, a Tramway Company for damages caused by their negligence in keeping their tramway in bad repair. B simply denied negligence and did not plead that the liability to keep the tramway in repair did not belong to them but to the local authority. At a subsequent stage of the case B applied for amendment of the written statement to raise the said plea. At the time of the application, A's remedy against the local authority was time-barred. It was held that the proposed amendment displaced the plaintiff's suit and should not be allowed.<sup>3</sup>

Where, in a suit for libel, the defendant applied at the time of trial to amend the written statement so as to include a plea of privilege, the application was disallowed on the ground that it would be unfair at that stage to allow the amendment.<sup>4</sup> An amendment of the written statement should, as a general rule, be refused when the plaintiff has called all his evidence on the issues of fact raised by the written statement and has closed his case,<sup>5</sup> unless the plaintiff is given an opportunity to call further evidence to rebut the new case set up.<sup>6</sup> A defendant, who has deliberately and under no mistake or misapprehension admitted a material fact in his written statement, cannot be allowed at a later stage to change his front and make out a new case by denying that fact.<sup>7</sup> But where in an ejectment suit the defendant pleaded exclusive possession and denied the plaintiff's title as landlord, and also set up a claim to be in possession under a mourasi lease granted by the plaintiff's predecessor-in-title, it was held that the effect of the alternative plea was merely to put the plaintiff to the proof of a title which would justify his prayer for ejectment and could, therefore, be allowed to be raised.<sup>8</sup> Again, where on the facts appearing in the plaintiff's evidence a new defence of law arises, there is no reason why it should not be taken by way of amendment, even after the plaintiff has closed his case on the facts. Thus, a plea that the suit is barred by virtue of Section 23 of the Contract Act was allowed to be raised in so far as it arose out of the plaintiff's evidence.<sup>9</sup>

The improbability or the unconvincing nature of the new defence sought to be raised is not in itself a ground for refusing to allow an amendment of a written statement by the inclusion of such defence.<sup>10</sup>

5. Amendment taking away right accrued to a party by lapse of time. —

The object of the rule being to get at and try the merits of the case and to do substantial justice between the parties, no amendment will be allowed which will work injustice to one of the parties. The rule of conduct of the Court is, that "however negligent or careless the first omission may have been, and however late the proposed amendment, the amendment should be allowed if it can be made without injustice to the other side."<sup>1</sup> One of the classes of cases in which an amendment will work injustice to the opposite party is where it takes away from a party a right accrued to him by lapse of time.<sup>3</sup> As a rule, therefore, a plaintiff will not be allowed to amend his plaint by introducing a new cause of action, which, since the date of the plaint, has become barred by the statute of limitation.<sup>3</sup> In other words, no amendment should be allowed as will take away a valid defence under the law of limitation.<sup>4</sup> Thus, where a plaintiff, though entitled to various alternative reliefs sued only for one of the reliefs within the period of limitation, it was held that he should not be allowed to amend the plaint in such a way as to enforce his other reliefs which had become time-barred at the date of the amendment.<sup>5</sup>

U. 6 R. 17
Note 5

The rule, however, is not a universal one, and, under peculiar or special circumstances, an amendment may be allowed even where it has the effect of depriving the defendant of his right to plead limitation.<sup>6</sup> See also Note 19 infra. In Charan Das v. Amir Khan,<sup>7</sup> Lord Buckmaster in delivering the judgment of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"That there was full power to make the amendment cannot be disputed, and though such a power should not as a rule be exercised where its effect is to take away from a defendant a legal right which has accrued to him by lapse of time, yet there are cases where such considerations are outweighed by the special circumstances of the case."

1. X sold several parcels of land to several persons, who did not however get possession. The title to the property was in some confusion and the plaintiff who was entitled to a right of pre-emption in respect of that sale, sued the vendees for a declaration of his right of pre-emption without asking for the consequential relief of pre-emption and possession as he was bound to do under Section 42 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877. It was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council, that the plaintiff was attempting to assert rights which he undoubtedly possessed, but through some clumsy blundering, in a form which the statute did not permit, and that the plaint should, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, be allowed to be amended by adding the relief of pre-emption, even though, at the time of the amendment, a fresh suit for pre-emption would be barred by limitation.<sup>8</sup>

2. S purchased certain property from P, the latter, however, remaining in possession and wrongfully receiving rents and mesne profits. S then sold the property to Y who sued P for possession and mesne profits adding S as a pro forma plaintiff. In the plaint no relief was claimed in favour of S, the prayer being that a decree should be passed in favour of Y alone. An amendment of plaint for relief in favour of S for profits up to the date of the sale in favour of Y was applied for, after the claim had been time-barred. The High Court of Bombay held that there was no ground for suspecting that the plaintiffs had not acted in good faith and that under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the amendment should be allowed.<sup>9</sup>

Where the plaintiff had used due diligence and care in framing his plaint but had made a mistake as to the appropriate remedy he would be entitled to under the law, and the mistake was due to a conflict of judicial opinion on the point or to a subsequent change in the law, it was held in the undermentioned cases<sup>10</sup> that the circumstances justified the allowing of an amendment, even where a fresh suit would have been barred on the date of the amendment. It has been held that the rule prohibiting an amendment which takes away an existing right from the defendant refers to a legal right which has accrued to the defendant and not a bare right to plead limitation. Hence, it has been held that where there is no attempt by the proposed amendment to introduce a new cause of action or to claim a new relief, the rule does not apply.<sup>11</sup>

6. Amendment not to be allowed when it places the opposite party in a position which cannot be compensated by costs. — As has been seen already, the main principle guiding the discretion of the Court in granting or refusing amendment is that no amendment should be allowed if it causes injustice to the other side.<sup>1</sup> It is also a cardinal rule that "there is no injustice if the other side can be compensated with costs."<sup>2</sup> Two criteria must be kept in mind: does the amendment put the other party to a disadvantage or cause injury? And if so, can the disadvantage or injury be compensated by costs?<sup>3</sup> If it can be, then the amendment may be allowed.<sup>4</sup> If it cannot, the amendment should be refused.<sup>5</sup> Thus, for example, where the only inconvenience caused by the proposed amendment is to prolong the proceedings or to necessitate fresh evidence, the award of costs will be a sufficient compensation for the inconvenience caused.<sup>6</sup> A sued B for injunction restraining him from executing his mortgage decree against certain properties on the ground, that the mortgage decree was obtained by fraud; subsequently he applied to amend the plaint by adding a new ground of claim, namely, that in any view his title was preferential to that of the defendant even apart from fraud. It was held that the amendment could be allowed on payment of costs.<sup>7</sup>

Where the effect of an amendment would be to enable the plaintiff to escape the consequences of an adverse decision after it was given against him, it ought not to

7. Amendment to be refused when the application is not in good faith.—

It is one of the necessary conditions for the exercise of the Court's discretion in allowing an amendment, that the applicant has acted in good faith.<sup>1</sup> While, therefore, as a general rule, leave to amend ought not to be refused if the applicant has acted bona fide,<sup>2</sup> it will be refused where he has been acting mala fide.<sup>3</sup> Courts will infer want of bona fides from great delay in applying for leave to amend.<sup>4</sup> An amendment which seeks to reargue the same questions and lead further evidence, is an abuse of the process of the Court and hence should not be allowed.<sup>5</sup>

8. Amendment by adding or substituting a new plea of fraud. —

Where fraud of one kind has been pleaded, an amendment introducing a new and distinct kind of fraud in substitution of the fraud pleaded, will not be allowed especially after all the evidence has been given.<sup>1</sup> "It is a well known rule that a charge of fraud must be substantially proved as laid, and that when one kind of fraud is charged, another kind of fraud cannot, upon the failure of proof, be substituted for it."<sup>2</sup> The reason is that such a substitution will as a rule entirely change the character of the suit as originally laid. On the same principle where no fraud has at all been alleged in the original plaint, a new plea of fraud will not, except where strong grounds exist, be allowed to be raised by way of amendment.<sup>3</sup> In Bently v. Black,<sup>4</sup> Lord Esher, M. R., said :

"It has long been the universal practice, except in most exceptional circumstances, not to allow amendments for the purpose of adding a plea of fraud where fraud is not pleaded in the first instance."

Where the fraud is disclosed only in the pleading of the defendant, or on his cross-examination, such a circumstance may justify an amendment by adding a new plea of fraud.<sup>5</sup> Thus, where the plaintiff sued on a mortgage executed by the defendant, and the defendant pleaded that he was a minor on the date of the mortgage and that the mortgage was, therefore, void, the plaint was allowed to be amended by raising the plea that the defendant was guilty of fraudulent misrepresentation that he had attained majority at the time of the execution of the mortgage.<sup>6</sup> But the Court will, in every case, require to be satisfied about the truth, and substantiality, of the proposed amendment, and why the allegations were not originally made, before it grants the amendment.<sup>7</sup> Where, in a "passing off" action, the omission to refer to fraud in the plaint was due to an oversight and there were circumstances to show that the plaintiff intended from the very outset to allege fraud, it was held that, in the interests of justice, the amendment should be allowed.<sup>8</sup> Where the plaintiff sued for the recovery of a certain sum of money on the basis of his title by inheritance, and the defendant pleaded a sale of such right to himself, the plaint was allowed to be amended, by raising the plea that the sale was invalid owing to the fraud of the defendant.<sup>9</sup>

9. Amendment by adding new reliefs or claims. — An alteration merely in the relief claimed in the suit does not, as a general rule, change the character of the suit, and an amendment seeking such alteration will be allowed if it does not cause injustice to the other side.<sup>1</sup> The same principle will apply to the addition of new reliefs in the plaint. Where a claim to which the plaintiff is entitled has been left out by a bona fide mistake, or by inadvertence, or on a misapprehension of facts, an amendment will be allowed by adding the claim so left out.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, the omission is a deliberate one, leave to amend will be refused.<sup>3</sup> Where, by virtue of circumstances arising subsequent to the institution of the suit, the plaintiff becomes entitled to a larger or other relief than the one claimed, amendment may be allowed so as to add such other relief.<sup>4</sup> All reliefs ancillary to the main relief asked in the plaint may be allowed to

Where, however, the proposed amendment is likely to cause injustice to the other side, it will not be allowed.<sup>9</sup> Thus, where the application for leave to amend was made at a very late stage of the proceedings and the grant of the leave would have necessitated practically a trial of the whole case over again, it was held that leave should be refused.<sup>10</sup> Where the relief claimed by way of amendment was totally different from, and inconsistent with, the relief originally claimed, it was held by the High Court of Lahore that leave to amend should be refused.<sup>11</sup> In Ardeshir H. Mama v. Flora Sassoon,<sup>12</sup> where a suit for specific performance, or, in the alternative, for damages, was sought to be amended so as to convert it into a suit for damages only, their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

Notes 9-10

"That the Court should have the power of granting such an amendment in a proper case is salutary and indeed necessary . . . . But it is one to be most carefully and jealously exercised in all the circumstances of each individual case and with due regard to its effects upon the position both of the plaintiff and the defendant. . . . . Indeed, so serious, in many cases, is the exercise of this power that, to their Lordships, it would appear to be a wise precaution for a Judge, before allowing any such amendment in a contested case, to require the plaint to be actually remodelled in a form appropriate to an action seeking compensation for breach of contract and nothing else."

10. Amendment by adding a new ground of relief.— The same principles as are applicable to cases of amendments by adding new reliefs, apply to amendments by adding new grounds of relief. Thus, a new ground in support of the relief claimed cannot be said to alter the character of the suit and will as a general rule be allowed.<sup>1</sup>

11. "As may be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy." — The main object of allowing amendments is to get at the rights of the parties,<sup>1</sup> and to avoid multiplicity of suits, where the dispute can be settled in the suit already instituted without unfairness or injustice to the other side.<sup>2</sup> "However the necessity to amend may have arisen, leave to amend should always be given and at any stage in the proceedings in order to allow the real question at issue between the parties to be raised on the pleadings, unless the party applying for leave has acted in bad faith or the amendment will cause some injury to the opposite party for which he cannot be fully compensated by costs or otherwise."<sup>3</sup> Thus, where the properties in the plaint are wrongly described,<sup>4</sup> or some properties are omitted from the plaint by inadvertence,<sup>5</sup> or where there is a mistake in the statement of the cause of action,<sup>6</sup> or a bona fide mistake in making the necessary averments in the plaint,<sup>7</sup> or in drawing up the pleadings,<sup>8</sup> or the suit is brought under a wrong Act,<sup>9</sup> an amendment will be allowed to rectify the omission or mistake. See also the cases cited below.<sup>10</sup>

But the "questions in controversy between the parties" which have to be brought out clearly and decided are, save in exceptional cases, the questions in controversy between the parties when the parties joined issue, that is, when the defendant puts in his written statement; they do not include new questions which the defendant neither wished nor intended then to dispute, but which, at a later stage in the proceedings, either because he has changed his mind, or because something has happened after he filed his written statement, he thinks it profitable to dispute.<sup>11</sup> An amendment which will be useless if made, as for instance, an amendment setting up a claim or defence which is bad in law,<sup>12</sup> or an amendment which, if allowed, would still leave the claim or defence as amended unsupportable,<sup>13</sup> cannot be said to be necessary for the purpose of determining the real question in controversy in the suit. Again, a merely technical plea cannot be said to be necessary for the purpose of determining the real questions in controversy between the parties, and therefore it was held that it should not be allowed to be set up by way of amendment.<sup>14</sup> pleadings, namely, that the Court cannot, by way of amendment, substitute one distinct cause of action for another.<sup>1</sup> Where the plaintiff sued for specific performance of a contract alleged to have been entered into by the defendant with him in 1912; and on his failure to establish the alleged contract sought to amend the plaint by setting up another and independent contract of 1903, it was held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that such amendment could not be allowed. Their Lordships said :

"When once that contract has been negatived, to permit the plaintiff to set up and establish another and an independent contract altogether would, in their Lordships' opinion, be to go outside the provisions established by the Code of Civil Procedure, to which reference has been made. It would be a regrettable thing, if when in fact the whole of a controversy between two parties was properly open, rigid rules prevent its determination, but in this case their Lordships think that the rules do have that operation and that it was not open to the Court to permit a new case to be made."<sup>2</sup>

In the following instances amendments were refused as introducing a new and distinct cause of action —

(1) Claim on the basis of kittima adoption : amendment into claim based on apathitha adoption.<sup>3</sup>

(2) Claim based on negligence : amendment into claim based on nuisance.<sup>4</sup>

(3) Suit based on fraud and instigation of false claims on the part of the defendant : amendment into claim based upon an implied contract of indemnity.<sup>5</sup>

(8) Plaintiff suing alleging right to sue on behalf of a certain committee: on failing to establish such right, amendment by adding as parties persons who had such right.<sup>10</sup>

Where, in answer to an application for amendment, it is alleged that such amendment would change the cause of action, the Court must look to the substantial nature of the claim and not to the formal manner in which it is inserted.<sup>11</sup> A mere change in the date of the cause of action,<sup>12</sup> or the correction of a clerical error,<sup>13</sup> or amendments to disclose further details of a fact which support or amplify a cause of action already sued on,<sup>14</sup> or the correction of a misdescription of property,<sup>15</sup> cannot be said to introduce such a distinct cause of action as will entail a rejection of the application for amendment. Thus, where the plaintiff sued to set aside a sale, on the ground that the defendants had taken advantage of his youth, he having just attained majority, and afterwards applied to amend the plaint by adding that on the date of the sale he was a minor, it was held that the amendment was merely for the purpose of amplifying and developing the original cause of action and should be allowed.<sup>16</sup> Similarly, a plaint can be amended by putting in the necessary ground of exemption from limitation for the suit, such as an acknowledgment of liability.<sup>17</sup> Where, in respect of an original liability to pay a certain sum of money, a document, such as a promissory note or a mortgage, is taken and the plaintiff in a suit on such document finds that the document is inadmissible in evidence owing to some technical defect, an amendment of the plaint by claiming relief as on the basis of the original liability does not, as a general rule, amount to a substitution of a distinct cause of action, and should,

O. 6 R. 17 The terms should be such as will prevent the opposite party from being prejudiced by the amendment.<sup>3</sup>

An order directing a plaintiff to pay in cash the costs of amendment of the plaint after he has been found to be a pauper is not proper.<sup>4</sup> Where a party accepts under an order costs which, but for the order, would not at that time be payable, he cannot afterwards object that the order ought not to have been made.<sup>5</sup> Where an amendment of a pleading is allowed on condition of the party paying to the opposite party a certain sum as costs and such sum is paid and accepted by the opposite party, the latter cannot afterwards object to the order allowing amendment.<sup>6</sup>

16. How amendments should be made. — Under the old Code, the plaint could be returned for amendment in certain cases specified.<sup>1</sup> Under the present Code it would seem that the pleading should not be returned for amendment, but is to be kept on the Court's file with direction to the parties to amend, if necessary.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, the Court has no pecuniary jurisdiction to entertain the suit, the Court should under the provisions of O. 7 R. 10 of the Code return the plaint to the plaintiff, who may amend it by deleting certain reliefs claimed, and re-present the same to the Court.<sup>3</sup>

It is not, however, essential that the amendment should be made on the face of the plaint itself; it may be made even on a separate sheet of paper, though it is usually done on the plaint itself.<sup>4</sup>

16a. Court not having jurisdiction over suit, if can allow amendment of plaint. — A Court which has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit is not competent to allow an amendment of the plaint which, if granted, would bring the suit within its jurisdiction.<sup>1</sup> But it can return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court and the plaintiff can amend the plaint and re-present it to the same Court.<sup>2</sup>

17. Who can apply for amendment. — Where a suit is instituted by two plaintiffs, it is doubtful whether one of them alone can apply for amendment of the plaint.<sup>1</sup>

18. Extent of amendment. — A pleading can be amended only to the extent allowed by the Court. Thus, where a plaint was ordered to be amended by addition of parties and the plaintiff also altered the relief claimed, it was held that the plaint must be taken as originally framed, even though the unauthorised amendment as to relief was not objected to either by the Court or by the other party.<sup>1</sup>

O. 6 R. 17
Notes 18-20

A Court cannot allow an amendment which has the effect of ousting its own jurisdiction over the suit.<sup>2</sup>

19. Effect of amendment and limitation. — Where, in a suit against several defendants, the Court cannot take cognisance of the claim as against some of the defendants, and in consequence thereof the plaintiff amends his plaint by restricting his claim only as against the other defendants, the effect of the amendment is, as if the suit had never been commenced in respect of the former.<sup>1</sup>

Where an amendment is allowed under this rule, such amendment relates back to the date of the suit as originally filed where no party is added.<sup>2</sup> But where the plaint in a suit for possession of certain plots of land is subsequently amended by the inclusion of certain other plots, it is not a case of amendment properly so called, but a case of an addition of entirely new lands, and as regards such lands the suit will date only from the day when the claim was made in respect thereof<sup>3</sup> and not from the date when the application was granted. Similarly, the amendment of a plaint by the addition of a necessary party cannot relate back to the date of the filing of the suit.<sup>4</sup> See Note 41 to O. 1 R. 10 ante. See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>5</sup>

A plaint can be allowed to be amended under this rule although at the time of the amendment the suit (if instituted then) would have been barred by limitation.<sup>6</sup> See also Note 5 supra. It has been held by the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court<sup>7</sup> that where an amendment of the plaint is made on the direction of the Court on the ground that the suit as framed was not maintainable, all orders passed by the Court against the defendants previously, (e. g., order for attachment before judgment) are vacated automatically.

20. Appeal. — Under the old Code, orders returning plaints for amendment were appealable under clause 6 of Section 588.<sup>1</sup> But no appeal lay from an order passed by the Court itself under clause (c) of Section 53 directing an amendment.<sup>2</sup> Under the present Code, no appeal lies from an order granting or refusing an amendment under this rule.<sup>3</sup> Nor will an Appellate Court, in an appeal from the decree in the suit, interfere with the discretion of the lower Court in granting or refusing amendments.<sup>4</sup> Where the defendants do not take objection to the amendment, they will be deemed to have waived it and cannot raise it again at the stage of appeal.<sup>5</sup>

An order refusing leave to amend a plaint is in the nature of an interlocutory order and is not appealable under the Letters Patent as a 'judgment.'<sup>6</sup> Nor is an order amending the title of a plaint by omitting the word "summary" and transferring the case to the short cause list, a "judgment" within Clause 15 of the Letters Patent.<sup>7</sup>

Where, on a plaint being amended in accordance with the order of the Court, the Court finds that the suit is beyond its pecuniary jurisdiction and returns the plaint for presentation to the proper Court, the order directing amendment can be challenged in the appeal from the order returning the plaint.<sup>8</sup>

1. Failure to amend after order. — Under Sections 53 and 54 of the Code of 1877, the Court could reject a plaint if the party failed to comply with the order for amendment.<sup>1</sup> There is no such provision under this Code and the only consequence of the failure to amend within time would be, that he cannot amend his pleading afterwards, unless the time is extended by the Court.<sup>2</sup> This rule does not prohibit a fresh suit being brought on the same cause of action when the amendment has not been made in time.<sup>3</sup> Where the order of amendment is made, not under this Order, but under some other provision of law, the provision that the amendment must be made within 14 days, where no time is fixed, does not apply.<sup>4</sup>

The Court has a discretion to extend the time even after the expiry of the period originally fixed<sup>5</sup> and no appeal will lie against an order admitting an amended plaint after the time fixed.<sup>6</sup>

Other Topics (miscellaneous)

Contents of plaintiff. See Note 2. "The plaintiff shall contain." See Note 3.

1. Legislative changes. —

1. The word "shall" has been substituted for "must" in the opening sentence. See Note 3.
2. In clause (e) of this rule, the word "facts" has been substituted for the words "a plain and concise statement of the circumstances," occurring in the old Section. See Note 6.
3. Clauses (d), (f) and (i) are new.

2. Plaintiff in general. — As has been seen in Note 3 to Section 26 ante, a plaintiff has been held to mean "a private memorial tendered to a Court in which the person sets forth his cause of action; the exhibition of an action in writing." It corresponds to the "statement of claim" in England and its object is to state the grounds upon which the plaintiff seeks the assistance of the Court to grant him relief.<sup>1</sup>

Order 6 lays down generally, what pleadings (i. e., plaintiff or written statement) should contain, and this Order lays down in particular, the requirements of a plaint. Every plaintiff, therefore, should comply with the rules contained in Orders 6 and 7, so far as they are applicable. Thus:

- (1) It should contain the name of the Court in which the suit is brought (O. 7 R. 1a).
- (2) It should contain the (a) name, (b) description, and (c) place of residence of—
(i) the plaintiff (O. 7 R. 1b),
(ii) the defendant so far as can be ascertained (O. 7 R. 1c).
- (3) Where the plaintiff or defendant is a minor or a person of unsound mind it should contain a statement to that effect (O. 7 R. 1d).

Order 7 Rule 1 — Note 2

1. See cases cited in Note 3 to Section 26.

- (4) Where the plaintiff sues in a representative capacity, it should show not only that he has an existing interest in the subject-matter, but that he has taken necessary steps to enable him to institute a suit, concerning it (O. 7 R. 4).
- (5) It should state in a concise form the material facts on which the plaintiff relies for his claim (O. 6 R. 2).
  - (i) It should set out the facts constituting the cause of action (O. 7 R. 1e). When necessary it should be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively — all dates, numbers and sums to be expressed in figures (O. 6 R. 2).
  - (ii) The forms given in Appendix A to the Code, or similar forms, should be used as far as possible (O. 6 R. 3).
  - (iii) If the plaintiff pleads misrepresentation, fraud, breach of trust, wilful default, undue influence, etc., and in all cases where particulars may be necessary, beyond those as are exemplified in the forms aforesaid, it should contain the particulars (with dates and items if necessary) (O. 6 R. 4).
  - (iv) If a party relies on illegality or insufficiency in law of any contract, that party should plead such illegality or insufficiency in law in his pleading; it is not sufficient simply to deny the contract (O. 6 R. 8).
  - (v) Whenever the contents of a document are material, it is sufficient to state the effect thereof as briefly as possible without setting out the whole or any part thereof, unless the precise words are material (O. 6 R. 9).
  - (vi) Whenever it is material to allege malice, fraudulent intention, knowledge or any condition of mind of any person, it is sufficient to allege it as a fact, without setting out the circumstances from which it is inferred (O. 6 R. 10).
- (6) If the suit is for the recovery of money, it should state the precise amount claimed, and when the plaintiff has allowed a set-off or relinquished a portion of his claim, the amount so relinquished or so allowed should be stated (O. 7 R. 1h); but in suits for accounts or for mesne profits, it should state the approximate amount sued for (O. 7 R. 2).
- (7) If the subject-matter of the suit is immovable property, it should contain a description sufficient to identify it, i. e., boundaries or survey numbers thereof should be specified (O. 7 R. 3).
- (8) Where the plaintiff seeks relief in respect of several distinct claims or causes of action founded on separate and distinct grounds, he should state them as far as possible separately and distinctly (O. 7 R. 8).
- (9) It should state the interest of the defendant in the subject-matter and his liability to answer the plaintiff's demands (O. 7 R. 5).
- (10) It should state when and where the cause of action arose.
  - (i) It should state (if necessary) the facts showing that the Court has jurisdiction (O. 7 R. 1f).
  - (ii) If it is presented after the expiration of the period of limitation prescribed, it should show the grounds of exemption from the law of limitation (O. 7 R. 6).
- (11) It should contain a statement of the value of the subject-matter of the suit for the purposes of jurisdiction and of court-fees, so far as the case admits (O. 7 R. 1i).

O. 7 R. 1
Notes 2-4

(12) It should state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims, either simply or in the alternative; it is not necessary to ask for general or other relief which may always be given as the Court may think just (O. 7 R. 7).

(13) It should be verified at the foot by the party, or by one of the parties pleading, or by some other person proved to the satisfaction of the Court to be acquainted with the facts of the case (O. 6 R. 15).

A suit is instituted by the presentation of a plaint to the Court or to such officer as it may appoint in this behalf (O. 4 R. 1), but cannot be said to be duly instituted until it is admitted and registered as a suit (see Note 2 to Section 26). The Court may return a plaint for presentation to the proper Court at any stage (O. 7 R. 10), or reject it on any of the grounds mentioned in O. 7 R. 11 (see O. 7 R. 11, infra).

3. Scope of the Rule. — The provisions of this rule are imperative.<sup>1</sup> The substitution of the word "shall" in the place of "must" in the opening sentence has not effected any change in the law. See also Note 2 above.

4. Name, description and place of residence. — The object of the Legislature is to secure correct particulars regarding the parties so far as they can be ascertained, so that there may be no uncertainty with regard to the identity of the parties. The full description of the party and the character in which he sues or is sued should be given in the plaint.<sup>1</sup> The word "description" includes the age, father's name<sup>2</sup> and other particulars that may be necessary to identify the person. Thus, the titles by which the defendant is generally known should also be given.<sup>3</sup> As to the effect of misdescription of parties, see Note 37 to Order 1 Rule 10, supra.

The place of residence of the plaintiff should be accurately given,<sup>4</sup> and that of the defendant should be given as accurately as can be ascertained; it is not sufficient to make vague statements as to the defendant's place of residence such as "carrying on business in Calcutta"<sup>5</sup> or formerly in Calcutta now residing in Kashmir.<sup>6</sup> If the plaintiff after enquiry is unable to ascertain these particulars fully, he should include a paragraph in the plaint to that effect.<sup>7</sup> It is not sufficient to give these particulars

6. Facts constituting the cause of action. — The words "plain and concise statement of the circumstances" occurring in the old Section have been substituted by the word "facts" in view of the specific provisions of Order 6 Rule 2.

As to what are material facts, see O. 6 R. 2, supra. As to the meaning of the words cause of action, see Note 14 to Section 20, supra.

Every suit presupposes the existence of a cause of action against the defendant for, if there is no cause of action at all, the plaint will have to be rejected under Rule 11, infra.

Where there is no such right in law as that claimed, there can be no cause of action in respect thereof, and a suit cannot be based thereon. See Note 41 to Section 9 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

7. When cause of action arose. — It is necessary for the plaintiff to state specifically when the cause of action for the suit arose.<sup>1</sup> This is necessary for the purpose of enabling the Court or the defendant to ascertain from the plaint whether there is a cause of action, and whether it is not barred by the law of limitation.<sup>2</sup> But the statement need not be made in a separate paragraph, if it is clear from the other facts alleged in the plaint.<sup>3</sup>

A plaintiff is not, however, absolutely bound by the statement regarding the date of the accrual of the cause of action; it may be determined or inferred from the facts stated.<sup>4</sup>

8. "Facts showing that the Court has jurisdiction." — All the facts showing that the Court has jurisdiction should be set out in the plaint, and if any special jurisdiction vested in the Court by law is invoked, all the facts which call for the exercise of that jurisdiction should be set out.<sup>1</sup> When jurisdiction of a Court to try the suit is disputed, the Court must decide the same preliminary to the adjudication of the suit itself.<sup>2</sup> As to the statement of facts showing the pecuniary jurisdiction of a Court, see Note 11 below. 11. Valuation of suit. — The plaintiff should distinctly state in the plaint, the valuation of the suit for the purposes of court-fees and of jurisdiction. As the two valuations may not be the same in several cases, they have to be stated specifically.<sup>1</sup> Where the plaintiff claims reliefs arising out of the same cause of action, he can state the aggregate value of his reliefs, but if he claims reliefs in respect of two or more distinct causes of action, he should state the valuation of each cause of action separately, as the court-fee is separately payable in respect of each.<sup>2</sup> Where the plaintiff claims relief in the alternative, he should also state his valuations in respect of the two reliefs, and the court-fee is payable on the value of the larger relief.<sup>3</sup>

The valuation of a suit for the purposes of jurisdiction is necessary in order to ascertain whether the suit is within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>4</sup> A plaintiff should, however, state the true value at which the subject-matter of the suit ought to be valued; it should not be arbitrary or fanciful.<sup>5</sup> See also Note 4 to Section 6 and Notes 7 to 10 to Section 15, ante.

The question of court-fees should be determined with reference to the plaint as it is and not as it ought to have been.<sup>6</sup> Whether a case falls within any particular provision of the Court-Fees Act must be determined from the substance and not merely from the language or form of the plaint.<sup>7</sup>

In the second paragraph, after the word "defendant" insert "or for moveables in the possession of the defendant, or for debts of which the value he cannot, after the exercise of reasonable diligence, estimate" and after the word "amount" where it last occurs insert "or value."

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule.

2. Mesne profits.

3. Accounts.

4. Suit for damages.

1. Scope of the Rule.—In a suit for the recovery of money, the plaintiff should, as a rule, state the amount claimed precisely.<sup>1</sup> But in a suit for mesne profits or for an amount which will be found due to the plaintiff on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant, in which the plaintiff is not, at the time of the institution of the suit, in a position to give the amount precisely, he should state it approximately. The amount is given tentatively, as the correct amount is ascertained only in the course of the suit (O. 20 Rr. 12, 16 and 17).

2. Mesne profits. — The expression "mesne profits" has been defined in Section 2 (12).

A plaintiff may claim in a suit past mesne profits, i. e., mesne profits accruing up to the date of institution of the suit, and future mesne profits from the date of institution up to the delivery of possession. The valuation in the plaint should, under this rule, be only with reference to the amount of the past mesne profits claimed.<sup>1</sup>

The future mesne profits need not be valued, since it is impossible to give even an approximate statement of the amount.<sup>2</sup> But the valuation of the past mesne profits given will be the valuation of the "amount sued for" under this rule,<sup>3</sup> and is the valuation for the purposes of jurisdiction (see Section 6 and Section 96 Note 18, supra).

As to the ascertainment of mesne profits, see O. 20, R. 12 infra. See also Section 11 of the Court-fees Act.

3. Accounts. — A suit for money which will be found due on taking accounts, is instituted when the defendant is under a legal obligation to render accounts which the plaintiff is not in a position to ascertain.<sup>1</sup> In such cases this rule requires that the plaintiff should state approximately the amount which will be found due to him on taking unsettled accounts between him and the defendant.<sup>2</sup> The approximation required under sub-rule (2) may be a rough and ready approximation such as the plaintiff is able to give.<sup>3</sup> The valuation given by the plaintiff is purely tentative, and is the valuation for the purposes of jurisdiction (see Section 6, supra).

As to the ascertainment of the amount due in a suit for accounts, see O. 20, Rules 16 and 17, infra, and Section 11 of the Court-Fees Act.

4. Suit for damages. — It has been held that in a suit for damages based on fraud, the plaintiff may give an approximate valuation in the plaint and offer to pay additional court-fees in case a larger amount is found due before the decree is passed, as Section 11 of the Court-Fees Act will not apply to such a case.<sup>1</sup>

| 1. "Immoveable property."                   |  | 3. Conflict between the description by boundaries and by area. |
| 2. "Description sufficient to identify it." |  |  |

1. "Immoveable property." — This rule does not apply unless immovable property is the subject-matter of the suit.<sup>1</sup> See also Section 16, supra.

2. "Description sufficient to identify it." — A plaint should contain a description of the immovable property sufficient to identify it,<sup>1</sup> as otherwise the decree, if passed, will be incapable of execution. (See O. 20 R. 9, infra.) But a suit cannot be dismissed or a plaint rejected on the ground that the description is insufficient;<sup>2</sup> the Court may call upon the plaintiff to furnish the necessary particulars<sup>3</sup> or allow the plaintiff to amend his plaint by giving such particulars.<sup>4</sup>

In the case of chur lands which are constantly going under water and re-forming, it is very difficult to premise with any degree of certainty, whether the claim would be for a re-formation in situ or for contiguous accretion, until full investigation, based upon a survey and comparison of maps, is made. Hence in such a case the plaint should not be construed too strictly.<sup>5</sup>

3. Conflict between the description by boundaries and by area. — If, in the plaint, or in any deed, there is an inconsistency between the description by the boundaries and by the area, that which is more certain and stable and least likely to have been mistaken, and which sufficiently identifies the land should prevail.<sup>1</sup> The true construction is that which will, as far as possible, bring the several factors into harmony with one another and express most nearly the intention of the parties.<sup>2</sup> But if a land is conveyed with definite boundaries, and the measurements indicate a smaller area than that covered by the boundaries, the rule of interpretation is that the area covered by the boundaries should prevail.<sup>3</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule lays down that if the plaintiff files the suit in a representative capacity, the plaint should show —

- (1) that the plaintiff has an actual existing interest in the subject-matter, and
- (2) that he has taken the steps that may be necessary to enable him to file a representative suit.

Thus, in a suit under Section 92 of the Code, the plaintiff should state that he has an interest in the trust and that he has obtained the consent in writing of the Advocate-General. Similarly, in cases where the law requires probate or letters of administration to be obtained in respect of the estate of a deceased person, the plaintiff should state that the plaintiff has obtained a probate, or that he is the executor under the will, or, if the person died intestate, that he has obtained letters of administration in respect of the estate of the deceased.

The provisions of this rule should be strictly complied with.<sup>1</sup> Otherwise the plaint may have to be rejected on presentation.<sup>2</sup> If a decree is passed, it will not bind the estate or the persons represented by the plaintiff in the suit.

2. "Where the plaintiff sues in a representative character." — This rule deals with representative suits, i. e., suits instituted by a person in his representative, as distinguished from his individual, character. The following are some instances of representative suits —

- (i) Suit by one or more persons on behalf of a community or persons having the same interest (O. 1 R. 8.)
- (ii) Suit by executor or administrator representing the estate of a deceased person.
- (iii) Suit under Section 92 of the Code by two or more persons having an interest in the trust.
- (iv) Suit by the manager of a joint Hindu family or by the karnavan of a Malabar tarwad.
- (v) Suit by a shebait on behalf of the idol.<sup>1</sup>

(vii) Suit on behalf of a partnership in the name of the firm (Order 30).

A plaintiff suing in a representative capacity should set it out clearly in the plaint and show that he is qualified to do so.<sup>2</sup> The plaint should show that the plaintiff has an actual existing interest in the subject-matter, and the representation must be based on some authority legally expressed; the plaintiff must further be capable in law of representing the person whom he professes to bind.<sup>3</sup> The Court has no jurisdiction to adjudicate upon a right when there has been no proper representation of the interests in litigation.<sup>4</sup> As to who are proper representatives in particular cases, see the cases cited below.<sup>5</sup>

3. Has taken the steps necessary to enable him to institute the suit. —

Under Section 212 of the Succession Act (39 of 1925) it is provided that letters of administration should be obtained to establish any right to the property of a person dying intestate, in cases to which that Section applies. The administrator, in such cases, derives his title solely under the grant of the letters of administration and, until such grant is made, he has no title to the estate of the deceased; he cannot, therefore, institute an action as administrator before he gets the grant.<sup>1</sup> The plaint should, therefore, state that the plaintiff has obtained the letters of administration.<sup>2</sup> But where a person dies leaving a will, the executor derives his title and authority from the will of the testator and not from any grant of probate; he may, therefore, institute a suit as executor before obtaining a probate, though he may not be entitled to a decree unless he produces a probate,<sup>3</sup> inasmuch as the production of the probate is the only way in which he is allowed by law to prove his title.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, it is not necessary for a person claiming on succession to the effects of a deceased person, to obtain a succession certificate before instituting a suit for the recovery of a debt due to the deceased, though circumstances, other persons may be entrusted with the conduct of the suit.);

no decree will be passed before the production thereof.<sup>5</sup> The obtaining of a probate or of a succession certificate in such cases is not a "step necessary to enable the plaintiff to institute the suit"<sup>6</sup> and consequently it is not necessary to allege in the plaint that the plaintiff has obtained the probate or the certificate.

This rule, however, applies only to the institution of suits and does not prohibit the continuing of the suit already filed, by the legal representatives of a plaintiff dying during the pendency of the suit, provided the representative capacity is established before decree.<sup>7</sup>

4. Probate and letters of administration. — Sections 212 and 213 of the Succession Act provide that probate and letters of administration are necessary to establish any right to the property in cases to which the Section applies; but the Sections are expressly made inapplicable to particular cases and in those cases, a plaintiff may commence any action without a probate or letters of administration. See Notes 5 to 8 below. A probate issued from a Native Court is not sufficient for instituting a suit in British India.<sup>1</sup> Where a probate is not produced, the Court should grant time to the plaintiff to produce the probate, and not dismiss the suit.<sup>2</sup> See also Note 3 above.

5. Hindus. — As regards a will made by a Hindu, probate is necessary under Section 213 of the Succession Act, only if the will is of the class mentioned below —

- (1) If the will is made on or after the 1st September 1870, within the territories which, on that date, were subject to the Lieutenant-Governor of Bengal or were within the local limits of Ordinary Original Civil Jurisdiction of the High Courts of Judicature at Madras and Bombay.
- (2) If the will is made outside those territories or limits, but relates to immovable property situate within those territories or limits.

Therefore, it is not obligatory on executors or legatees under other wills to take out probate or letters of administration (with copy of will annexed) to establish their rights in a Court of law.<sup>1</sup>

Where a Hindu dies intestate, it is not necessary to obtain letters of administration to the estate of the deceased (see Section 212, sub-section 2 of the Succession Act).<sup>2</sup>

O. 7 R. 4
Notes 6-9

If the suit is to recover a debt due to the deceased, it is necessary that a probate, or letters of administration or a succession certificate should be produced, as otherwise no decree can be passed (see Section 214 of the Succession Act).

6. Mahomedans. — In the case of Mahomedans, it is not necessary to obtain a probate or letters of administration.<sup>1</sup> See Sections 212 and 213 of the Succession Act. But it is, however, necessary, if the suit is for the recovery of a debt due to the deceased, to produce a probate or letters of administration or succession certificate (see Section 214 of the Succession Act)<sup>2</sup> as above.

7. Indian Christians. — "Indian Christian" has been defined to mean a native of India, who is or in good faith claims to be of unmixed Asiatic descent and who professes any form of the Christian religion.<sup>1</sup> Till the passing of the Native Christian Administration of Estates Act, 1901,<sup>2</sup> the Indian Christians were governed by the Succession Act (1865) and, therefore, if the deceased died intestate, letters of administration were necessary and in case the deceased left a will, a probate of the will was necessary to establish any right to his property.<sup>3</sup> But the Native Christian Administration of Estates Act provided that Section 190 of the Succession Act shall not apply to the property of an Indian Christian who died intestate, and though a probate was still necessary in the case of a will, no letters of administration were necessary in the case of intestacy. The law is the same since the passing of the Succession Act, 1925, wherein Section 212 provides that no letters of administration are necessary to establish any right to any part of the property of the deceased. A probate, however, is necessary in the case of a will. A succession certificate is necessary in a suit to recover a debt due to deceased as above (Section 214).

8. Europeans, Parsees, Jews and Armenians. — These persons are governed by the provisions of Section 212 (1) and Section 213 (1) of the Succession Act, and, therefore, it is necessary to obtain a probate or letters of administration as the case may be to establish any right in a Court of law.<sup>1</sup>

9. Succession certificate. — In a suit for recovery of a debt due to a deceased person, the person claiming on succession to the effects of the deceased should produce a probate, or letters of administration, or a succession certificate having the debt specified therein, as otherwise no decree can be passed under Section 214 of the Succession Act. But if the debt is a joint family debt and the plaintiff claims by survivorship, no succession certificate is necessary.<sup>1</sup> As to the other cases where the plaintiff to show in the plaint such ground of exemption.<sup>1</sup> If no such ground is shown in the plaint, it is liable to be rejected under Order 7 Rule 11 (d), infra. The plaintiff will not be allowed to show the ground of exemption at the trial by putting in evidence any documents, such as acknowledgments of liability.<sup>2</sup> But the Court may, save in exceptional circumstances, allow the plaint to be amended by making the necessary allegations.<sup>3</sup> See also Note 7 to O. 7 R. 11, infra.

2. "The plaint shall show." — It is sufficient that the ground of exemption is apparent on the face of the plaint. It is not necessary that the plaint should specifically, and in so many words, claim the ground of exemption.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where the fact of minority is apparent on the face of the record, it is not necessary that the ground of exemption under Section 8 of the Limitation Act should be specifically pleaded.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, where a plaint is presented on the re-opening date after court-holidays and the period of limitation has expired during the holidays, the fact that the ground of exemption under Section 4 of the Limitation Act was not specifically mentioned in the plaint will not entail the dismissal of the suit, inasmuch as the Court is bound to take judicial notice of the holidays.<sup>3</sup> On the same principle it has been held that where a plaint, presented to a wrong Court, is returned for presentation to the proper Court, the endorsements on the plaint will show the applicability of Section 14 of the Limitation Act, and that therefore it is not necessary to specifically allege that ground of exemption.<sup>4</sup> All that the rule requires is that the plaint should show a ground of exemption from limitation where the suit is instituted after the expiration of the period of limitation. But once that is shown, the rule does not preclude the plaintiff from relying upon a new ground of exemption at the trial. According to the High Court of Bombay, however, the new ground taken should be not inconsistent with that taken originally,<sup>5</sup> while, according to the Allahabad,<sup>6</sup> Calcutta<sup>7</sup> and Lahore<sup>8</sup> High Courts and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur,<sup>9</sup> the new ground may even be inconsistent with the original one. The High Court of Madras<sup>10</sup> has dissented from the view of the Calcutta and Lahore High Courts, and has held that a new ground of exemption can be urged only after amendment of the plaint so as to include the new ground. But where the plaintiff once amends his plaint by relying upon a new ground of exemption, it has been held by their Lordships of the Privy Council that he will not, thereafter, be allowed to rely upon the original allegation in the unamended plaint.<sup>11</sup>

A plaintiff will not be allowed to rely upon a ground of exemption from limitation for the first time in appeal.<sup>12</sup> The Appellate Court has the same powers of rejection of plaint as the trial Court under O. 7 R. 11 (d).<sup>13</sup> Similarly, a defendant will not be allowed to raise objections on the ground of failure to set out the grounds of exemption, for the first time in appeal or revision.<sup>14</sup>

This rule applies only to cases where the suit is barred prima facie;<sup>15</sup> a plaintiff, therefore, is not precluded from relying upon a ground of exemption from limitation, if, on the facts found, the plaintiff's claim appears to be barred.<sup>16</sup> The plaintiff has to show that his cause of action accrued within the period of limitation.<sup>17</sup>

Note 2

R. 7. [New.] Every plaint shall state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims either simply or in the alternative, and it shall not be necessary to ask for general or other relief which may always be given as the Court may think just to the same extent as if it had been asked for. And the same rule shall apply to any relief claimed by the defendant in his written statement.

3. Alternative relief.

3a. Suit under Section 77 of the Registration Act.

4. Events happening after suit.

1. Relief. — This rule and O. 2 R. 2, sub-rule 3 should be read together, and so reading them, the following general propositions may be deduced —

(1) If the plaintiff, being entitled to more than one relief in respect of the same cause of action, omits to sue for any one of such reliefs, he shall not afterwards sue for any relief so omitted.

(2) Every plaint shall state specifically the relief which the plaintiff claims, either simply, or in the alternative.

- (3) But a general or other relief need not, however, be specifically asked for, but may be given by the Court as if it had been asked for.

Where a question arises as to whether a plaintiff has asked for a particular relief in his plaint, the whole of the plaint must be considered,<sup>1</sup> and the substance and not merely the form of the plaint should be looked to.<sup>2</sup> But this liberality of construction is subject to a limitation that the facts and documents which entitle the plaintiff to the relief claimed must be stated or referred to in his pleading. In Mahomed Zahoor Ali Khan v. Mt. Thakooranee Rutta Koer,<sup>3</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"Though this Committee is always disposed to give a liberal construction to pleadings in the Indian Courts so as to allow every question fairly arising on the case made by the pleadings to be raised and discussed in the suit, yet this liberality of construction must have some limit. A plaintiff cannot be entitled to relief upon facts and documents not stated or referred to by him in his pleadings."

In Sri Mahant Govind Rao v. Sita Ram Kesho,<sup>4</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed that the general rule that a plaintiff cannot be entitled to relief upon facts and documents not stated or referred to by him in his pleadings, does not apply where the substantial matters which constitute the title of all the parties are touched in the issues and have been fully put in evidence in the case. Relief can be granted in such cases on the basis of such matters.<sup>5</sup>

It follows from what has been said above that no relief can be granted upon facts and documents not disclosed in the pleadings, nor dealt with by the issues or the evidence in the case.<sup>6</sup> Thus, where the plaintiff asks for a particular relief on a specific

the issues which would embarrass the defendant.<sup>11</sup> Nor is it a ground for dismissing a suit that groundless charges of fraud are made by the plaintiff in his plaint, provided he has a good cause of action.<sup>12</sup> But a Court cannot grant a larger relief than that claimed, even if the plaintiff is really entitled to it, unless the plaintiff gets the plaint amended with the leave of the Court.<sup>13</sup> A plaintiff, who has established facts which would entitle him to the particular form of relief claimed, should not be debarred from obtaining that relief merely because the allegations made by him have not been established in their entirety.<sup>14</sup>

Where the plaintiff has omitted to ask for the appropriate reliefs, he may apply for amendment of the plaint by inserting a prayer for the grant of such reliefs. See Order 6 Rule 17 Note 9.

A Court will not grant any relief which it cannot enforce<sup>15</sup> or which is useless and unprofitable to the parties.<sup>16</sup>

2. General or other relief.—A general or other relief need not be specifically asked for in the plaint, but can always be granted by the Court as if it had been asked for. Where, from mistake or inadvertence, the plaintiff omits to pray for the proper relief, or, if the relief claimed in the plaint is not wholly sufficient or appropriate, the Court has always the power to grant the proper relief according to the circumstances of the case.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a Court can always award future interest on the sum found to be due to the plaintiff, even though the latter has not claimed it.<sup>3</sup> The Court may in a suit for exclusive possession pass a decree for joint possession.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, in a suit for sale of mortgaged property the Court may pass a personal decree against the mortgagor-defendant provided the claim under the personal covenant is not barred by limitation.<sup>4</sup> Again, where the Court cannot decree partition because all the coparceners are not parties, it can grant the plaintiffs a declaration as to their title.<sup>5</sup>

But the power to grant such relief is controlled by the following considerations —

(1) The relief granted should be based on facts stated or referred to in the plaint and should not be inconsistent with the case set up by the plaintiff<sup>6</sup> or with the relief claimed by him.<sup>7</sup> Thus, the Court cannot pass a decree for possession of property in a suit for confirmation of possession, inasmuch as the relief of possession is not consistent with the case set up by the plaintiff or with the relief claimed by him.<sup>8</sup> Similarly, in a suit for injunction on the basis of title, the Court cannot declare that the plaintiff is entitled to a right of easement, jointly with the defendant.<sup>9</sup> For other illustrations, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>10</sup>

(2) The relief granted should be based on the same cause of action as the relief claimed in the suit.<sup>11</sup>

(3) The relief granted to the plaintiff should not be of an entirely different description from the relief claimed in the plaint. The plaintiff "cannot desert the specific relief prayed; and under the general prayer ask specific relief of another description, unless the facts and circumstances charged by the bill will, consistently with the rules of the Court, maintain that relief."<sup>12</sup> Thus, an injunction will not ordinarily be granted under the power to grant general relief.<sup>13</sup> "It must be expressly prayed, because the defendant might by his answer make a different case under the general prayer from what he would, if an injunction were specifically prayed."<sup>14</sup> The test, therefore, in such cases is to see whether the defendant will not be taken by surprise or be embarrassed by such relief being granted.<sup>15</sup> There can be no surprise if the relief granted is consistent with that claimed and with the case raised in the pleadings<sup>16</sup> or if the parties knew the case which had to be tried.<sup>17</sup> Thus, a declaratory decree may be passed in a suit for possession of property,<sup>18</sup> or a decree for joint possession can be passed in a suit for partition by metes and bounds, where the property happens to be impartible,<sup>19</sup> provided there is no surprise under the circumstances of the case to the defendants. Similarly, damages may be awarded in addition to a decree for specific performance,<sup>20</sup> or an account directed to be taken in a suit for money.<sup>21</sup> But the Court cannot pass a decree for a general taking of accounts of a partnership in a suit to recover plaintiff's share alone in one item of the partnership assets,<sup>22</sup> nor can it, in a personal claim, pass a decree for sale of property in default of the payment of the sum decreed.<sup>23</sup> Where a reversioner sues a Hindu widow for an injunction restraining her from committing waste and in such a suit prays for the appointment of a receiver, he is not entitled to a declaration of his reversionary right if he fails to establish his right to the reliefs claimed.<sup>24</sup> It has been held by the Bombay High Court that in a suit for dissolution of marriage or in the alternative for a declaration that the marriage is a nullity, it is not open to the Court to pass a decree for judicial separation, such relief not being 'general or other relief' within the meaning of this rule.<sup>25</sup>

A Court cannot, under the power to grant further relief, pass a decree in favour of a pro forma plaintiff if it is found that the real plaintiff is not entitled to the relief claimed.<sup>26</sup>

An equitable relief under this rule may be granted even by the Appellate Court,<sup>27</sup> though it will be slow to interfere with the discretion exercised by the trial Court in granting appropriate relief under this rule.<sup>28</sup>

3. Alternative relief. — "A person may rely upon one set of facts if he can succeed in proving them, and he may rely upon another set of facts if he can succeed in proving them."<sup>1</sup> Thus, a plaintiff may claim specific performance of a contract, or, in the alternative, cancellation of the contract and damages.<sup>2</sup> Where A and B are tenants of the same landlord, in a suit for khas possession by A against B and the landlord, refund of salami or rent paid to the landlord can be granted if the right to khas possession is found against.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, a plaintiff may in a suit on a negotiable instrument claim in the alternative a decree on the original consideration.<sup>4</sup> So also, in a suit based on tenancy, the plaintiff can claim damages for use and occupation in the alternative.<sup>5</sup> Again, a pre-emptor may allege that the vendor has no title to part of the property and may alternatively offer to pre-empt the whole, if the Court finds that the vendor had title to sell the whole.<sup>6</sup> An injunction, it has been held, is an alternative relief within the discretion of the Court and not an independent relief under Section 35 (a) of the Easements Act.<sup>7</sup> But in all such cases plaintiff has to set out the facts relied on by him in his alternative claim distinctly and separately.<sup>8</sup> He cannot be allowed to pick out such of the allegations as will support any alternative case put forward by him.<sup>9</sup> If the facts are not stated in the plaint, the plaintiff cannot claim the alternative relief without amending the plaint.<sup>10</sup> In a suit by a son to set aside a transfer by his mother, the plaintiff specifically alleged that his mother was of unsound mind, and stated further that she was under the control of the donee. The Privy Council was inclined to the view that the claim based on undue influence cannot be entertained as it was not specifically pleaded.<sup>11</sup> So also in a suit on a hundi, the Privy Council declined to pass a decree on the original consideration as such an alternative relief had not been prayed for.<sup>12</sup>

But where in a suit all the facts giving rise to the alternative claim are fully stated in the plaint, the fact that the plaintiff has not formally asked for the relief on the alternative claim is no bar to the granting of the relief on that basis.<sup>13</sup>

The plaintiff might rely upon different allegations in the alternative claim even though they may be inconsistent with each other. See Order 6 Rule 2 Note 5.

A prayer for alternative relief cannot be converted into one for additional relief.<sup>14</sup> A plaintiff praying for a relief and also for a lesser relief in the alternative, cannot be deemed to have waived his right to the relief originally claimed.<sup>15</sup> Where the plaintiff asks for one of two alternative reliefs and is granted one, he cannot, in appeal, contend that he should be given the other relief.<sup>16</sup>

3a. Suit under Section 77 of the Registration Act. — In a suit under Section 77 of the Registration Act, 1908, no other claim, such as a claim for possession and mesne profits, can be coupled with the prayer to enforce registration of the document. The reason is that the purpose of such a suit is strictly limited; a special period of limitation is prescribed for it and the court-fee leviable is separately provided for. The allowing of another claim to be included in such a suit will completely alter its scope and character.<sup>1</sup>

4. Events happening after suit. — The ordinary rule is that the rights of parties must be determined as at the date of the action, and not on the basis of rights which accrued to them after the institution of the suit.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where the plaintiff has no cause of action at all to institute the suit, he will not ordinarily be allowed to take pending a suit for a declaration of title the defendant takes possession of the property in dispute, the plaintiff may amend the plaint by adding a prayer for possession instead of bringing another suit.<sup>5</sup> Similarly, if, pending a suit for partition by A against his brothers B and C, B dies, A can amend his plaint and claim a half share instead of one-third.<sup>6</sup> Again, where in a suit for money the real cause of action arose only after the institution of the suit, it was held in the cases noted below<sup>7</sup> that the Court should not reject the plaint and drive the plaintiff to file a fresh suit but should pass a decree on the basis of such subsequent cause of action. It is not only in the power but sometimes the duty of the Court to take notice of subsequent events where, if it is not so done, the Court might decide matters no longer in controversy or deliver judgment which could not be carried into effect or grant a relief which is inappropriate and ineffectual.<sup>8</sup>

But the discretionary power to depart from the general rule and to take notice of subsequent events will not be exercised where it would have the effect of taking away the jurisdiction of the Court, or there is great delay in making the application, or if a fresh enquiry into other facts becomes necessary.<sup>9</sup> It will not also be exercised where the subsequent cause of action is alleged to arise by virtue of something done in the suit itself.<sup>10</sup> Thus, in a suit for possession against a tenant on the ground of forfeiture by denial of title, the plaintiff on failing to prove such denial before suit cannot take advantage of a denial in the written statement of the defendant.<sup>11</sup> The Court will not also exercise such discretionary power if the subsequent cause of action is entirely different and distinct from the cause of action as originally alleged.<sup>12</sup>

A decree which is good and valid at the date it was passed cannot by reason of a subsequent event become bad.<sup>13</sup>

But where subsequent to the date of judgment of the first Court events happen which entitle the plaintiff to a change in the relief, can the Appellate Court take notice of such events and mould the relief accordingly? In Mt. Anand Moyee Chowdhoorayan v. Sheeb Chunder Roy,<sup>14</sup> their Lordships of the Privy Council observed as follows :

"The first and most important question is, whether the decision of the Principal Suther Ameen was, when pronounced, a correct decision of the issues then pending before him between the then parties to the suit. No subsequent event, or devolution of interest, can affect this question ; because to give effect to these, should justice require it, would be the office not of an appeal but of some supplemental proceeding."

It was, however, held in the undermentioned cases<sup>15</sup> that there were exceptions to that general rule and that in such exceptional cases the Appellate Court may take notice of events happening after the date of the judgment of the first Court. The introduction of the new rule, O. 41 R. 33, on the lines of the English Rules of the Supreme Court, enabling the Appellate Court, not only to pass any order which ought to have been passed or made, but to pass such further or other decree or order as the case may require, makes it now perfectly clear that on appeal "such a judgment may be given as ought to be given if the case came at that time before the Court of first instance."<sup>16</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — It is enacted in Section 15 ante, that every suit shall be instituted in the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it. Where a suit is instituted in a wrong Court, i. e., in a Court which is either not competent to try it, or which though competent, is not the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it, the plaint should be returned, under the provisions of this rule, to be presented to the proper Court. The reason is this: where the Court has no jurisdiction over the suit, a judgment given by it will be a determination coram non iudice and it would be a futile proceeding for the judge to go on with an investigation which would have no jural effect.<sup>1</sup> Where the Court has jurisdiction, but is not the Court of the lowest grade competent to try it, it would, if such suits are entertained and tried, be overcrowding Courts of higher grade with suits, which it is the object of the Legislature to prevent.<sup>2</sup>

Where, however, in such a case the evidence has been gone into and concluded and the objection is raised at the time of arguments, the Court should, instead of returning the plaint, proceed to decide the same.<sup>3</sup>

Where the Court comes to the conclusion that the suit should have been instituted in another Court, the only thing that it can do is to return the plaint for presentation to that Court and not to dismiss the suit.<sup>4</sup> But it has been held that a

British Indian Court has no jurisdiction to return a plaint for presentation to a Court outside British India.<sup>5</sup>

Note 1

The provisions of this rule are wide enough to cover all cases where the Court is unable to entertain the suit for want of jurisdiction whatever may be the nature of the objection to its jurisdiction.<sup>6</sup> The shape in which the suit is originally instituted is the test of jurisdiction. Therefore, where it is found in the course of the hearing, as the result of admissions made by the parties or of the evidence led by them, that the relief which the plaintiff was really entitled to was not cognizable by that Court, the rule does not apply.<sup>7</sup>

1. M filed a plaint in a Sub-Court praying for a declaration that a certain tax was illegal and also for damages for illegal entry into his house. The Judge amended the plaint by striking out the reliefs other than that for damages and then, holding that the claim for damages would lie only in the Small Cause Court, returned the plaint for presentation to that Court. It was held that the order was not justified : Motabhai Motilal v. The Surat City Municipality, I. L. R. 20 Bombay 675.

2. S sued R, his co-owner, in the Sub-Court claiming Rs. 1,152-13-0 as his share of profits for certain years. The suit was dismissed and S appealed in respect of Rs. 450 only. The Appellate Court remanded the case for re-trial in respect of that claim. The Subordinate Judge who had pecuniary jurisdiction over Rs. 1,000 returned the plaint for presentation to the Munsif's Court. It was held that this rule applied only where the suit as originally framed was wrongly instituted and did not apply to any part of a dismissed claim abandoned in appeal and that, hence, the order returning the plaint was not justified : Nur Khan v. Shaik Rahim, AIR 1920 Nagpur 47 : 54 Ind Cas 655.

It has been held that this rule is sufficiently wide to cover a case in which by operation of legislation the situation arises even after a suit has been instituted, that it should have been instituted in another Court.<sup>8</sup>

A Court has no jurisdiction to act under this rule after it has passed a decree in the suit.<sup>9</sup> Nor can it do so unless it comes to a definite finding that the suit should have been instituted in another Court.<sup>10</sup> Thus, a Court has no power to return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court merely on the ground that it would be more advantageous to the defendant to have the suit tried in that Court.<sup>11</sup>

Where a Court returns a plaint for presentation to the proper Court on the ground that it was beyond its jurisdiction, the plaintiff is entitled to relinquish a portion of the claim, so as to bring the suit within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the former Court and to re-present the plaint in the same Court.<sup>12</sup>

Suppose now that two reliefs are claimed in a plaint, one of which the Court is not competent to grant. Can the Court return the plaint as regards the relief which it is not competent to grant? There is a conflict of opinion on this point. According to one view, it is competent for the Court to return the plaint in respect of the cause of action which is not within its jurisdiction, and proceed with the suit in respect of the cause of action within its jurisdiction on a certified copy of the plaint.<sup>13</sup> A contrary view has been taken in the undermentioned cases,<sup>14</sup> which hold that the Court should retain the plaint, striking out therefrom such portions as are not within its jurisdiction and in respect of which the plaintiff could file another suit.

It is open to a Court to ignore a relief as being based on no cause of action and then to return the plaint under this rule, if it finds that the rest of the claim is within the jurisdiction of an inferior Court.<sup>15</sup> The Court can also return a plaint when it finds that the plaint has been overvalued.<sup>16</sup>

Where a Munsif's Court returns a plaint for presentation to the proper Court, and in appeal against that order the District Court holds that the Munsif's Court has jurisdiction to entertain the plaint, the Munsif's Court is bound by such order.<sup>18</sup> But where a Munsif returns a plaint for presentation to the Revenue Court and the Revenue Court returns it as being not cognizable by it, and the District Judge in an appeal from the order of the Revenue Court holds that it is a suit cognizable by the Civil Court, the Munsif is not bound by the order of the District Judge. He may make such order on the plaint as he thinks proper, when it is re-presented to him.<sup>19</sup>

Where a plaint is returned under this rule the vakalatnama should also be returned as it enures for the suit in the Court in which it is subsequently presented.<sup>20</sup> The plaint that should be returned under this rule is the plaint which is the basis of the suit at the time when its return is ordered and so, where at such time an application for amendment of the plaint is pending, the plaint that should be returned under this rule is the original plaint and not the proposed amended plaint.<sup>21</sup>

This rule is made applicable to proceedings under the Chota Nagpur Tenancy Act.<sup>22</sup>

2. At any stage of the suit.— The direction in this rule is imperative<sup>1</sup> and as soon as the Court arrives at a conclusion at any stage of the suit that it should have been instituted in some other Court, the plaint should at once be returned.<sup>2</sup> The words "at any stage of the suit" have been newly added and give effect to the Full Bench decision in I. proceedings in the suit before such return are of no effect.<sup>4</sup> Thus, where a Court finds that a suit is undervalued and on re-valuation the suit is found to be beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of that Court, the proper procedure to be followed by the Court is to return the plaint for presentation to the proper Court and not to call upon the plaintiff to pay the proper court-fee according to the correct valuation and to reject the plaint under O. 7 R. 11 on non-payment of the additional court-fee.<sup>5</sup>

3. Return of plaint by Appellate Court. — Section 107 provides that an "Appellate Court shall have the same powers and shall perform, as nearly as may be, the same duties as are conferred and imposed by the Code on Courts of original jurisdiction in respect of suits instituted therein." Therefore, when an Appellate Court decides that the suit should have been instituted in another Court, it has power to direct the plaint to be returned for presentation to the proper Court.<sup>1</sup> As has been seen in Note 22 to Section 107 ante, the Appellate Court can also return the memorandum of appeal presented to it for presentation to the proper Court.<sup>2</sup> Where the Appellate Court so returns a memorandum of appeal on a plea raised by the respondent, and the appeal is presented to the proper Court, the respondent will be estopped thereafter from contending that the former Court should not have returned the memorandum of appeal at all.<sup>3</sup>

4. Return of plaint by Small Cause Court. — This rule is applicable to Provincial Small Cause Courts as well, and therefore, when such a Court finds that a suit is not cognizable by it, it should not go into the merits of the case, but should return the plaint under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

5. Return of plaint by Civil Court to Revenue Court and vice versa. — When a Civil Court finds that a suit is triable only by a Revenue Court, and not by itself, it should return the plaint to be presented to that Court.<sup>1</sup> The Revenue Court has a similar power.<sup>2</sup>

Section 99 of the Punjab Tenancy Act provides that where a Revenue Court or a Civil Court returns a plaint to be presented to the other Court and the latter Court is of opinion that the suit should have been instituted in the former Court, it should not again return the plaint, but refer the matter to the Chief Court.<sup>3</sup>

6. Return of applications. — This rule applies only to plaints and not to applications.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a Court cannot under this rule return an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis.<sup>2</sup> Nor can it return an application for the ascertainment of mesne profits on the ground that the amount exceeds the Court's pecuniary jurisdiction.<sup>3</sup>

7. Court in which the suit should have been instituted. — Where a suit is wrongly instituted in a case in which only an application should have been made to the executing Court, the plaint can be returned for presentation as an application to the executing Court.<sup>1</sup>

Where a plaint, returned under this rule, is presented to the proper Court without any undue delay, but in the interval immovable property which is the subject-matter of the suit is alienated, is the alienation affected by the doctrine of lis pendens, enacted in Section 52 of the Transfer of Property Act? The High Court of Rangoon has held that the words "at any stage of the suit" show that it cannot be said that there was no suit pending before the presentation to the proper Court, and that therefore the doctrine of lis pendens will apply.<sup>2</sup>

8. Court-fee. — Where a plaint is returned for presentation to the proper Court, it does not lose its force by reason of the fact that the court-fee stamp affixed thereto was cancelled by the Court in which the suit was instituted. The Court of re-presentation is bound to give credit for the court-fee already paid.<sup>1</sup> But if in the interval between the date of the original presentation and the presentation in the proper Court the fee payable on the plaint is increased by the Legislature, the amount of court-fee payable is governed by the law in force on the date of the proper presentation.<sup>2</sup>

9. Limitation. — Where a suit has been instituted in a Court having no jurisdiction and it is found necessary to raise a second suit in a Court of proper jurisdiction, the second suit cannot be regarded as a continuation of the first, even though the subject-matter and the parties to the suit are identical.<sup>1</sup> Therefore, for purposes of limitation, the date of the institution of the suit is the date on which the plaint is presented to the Court in which it ought to have been instituted.<sup>2</sup> If at the time of the presentation of the plaint in the proper Court the law of limitation has been altered, it is the law as so altered that will apply to the case.<sup>3</sup>

But the plaintiff can in such cases avail himself of the provisions of Section 14 of the Limitation Act, and claim the exclusion of the time during which the prior proceeding was prosecuted, provided that such proceeding was prosecuted in good faith.<sup>4</sup> A filed a suit in Court X on 23rd October 1924, and the same was returned for presentation to the proper Court on 16th March 1925. On 11th March 1925, however, A had filed an appeal against the order returning the plaint, but pending the appeal he re-presented the suit to the proper Court on 28th April 1925. The latter Court dismissed the suit under O. 9 R. 2 of the Code on 13th August 1925. The appeal was dismissed on 29th July 1926. On the same day, A presented a fresh plaint on the same cause of action to the proper Court and claimed the exclusion of the period from 16th March 1925 to 29th July 1926. It was held that when he re-presented the plaint on 28th April 1925, A must be deemed to have accepted the order of return as correct, that the prosecution of the appeal against the order of return could not thereafter be said to have been in good faith and that therefore the period from 28th April 1925 to 29th July 1926 could not be excluded in computing the period of limitation for the suit.<sup>5</sup>

The period that can be deducted under Section 14 of the Limitation Act is only the period from the date of the filing of the plaint to the date on which it was finally returned by the Court for re-presentation.<sup>6</sup> No period preceding the original presentation of the plaint can be deducted under that Section.<sup>7</sup> But, if, after deducting

Illustrations

1. A presented a plaint in Court X and the same was ordered to be returned on the 25th March for presentation to the proper Court but the Office returned it only on the 10th of April. It was held that A was entitled to count in his favour the days up to the 10th of April when the plaint was finally returned.<sup>9</sup>

2. The last day of limitation for a suit expired on 5-9-1927 on which date the Court was closed for the vacation and the plaintiff presented the plaint in Court X on 7-10-1927 which was the re-opening day. It was returned for presentation to the proper Court on 8-10-1927. It was held that the period between 5-9-1927 and 7-10-1927 could not be excluded under Section 14 of the Limitation Act.<sup>10</sup>

3. A presented a plaint in a wrong Court and the same was finally returned on 20-3-1924 for presentation to the proper Court. The next 3 days were holidays for the Court in which the plaint was to be presented and the plaintiff re-presented the same on 24-3-1924. It was held that the re-presentation was proper.<sup>11</sup>

It has been held by the Madras High Court that where a plaint is returned under this rule as being beyond the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court and the plaintiff, after amending the plaint so as to bring the claim within the jurisdiction of the Court, re-presents the plaint in the same Court, the plaint can be treated as a continuation of the former suit without any necessity of falling back on the provisions of Section 14 of the Limitation Act.<sup>12</sup>

A plaint cannot be returned under this rule merely because the plaintiff has not mentioned in it the list of documents on which he relies. Hence, if a plaint is returned for this defect, and is then re-presented, the date of the institution of the suit for purposes of limitation is the date of the original presentation of the plaint.<sup>13</sup>

There is a difference of opinion on the question whether the Court returning a plaint under this rule can allow the plaintiff a period within which he might re-present it in the proper Court. In an earlier case of the Calcutta High Court<sup>14</sup> it was held that the Court had a discretion to grant a reasonable time within which the plaintiff might present the plaint to the proper Court. But the same High Court has, in a later decision,<sup>15</sup> held that the order granting time is a nullity and will not save the suit from the bar of limitation. This view has also been followed by the Patna High Court.<sup>16</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>17</sup> where the Court had granted such time, the High Court of Lahore did not say that the order was wrong, but decided the case on other grounds.

10. Chartered High Courts.—Order 49 Rule 3, sub-rule 1 provides that this rule is not applicable to Chartered High Courts. As to the practice of the High Court of Bombay on its original side, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup> The High Court can, however, under its inherent powers direct, in a suit which it has dismissed for want of jurisdiction, that the plaint should be returned to the plaintiff so that he may file it in the proper Court, and thus avoid the payment of court-fee twice over.<sup>2</sup>

11. Appeal. — An order under this rule, returning a plaint to be presented to the proper Court, is appealable under O. 43 R. 1 (a), whether the order is made by the Court of the first instance<sup>1</sup> or by the Court of first appeal in the exercise of its powers under Section 107 ante.<sup>2</sup> But where such an order is reversed or confirmed in appeal, a second appeal is barred by the provisions of Section 104 sub-section (2).<sup>3</sup> The appellate order reversing that of the Court of first instance cannot also be construed as an order of remand under O. 41 R. 23 so as to be appealable under O. 43 R. 1 (u) inasmuch as the order is not one passed on appeal from a decree.<sup>4</sup> But the aggrieved party can, under Section 105, dispute the correctness of the order in an appeal from the decree if he is otherwise entitled to do so.<sup>5</sup>

Where a Small Cause Court returns a plaint under Section 23 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act to be presented to an ordinary Civil Court in order to decide a question of title to immovable property, the Civil Court has no jurisdiction to return again the plaint under this rule, as the reference to the Civil Court by the Small Cause Court was under a special provision of law empowering the Small Cause Court to make such reference.<sup>6</sup> Section 192 of the Madras Estates Land Act excludes the operation of Order 43 to proceedings under that Act and consequently where, in an appeal to the District Court from a decree in a suit under that Act, the District Court, holding that the Revenue Court had no jurisdiction, directed the plaint to be presented to the proper Court, it was held that no appeal lay against the order of the District Court to the High Court.<sup>7</sup>

It has been held by the High Courts of Madras and Lahore and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur that a plaintiff whose plaint is returned for presentation to the proper Court and who accordingly presents the plaint to the proper Court does not forfeit his right of appeal against the order of return simply on the ground that he chose to file his plaint in the latter Court.<sup>8</sup> But the High Court of Calcutta and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Oudh have taken a contrary view.<sup>9</sup> The High Court of Calcutta has, however, in a later case held that the plaintiff will not forfeit his right of appeal if he specifically reserves his right to do so.<sup>10</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>11</sup> a plaint was returned for presentation to the proper Court. In the latter Court the plaint was rejected for non-payment of deficit court-fees. Thereafter an appeal was filed against the order returning the plaint. In appeal, the case was remanded for trial to the first Court in ignorance of the rejection of the plaint by the other Court. It was held that there was no plaint to try and the remand was ineffectual.

An Appellate Court which reverses an order returning a plaint under this rule has no jurisdiction to remand the case to the lower Court for fresh disposal; the proper procedure is to annul the order of the trial Court and direct it to dispose of the suit according to law.<sup>12</sup>

Where a memorandum of appeal is returned for presentation to the proper Court, is the order of return appealable? The High Courts of Calcutta, Allahabad and Lahore<sup>13</sup> have held that the word "plaint" in this rule does not include a memorandum of appeal and that, therefore, no appeal lies from such an order. The High Court of Madras and the Chief Court of Lower Burma have, on the other hand, held that an appeal does lie in such cases.<sup>14</sup>

It has been held that where a plaintiff does not appeal against an order returning the plaint under this rule and submits to the decision of the Court on the point of jurisdiction, the question cannot be re-agitated in a subsequent suit between the same parties.<sup>15</sup>

12. Revision. — Where a Munsif's Court returned the plaint for presentation to the Small Cause Court and the latter Court returned the plaint for presentation to the Munsif's Court and the Munsif's Court refused to go back on its original order and receive the plaint, the High Court in revision against the second order of the Munsif directed the Small Cause Court to try the case.<sup>1</sup> As to whether an order of the Appellate Court confirming or reversing an order of the Court of first instance returning a plaint under this rule is revisable, see Note 15 to Section 115 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

1. Clause (a) corresponds to clause (a) of Section 53 of the old Code which provided that "the plaintiff may, at the discretion of the Court, at, or any time before the settlement of issues be rejected. . . . ." See Note 10 and the undermentioned cases decided under the old Code.<sup>1</sup>

2. The words "positive rule of" before "law" in clause (d) have been omitted.

3. Clause (d) of Section 54 of the old Code has been omitted, as this Code does not anywhere provide for return of pleadings for amendment.

Order 7 Rule 11 — Note 1

1. ('81) 7 Cal 848 (845). (Held too late to reject a plaintiff in appeal for want of cause of action, as the proceedings in the lower Court showed that plaintiff was entitled to relief.)

('05) 2 Cal L Jour 534 (537). (Do).

[But see ('99) 21 All 341 (345) (FB). (The plaintiff disclosed no cause of action against the defendant named therein — The High Court entertained the plea and dismissed the suit.)]

2. Scope of the Rule. — This rule enacts that the plaint shall be rejected in the four classes of cases mentioned in clauses (a) to (d). But the instances given cannot be regarded as exhaustive of all the cases in which a Court can reject a plaint, or as limiting the inherent powers of the Court in respect thereof.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a Court has jurisdiction, in a proper case, to reject the plaint filed by the next friend of a minor on the ground that it is not in the interests of the minor that the suit should be proceeded with.<sup>2</sup> So also where it is alleged that a suit was instituted without the signature and authority of the plaintiff, the Court will frame a preliminary issue on the point and reject the plaint if it finds the issue against the plaintiff.<sup>3</sup> An Appellate Court has the same powers of rejecting a plaint as the Court of first instance.<sup>4</sup>

In disposing of a suit under this rule, the Court ought not to dismiss the suit, but should reject the plaint.<sup>5</sup> The effect of rejection as distinguished from a dismissal is that, in the former case, the plaintiff would not under Rule 13 infra, be precluded from filing a fresh plaint in respect of the same cause of action, if he so desires.

A plaintiff is not entitled to have the dismissal of a suit for default set aside under O. 9 R. 9 on the ground that the plaint should have been rejected.<sup>6</sup>

This rule does not apply to Chartered High Courts in the exercise of their ordinary, or extraordinary original civil jurisdiction (see O. 49 R. 3 infra). The High Court of Allahabad has in the undermentioned case<sup>7</sup> held that this rule is inapplicable to their appellate jurisdiction also notwithstanding the provisions of Section 107 of the Code.

3. "Where it does not disclose a cause of action." — When a plaint is filed, it is the duty of the Court to see that the plaint contains the necessary allegations which must be proved before a decree could be given, and, if there are not the necessary allegations, to reject the plaint.<sup>1</sup> To enable a Court to reject a plaint on this ground, it should look at the plaint and at nothing else.<sup>2</sup> In asking the Court to decide an issue like this (which is essentially a demurrer), the defendants must be taken to admit for the sake of argument that the allegations of the plaintiff in his plaint are true modo et forma—in manner and form.<sup>3</sup> In doing so they must be taken to reserve their right to show that those allegations are wholly or partially false in the further stages of the action, should the preliminary point be overruled. The power to reject a plaint under this clause must be exercised only if the Court comes to the conclusion that even if all the allegations are proved, the plaintiff would not be entitled to any relief whatever.<sup>4</sup>

As to cases where a cause of action accrues after the presentation of the plaint, see Order 7 Rule 7.

The expression "cause of action" as used in this rule does not mean a claim which is still enforceable under the law of limitation. Where, therefore, a suit is barred by time it cannot be said that the plaint does not disclose a cause of action, and that it falls to be dealt with under clause (a). The Court may, however, proceed under clause (d).<sup>5</sup>

4. "Where the relief claimed is undervalued."—If the Court comes to the conclusion that the plaintiff's valuation of a suit is fictitious, it can require him to make a correct valuation and can reject the plaint on his failure to do so;<sup>1</sup> and this rule applies even to cases in which under the Court-fees Act it is provided that the amount of court-fee is to be determined according to the amount at which the relief sought is valued in the plaint (see Court-fees Act, Section 7, sub-s. 4).<sup>2</sup> But the Court cannot itself fix a valuation in place of the plaintiff's valuation.<sup>3</sup> If the correct valuation would make the Court incompetent to try the suit, then the matter falls under Rule 10 ante, and not under clause (b) of this rule (see O. 7 R. 10, Note 2).

In order to determine whether a suit is properly valued or not, the Court must confine its attention to the plaint and should not look to other circumstances which may subsequently influence the judgment of the Court as to the true value of the relief sought.<sup>4</sup>

See also Note 5 below and Section 6 Note 4.

As to Court's powers of rejection for undervaluation in cases where the plaintiff is entitled to put his own valuation, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>5</sup>

5. Where the plaint is insufficiently stamped.—Where the plaint is properly valued either at the time of the presentation itself or at a time subsequent thereto, in pursuance of an order of the Court under clause (b), but is insufficiently stamped, the Court can act under this rule.<sup>1</sup> But the Court cannot exercise the powers conferred under this clause after the suit has been decided finally so far as that Court is concerned.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, the order for making good the deficiency in court-fee is made before the final decision in the suit, the fee can be realised in execution even after the final decision.<sup>3</sup>

Under the old Code there was a conflict of opinion as to whether a suit would become barred by limitation where the deficiency in court-fee is supplied after the period of limitation for the suit but within the time fixed by the Court. The conflict has now been set at rest by the enactment of Section 149. For a full discussion of the subject, see Note 7 to Section 149 and the undermentioned cases.<sup>4</sup>

A plaint cannot be rejected under this rule for undervaluation or for insufficiency of stamp unless the plaintiff is given an opportunity to correct the valuation or to supply the deficient stamp, as the case may be, within a time to be fixed by the Court, and he fails to do so.<sup>5</sup> Nor does the use of the words "shall be rejected" prevent the Court from exercising its powers under Section 148 of the Code and enlarge the time fixed by it, from time to time.<sup>6</sup> But the plaintiff cannot, as of right, claim extension of the time fixed by the Court. The question depends on the discretion of the Court.<sup>7</sup> No express order is necessary for such extension of time. An extension may be inferred from the fact that the Court has actually allowed a thing to be done beyond the prescribed time.<sup>8</sup>

The rule does not apply to applications for leave to sue in forma pauperis. Hence, a Court is not bound, on its dismissing an application for leave to sue in forma pauperis, to grant a time within which a properly stamped plaintiff could be filed.<sup>9</sup>

Where a plaint is written upon insufficiently stamped paper and the plaintiff does not supply the requisite stamp within the time fixed by the Court, can he be allowed to reduce his claim so as to bring it within certain court-fees? within a certain court-fees.<sup>10</sup> The High Courts of Calcutta and Bombay held in earlier decisions that under such circumstances the Court had no jurisdiction to allow the plaintiff to reduce his claim and was bound to reject the plaint, on the ground that this rule is mandatory.<sup>11</sup> A contrary view has, however, been taken in the undermentioned decisions of the same High Courts.<sup>12</sup>

Where a plaintiff is given time to pay additional court-fees under this rule and he does not appear on the date fixed in consequence of which the Court dismisses the suit, the order though one of dismissal must be deemed to be an order under this rule, and not under O. 9 R. 8, so that a fresh suit on the same cause of action will not be barred under O. 9 R. 9.<sup>13</sup> Clause (c) of this rule does not apply to the case of failure of a plaintiff to pay stamp duty on a partition decree.<sup>14</sup>

Where plaintiff is given time to make up the deficiency in court-fees, and within the time so allowed the plaintiff applies for permission to continue the suit as a pauper, the application should be considered on its merits and the plaint should not be considered as rejected for failure to pay the deficiency in court-fees.<sup>15</sup>

It has been held that when a plaint was re-presented in a proper Court after being returned by the wrong Court where it was originally filed, the proper Court is not debarred from requiring the proper stamp to be affixed though no objection was taken in the wrong Court.<sup>16</sup>

6. Memorandum of appeal insufficiently stamped. — This rule applies in terms to plaints insufficiently stamped. O. 7 R. 11

8. Rejection of plaint on other grounds.—As has been seen in Note 2 ante, the instances given in this rule are not exhaustive of the cases in which a Court may reject a plaint. But a Court has no power to reject a plaint merely because it is defective in that it does not comply with some provisions of law.<sup>1</sup> The proper procedure in such a case is to call on the plaintiff to cure the defect and on his failure to do so, to proceed to decide the suit forthwith and to dismiss it under O. 17 R. 3 or to reject the plaint under the Court's inherent powers.<sup>2</sup> Section 203, sub-section 4 of the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908) provides that the following clause shall be deemed to be added to this rule as clause (e), viz.—

“(e) In any suit to which Section 203 of the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, applies if the certified copy therein mentioned is not annexed to the plaint and the plaintiff on being required by the Court to produce it fails to do so within the time allowed by the Court.”

9. Rejection of plaint in part.—A plaint cannot, under this rule, be rejected in part and retained in part. It should be rejected as a whole.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where in a suit by two plaintiffs against the Secretary of State for India, one of them has failed to give notice as required by Section 80 of the Code, the plaint should be rejected as a whole and not merely as regards the plaintiff who had failed to give notice.<sup>2</sup>

10. At what stage plaint can be rejected.—The provisions of this rule are imperative and can be brought into operation at any stage of the suit. Therefore, the registration of a plaint does not prevent its rejection under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Where, however,

Where, however, the question is, what provision of the Court-fees Act applies to the relief sought for in the plaintiff or under what category the suit falls, the decision is not final under that Section and an appeal is not barred.<sup>2</sup>

An Appellate Court can reject a memorandum of appeal under this rule read with Section 107.<sup>3</sup> But a memorandum of appeal cannot be rejected on the ground that the court-fee on the plaint in the trial Court has not been paid by the plaintiff-appellant.<sup>4</sup>

As to whether the rejection of a memorandum of appeal is a "decree," see Note 13 to Section 2 sub-section 2, ante.

Where a plaint returned under R. 10 ante for presentation to the proper Court is rejected by the latter Court for not making up the deficiency in court-fee and the order of return is reversed on appeal, the plaintiff having suppressed the fact of rejection, the appellate order is void and the only remedy of the plaintiff is to appeal against the order of rejection.<sup>5</sup>

12. Revision. — An order rejecting a plaint being a decree and appealable as such, a revision against such an order is incompetent.<sup>1</sup> But where appeal is barred under Section 12 of the Court-fees Act,<sup>2</sup> or where an appeal against an order under this rule is rejected as incompetent<sup>3</sup> or where the plaint is rejected by a Provincial Small Cause Court,<sup>4</sup> the order is revisable if the conditions of Section 115 are satisfied. There is a conflict of opinion on the question whether an order demanding additional court-fee is open to revision, so long as the order has not resulted in the rejection of the plaint for non-compliance with the order. It has been held in the undermentioned cases<sup>5</sup> that no revision lies, since the plaintiff has another remedy open to him by way of appeal on the rejection of the plaint. The contrary opinion has been maintained in the undermentioned cases<sup>6</sup> on the ground that the question is really one of jurisdiction as the plaint has to be rejected if the stamp duty has not been paid. According to the High Court of Calcutta,<sup>7</sup> where the plaintiff's valuation is accepted by the Court as correct on an examination of the facts alleged, the order is not open to revision inasmuch as such an order does not fall within Section 115 and as the decision could be challenged in an appeal from the decree in the suit.

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — This rule makes a distinction between a document sued on and a document relied on by the plaintiff as evidence in support of his claim.<sup>1</sup> Where a plaintiff sues upon a document he should produce the document into Court when the plaint is presented<sup>2</sup> except where such document is an entry in a shop-book or account, in which case he should produce a true copy of the entry to be filed with the plaint and the procedure laid down in Rule 17, infra, should be followed. Where the plaintiff relies on any document as evidence in support of his claim, he should enter such document in a list to be annexed to the plaint, whether the document is in his power or not.<sup>3</sup> But even such documents should, if they are in his possession or power, be produced into Court at or before the first hearing of the suit.<sup>4</sup> (See O. 13 R. 1, infra.) A document on which the plaintiff has not in terms sued, and which is not produced into Court when the plaint is presented, can only be treated, if subsequently produced, as a piece of evidence and not as creating any rights in favour of the plaintiff.<sup>5</sup>

The object of this rule is to exclude documents as to the existence of which, at the date of the suit, there may be reasonable doubt and as to the genuineness of which suspicions might arise when subsequently tendered.<sup>6</sup> The provisions of this rule therefore are imperative<sup>7</sup> and compel the plaintiff to produce or disclose all documents on which he relies in support of his claim.<sup>8</sup> But the plaintiff's failure to produce or disclose the documents as provided by this rule does not entail the return<sup>9</sup> or rejection of the plaint or the dismissal of the suit.<sup>10</sup> The only penalty for such default is that he cannot produce the documents in evidence at the hearing without the leave of the Court (see Rule 18, infra).

This rule, however, does not apply if the plaintiff himself is not aware of the existence of any documents which he subsequently discovers as supporting his claim.<sup>11</sup>

It has been held by the Privy Council that if the plaintiff produces the document sued on, as required by this rule, and the document is lost subsequently from the custody of the Court, the plaintiff should be allowed to adduce secondary evidence of the document under Section 65 of the Evidence Act, 1872, without showing how the original document was lost.<sup>12</sup>

Add the following proviso to sub-rule (2):

Provided that, if the copy is not written in English or is written in a character other than the ordinary Persian or Nagri character in use, the procedure laid down in Order 13 Rule 12 as to verification shall be followed, and in that case the Court or its officer need not examine or compare the copy with the original.

After sub-rule (2) add the following Explanation:

Explanation.—When a shop-book or other account written in a language other than English or the language of the Court is produced with a translation or transliteration of the relevant entry, the party producing it shall not be required to present a separate affidavit as to the correctness of the translation or transliteration, but shall add a certificate on the document itself, that it is a full and true translation or transliteration of the original entry, and no examination or comparison by the ministerial officer shall be required except by a special order of the Court.

Add the following proviso:

Provided that, if the copy is not written in English or is written in a character other than the ordinary Persian or Nagri character in use, the procedure laid down in Order 13 Rule 12, as to verification shall be followed, and in that case the Court or its officer need not examine or compare the copy with the original.

1. Shop-book or account. — Section 4 of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act<sup>1</sup> provides that a certified copy of any entry in a banker's book shall in all legal proceedings be received as prima facie evidence of the existence of such entry and shall be admitted as evidence of the matters, transactions, and accounts therein recorded in every case where, and to the same extent as the original entry is now by law admissible, but not further or otherwise. The term "Bankers' Books" includes ledgers, daybooks, cash books, account books and all other books used in the ordinary course of business of a bank.<sup>2</sup> Therefore, if the document sued on is a banker's book it is not necessary to produce the original book itself along with the plaint: it is enough if a certified copy of the entry or entries is produced. But it should be shown that the bank is one to whose books the provisions of the Bankers' Books Evidence Act have been extended.<sup>3</sup>

If the document sued on is not a banker's book but is an entry in a shop-book or account, the plaintiff should produce the book or account at the time of filing the plaint together with a true copy of the entry sued on.<sup>4</sup> Thereupon the Court or its officers should mark the document for identification<sup>5</sup> and should, if the copy is found to be correct, file the copy along with the plaint.

But the fact that the original document is not presented along with the plaint, as provided by this rule and the plaint is registered, is not a ground for rejecting the plaint: but the plaintiff cannot afterwards produce the document in evidence except with the leave of the Court as provided by Rule 18 infra.<sup>6</sup>

1. Scope and object of the Rule. — The policy underlying this rule is to exclude evidence, the existence of which at the date of the suit is doubtful, and as to the genuineness of which suspicion may arise because it was produced at a late stage of the suit.<sup>1</sup> The Court has, however, a wide discretion with regard to the reception of documents which were not produced with the plaint or entered in the list of documents<sup>2</sup> and where there can be no doubt about the genuineness of the documents produced, such as certified copies of public documents or records of judicial proceedings, Courts will not as a rule shut them out.<sup>3</sup> But even in such cases leave may be refused where there has been unreasonable delay in the production of documents, unless satisfactory reasons are assigned for the delay.<sup>4</sup> An Appellate Court will not ordinarily interfere with the discretion exercised by the lower Court under this rule.<sup>5</sup>

The leave granted by the Court need not be express, but may be gathered from the records and the circumstances of the case.<sup>6</sup>

2. Cases where leave is not necessary. — Sub-rule 2 of this rule enacts that the rule as to the inadmissibility of documents not produced with, or referred to in the plaint, does not apply to the following cases —

- (1) Where the document is to be handed over to the witness for the purpose of refreshing his memory and not to be relied upon as a probative document in itself in support of the plaintiff's case.<sup>1</sup>
- (2) Where the documents are produced in answer to any case set up by the defendant.<sup>2</sup>
- (3) Where they are produced for the cross-examination of the defendant's witnesses.<sup>3</sup> The words "defendant's witnesses" include also plaintiff's witnesses who have turned hostile to the plaintiff and whom the plaintiff is permitted to cross-examine.<sup>4</sup>

3. Revision. — The question of admission of evidence is not ordinarily a question of jurisdiction but is merely one of law and no revision will lie in such cases.<sup>1</sup>

(Oudh)

"19. Every plaint or original petition shall be accompanied by an address at which service of notice, summons or other process may be made on the plaintiff or petitioner. This address shall be called the "registered address," and service thereat shall be deemed to be sufficient service.

O. 7 R. 20
(Oudh)

20. Any party subsequently added as plaintiff or petitioner shall, in like manner, file a registered address at the time of applying or consenting to be joined as plaintiff or petitioner.

(Oudh)

21. A registered address shall be within the local limits of the District Court within which the suit or petition is filed, if the plaintiff or petitioner resides or carries on business within those limits.

O. 7 R. 22
(Oudh)

22. If a plaintiff or petitioner fails to file a registered address as required above, he shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to have his suit dismissed or his petition rejected.

An order under this rule may be passed by the Court suo motu or on the application of any party.

(Oudh)

23. Where the registered address of the plaintiff or petitioner is within the limits of a head-quarters town or of a municipality of India (including Burma) or Ceylon, a notice, summons or other process may be served on him at that address by registered post and such service shall be deemed to be as effectual as if the notice or process had been personally served.

(Oudh)

24. In all cases to which Rule 23 does not apply, where a plaintiff or petitioner is not found at his registered address and no agent or adult male member of his family on whom a notice or process can be served is present, a copy of the notice or process shall be affixed to the outer door of the house. If, on the date fixed, such plaintiff or petitioner is not present another date shall be fixed and a copy of the notice, summons or other process shall be sent to his registered address by registered post, and such service shall be deemed to be as effectual as if the notice or process had been personally served.

(Oudh)

25. Whenever a plaintiff or petitioner has engaged a pleader to act for him a notice or process for service on him shall be served in the manner prescribed by O. 3, R. 5, unless the Court directs service at his registered address :

Provided that, where a notice is served on a pleader under the above rule, he shall be given sufficient time to communicate with his client and to receive instructions.

Explanation. — Where ten days' time has been allowed under this rule, this shall be deemed sufficient time within the meaning of this proviso in the absence of an application made within such ten days by the pleader concerned for further time.

26. A plaintiff or petitioner who wishes to change his registered address shall file a verified petition, and the Court shall direct the amendment of the record accordingly. Notice of such petition shall be given to such other parties to the suit or proceedings as the Court may deem it necessary to inform, and may be either served upon the pleaders for such parties or be sent to them by registered post, as the Court thinks fit.

(Oudh)

27. Nothing in Rules 19 to 26 shall prevent the Court from directing the service of a notice or process in any other manner, if for any reason it thinks fit."

(Oudh)

PATNA

Add the following as Rules 19 to 22:

"19. Every plaint or original petition shall be accompanied by a statement giving an address at which service of notice, summons or other process may be made on the plaintiff or petitioner, and every plaintiff or petitioner subsequently added shall, immediately on being so added, file a similar statement.

O. 7 R. 19
(Patna)

20. An address for service filed under the preceding rule shall state the following particulars:—

O. 7 R. 20
(Patna)

- (1) the name of the street and number of the house (if in a town);
- (2) the name of the town or village;
- (3) the Post Office;
- (4) the district; and
- (5) the munsif (if in Bihar and Orissa) or the District Court (if outside Bihar and Orissa).

21. Where a plaintiff or petitioner fails to file an address for service, he shall be liable to have his suit dismissed or his petition rejected by the Court suo motu, or any party may apply for an order to that effect, and the Court may make such order as it thinks just.

O. 7 R. 21
(Patna)

22. A party who desires to change the address for service given by him as aforesaid shall file a verified petition, and the Court may direct the amendment of the record accordingly. Notice of such petition shall be given to such other parties to the suit as the Court may deem it necessary to inform, and may be either served upon the pleaders for such parties or be sent to them by registered post, as the Court thinks fit."

O. 7 R. 22
(Patna)

SIND

Add the following as Rules 19 to 25:

"19. Address to be filed with plaint. — Every plaint shall be accompanied by a memorandum in writing giving an address at which service of notice, or summons or other process may be made on the plaintiff. Plaintiffs subsequently added, shall immediately on being so added, file a memorandum in writing of this nature.

O. 7 R. 19
(Sind)

20. Nature of address to be filed. — An address for service filed under the preceding rule shall be within the local limits of the district Court within which the suit is filed, or if he cannot conveniently give an address as aforesaid, at a place where a party ordinarily resides.

(Sind)

21. Consequences of failing to file address. — Where a plaintiff fails to file an address for service, he shall be liable to have his suit dismissed by the Court suo motu or any party may apply for an order to that effect, and the Court may make such order as it thinks just.

O. 7 R. 21
(Sind)

22. Procedure when party not found at the place of address. — Where a party is not found at the address given by him for service and no agent or adult male member of his family on whom a notice or process can be served is present, a copy of the notice or process shall be affixed to the outer door of the house and such service shall be deemed to be as effectual as if the notice or process had been personally served.

(Sind)

23. Service of notice on pleaders. — Where a party engages a pleader, notice or process on him shall be served in the manner prescribed by O. 3 R. 5, unless the Court directs service at the address for service given by the party.

(Sind)

24. Change of address. — A party who desires to change the address for service given by him as aforesaid shall file a fresh memorandum in writing to this effect and the Court may direct the amendment of the record accordingly. Notice of such memorandum shall be given to all the other parties to the suit and may be served either upon the pleaders for such parties or be sent to them by registered post, as the Court thinks fit.

O. 7 R. 25
(Sind)

25. Rules not binding on Court. — Nothing in these rules shall prevent the Court from directing the service of a notice or process in any other manner, if, for any reasons, it thinks fit to do so."

ORDER VIII.

WRITTEN STATEMENT AND SET-OFF

O. 8 R. 1

R. 1. [S. 110.] The defendant may, and, if so required by the Court, shall, at or before the first hearing or within such time as the Court may permit, present a written statement of his defence.

Written Statement.

[1877, S. 110; 1859, S. 120.]

Local Amendments

LAHORE

After the word "defence" place a semicolon and add the following :

"and with such written statement, or if there is no written statement, at the first hearing, shall produce in Court all documents in his possession or power on which he bases his defence or any claim for set-off.

(2) Where he relies on any other documents as evidence in support of his defence or claim for set-off, he shall enter such documents in a list to be added or annexed to the written statement, or where there is no written statement, to be presented at the first hearing. If no such list is so annexed or presented, the defendant shall be allowed a further period of ten days to file this list of documents.

(3) A document which ought to be entered in the list referred to in sub-clause (2) but which has not been so entered, shall not, without the leave of the Court, be received in evidence on the defendant's behalf at the hearing of the suit.

(4) Nothing in this rule shall apply to documents produced for cross-examination of plaintiff's witnesses or handed to a witness merely to refresh his memory."

N.-W.F.P.

Add the following as sub-clause (2) :

"The defendant at the time of presenting a written statement shall, where he relies on any documents (whether in his possession or power or not), enter such documents in a list and produce those documents which are in his possession or power."

O. 8 R. 1

Add the following as Rule 1 (2), and read the existing Rule 1 as Rule 1 (1) :

1 (2). The defendant shall file with his written statement a list of all the documents on which he relies as evidence in support of his case, shall produce with the written statement such of the documents as are in his possession or power, and shall cause the others to be summoned on a date to be fixed by the Court for the purpose.

Explanation. — A certified copy of a public document is a document "in the power" of a party, but where a document is in the possession of a person other than the defendant, it will not be deemed to be "in the power" of the defendant.

4. Court-fee not leviable on written statement.

1. Written statement. — A written statement is the pleading of the defendant, and must be filed by him personally, or on his behalf by a duly constituted agent. The filing of a written statement by a third person on behalf of the defendant is not sanctioned by the Code.<sup>1</sup>

Where, after the service of summons the defendant has not had sufficient time to enable him to file a written statement<sup>2</sup> or where the Court requires him to file a written statement,<sup>3</sup> it should grant an adjournment for that purpose. An Appellate Court cannot call for a written statement from any of the parties.<sup>4</sup> As to what a written statement should or should not contain, see O. 6 Rr. 2 and 7.

The omission to file a written statement does not amount to an admission of the facts stated in the plaint.<sup>5</sup>

2. Supplemental written statement. — See O. 6 R. 7 and O. 8 R. 9.

3. First hearing, meaning of. — The "first hearing" of a suit does not mean the day on which the witnesses are examined or the trial taken up. It means the day on which the Court goes into the pleadings in order to understand the contentions of the parties.<sup>1</sup> In suits in which issues have to be framed, the day on which such issues are framed is the first hearing of the suit<sup>2</sup> inasmuch as on that day the Court looks into the pleadings with a view to understand the contentions of the parties. This is

In cases in which no issues need be framed, such as small cause suits, the first hearing will, it is conceived, be the day on which the Court goes into the case of the parties for the purpose of trial.

determination, for the first time in appeal.<sup>2</sup> The rule requires that the defendant must raise by his pleading all matters which show that the suit is not maintainable. Hence, the defendant will not be entitled, as of right, to rely on any ground of defence which he has not taken in his written statement.<sup>3</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that a plea of estoppel is not one 'which shows the suit to be not maintainable' and that therefore such plea can be allowed to be raised for the first time in appeal under O. 41 R. 2, though not raised in the written statement.<sup>4</sup> Whether a matter has been pleaded sufficiently to give the Court the right to form a judgment depends upon the allegations and form of the pleadings; the Courts must not look to the mere wordings of the plaint, but to the issues settled and the manner of the treatment in the lower Court.<sup>5</sup> "The effect of the rule is, for reasons of practice and justice and convenience, to require the party to tell his opponent what he is coming to the Court to prove. If he does not do that, the Court will deal with it in one of two ways. It may say that it is not open to him, that he has not raised it and will not be allowed to rely on it; or it may give him leave to amend by raising it and protect the other party, if necessary, by letting the case stand over. The rule is not one that excludes from the consideration of the Court the relevant subject-matter for decision simply on the ground that it is not pleaded. It leaves the party in mercy and the Court will deal with him as is just."<sup>6</sup> Thus, a plea though not taken in the statement can be raised provided it is taken before the trial has commenced and no prejudice is caused to the plaintiff.<sup>7</sup>

Where service of notice on defendant by the plaintiff is the foundation of defendant's liability, and where no allegation of service of such notice is made in the plaint, the plaintiff is not relieved from proving service of such notice merely because the defendant has not raised the plea in his written statement but raises it at the time of the argument.<sup>8</sup>

2. Special defences. — In answer to the claim of a plaintiff (for instance, on the basis of a contract), the defendant may admit that he made the contract, but may avoid the effect of that admission by pleading performance, fraud, release, limitation, etc.<sup>1</sup> Such a plea is called a plea in confession and avoidance. For instances of the nature of the pleas that may be set up in defence, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>2</sup>

3. Alternative defences. — See Order 6 Rule 2.

4. Fraud. — See Order 6 Rule 4.

5. Limitation. — A party should not be allowed to raise a plea of limitation for the first time in appeal where such plea involves a decision upon questions of fact.<sup>1</sup> Where the written statement asserts that the suit is barred by limitation, it is not necessary that the plea ought to be stated more explicitly, as by reference to the particular article of the Limitation Act.<sup>2</sup> But where the plaint itself shows that the suit is filed after the period prescribed, the Court is not precluded from going into the question of limitation even though it is not raised in the statement.<sup>3</sup> As a matter of fact, under Section 3 of the Limitation Act the Court must dismiss the suit if on the facts stated in the plaint, the claim is barred.

6. "Facts showing illegality." — A plea of illegality of the consideration for a bond which is the subject of suit must be definitely pleaded in the written statement, for it is a case in which particulars may be necessary. The plea cannot be raised for the first time in the arguments.<sup>1</sup> See also Notes to O. 6 R. 8.

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule. | 2. "Except damages."

1. Scope of the Rule. — A defendant can either admit or deny the several allegations made in the plaint. If he decides to deny any such allegation he must do so clearly and explicitly.<sup>1</sup> Thus, in Grocott v. Lovatt<sup>2</sup> the plaintiff alleged in para. 3 of his statement of claim that the defendant, on or about a certain date, falsely and maliciously wrote, printed and published a certain handbill. The reply of the defendant to this was: "the defendant denies the facts alleged in para. 3 of the statement of claim." The Court of Appeal held that the denial was sufficient. But a statement that the defendant "puts the plaintiff to proof of the several allegations in the plaint" or that he "does not admit the correctness of the statements contained in the plaint" is not a sufficient denial within the meaning of this rule (see Rule 5 below). The rule is not limited to denial alone; it includes non-admission as well, so that where a defendant pleads that he does not admit a particular allegation in the plaint, it would be a sufficient traverse.<sup>3</sup> As to the effect of failure to deny specifically, see O. 8 R. 5.

No party should traverse matter not alleged; he should be content to answer the case that is actually laid against him and should not plead that which he thinks his opponent meant or ought to have raised.<sup>4</sup>

2. "Except damages." — The exception in this rule makes it unnecessary for the defendant to deny the claim to or amount of damages.<sup>1</sup> It is probably intended that damages shall be deemed to be put in issue in all cases, unless expressly admitted.

R. 4. [New.] Where a defendant denies an allegation of fact in the plaint, he must not do so evasively, but answer the point of substance. Thus, if it is alleged that he received a certain sum of money, it shall not be sufficient to deny that he received that particular amount, but he must deny that he received that sum or any part thereof, or else set out how much he received. And if an allegation is made with diverse circumstances, it shall not be sufficient to deny it along with those circumstances.

Evasive denial.

[R. S. C., O. 19 R. 19.]

1. Plaintiff allegations not to be denied evasively. — A sues B for dissolution of partnership alleging that he agreed to enter into partnership with him to carry on certain business. B in his written statement admits that he agreed to enter into partnership as alleged but adds that "the terms of the arrangement between himself and the plaintiff were not definitely agreed upon as alleged." This is an evasive denial of the fact of partnership and is not permissible.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where several circumstances are set out in the plaint as constituting the details of certain transactions, and the defendant, instead of denying the several circumstances specifically, denies them as a whole using almost the precise language of the allegations denied, the denial will, as a rule, be considered evasive.<sup>2</sup> Thus, if the plaintiff in an action for wages alleges that he has served the defendant as a hired servant from the 25th March 1908 to 24th June 1909, at Epson, in the County of Surrey, it would be a bad traverse for the defendant to plead "the plaintiff did not serve the defendant as a hired servant from the 25th March 1908 to 24th June 1909, at Epson, in the County of Surrey." He must deny that the plaintiff ever served him at all, or else state how long he admits the plaintiff did serve him. He must not traverse the place which is immaterial, or, if he does, he must add the words 'or at any other place' after the words 'the plaintiff did not serve him at Epson.'<sup>3</sup> But where the plaintiff, claiming title under one S alleged that she died on the 28th of September 1906, and the defendant pleaded that he did not admit that S died on the 28th of September 1906, and that the suit was barred by limitation, the denial is not evasive, inasmuch as there is only one fact and that has been stated to be not admitted.<sup>4</sup> Where a denial is evasive, leave to amend may be given under O. 6 R. 17, except where the defendant is found to have acted mala fide.<sup>5</sup>

R. 5. [New.] Every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specifically or by necessary implication or stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted except as against a person under disability :

1. Scope of the Rule. — "The whole object of pleadings is to bring the parties to an issue, and the object of this Order is to prevent the issue being enlarged, which would prevent either party from knowing, when the cause came on for trial, what the real point to be decided was."<sup>1</sup> This rule states the effect of the failure to conform to Rule 3 ante, and must not be read in a sense inconsistent with Rule 3; therefore, a general denial cannot mean a denial by implication.<sup>2</sup> The rule permits the traversal of a statement in the plaint by saying that it is not admitted.<sup>3</sup> The word "specifically" qualifies also the words "or stated to be not admitted" and therefore, a refusal to admit must also be stated specifically.<sup>4</sup> The words "if not denied specifically . . . or stated to be not admitted" must be read to mean "if not denied specifically . . . or if not stated to be not admitted." In other words, every allegation of fact in the plaint will be deemed to be admitted, if in the written statement it is neither specifically denied nor specifically stated to be not admitted.<sup>5</sup>

The principle of the rule does not apply to allegations in the written statement and hence, it cannot be said that where there is no specific denial by the plaintiff of such allegations, he admits them.<sup>6</sup>

This rule does not apply where the allegation in the plaint as to the fact which is said to be admitted by the want of a specific denial under this rule is vague and inconclusive.<sup>7</sup>

In the undermentioned case,<sup>8</sup> it was held by Niamatullah, J., of the Allahabad High Court that the principle of this rule may be applied to a judgment-debtor on whom a notice of application for execution of a decree containing an allegation of fact is served.

Note 2

2. Facts not denied specifically will be taken as admitted. — The effect of this rule is to relieve the plaintiff from the obligation of proving such allegations in his plaint as are neither specifically denied nor stated to be not admitted in the written statement.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where in a suit for ejection the land from which it is sought to eject a tenant is alleged to be 'old waste' under the Madras Estates Land Act, 1908, and this is not traversed in the written statement, the defendant cannot afterwards plead that the land is not 'old waste.'<sup>2</sup> A plea that the defendant does not admit any of the allegations in the plaint except such as have been expressly admitted and that he puts the plaintiff to the proof of all allegations not so admitted is not a sufficient denial within the meaning of this rule; every allegation so denied will be deemed to have been admitted.<sup>3</sup> But a plea in a written statement that a particular allegation in the plaint is not admitted is a sufficient denial within the meaning of this rule so as to put the plaintiff to the proof thereof.<sup>4</sup> A denial of knowledge of a particular fact is not a denial of the fact and has not the effect of putting the fact in issue. It merely means that the defendant denies that he has any knowledge of the fact and a man can admit a fact of which he has no personal knowledge.<sup>5</sup> Thus, where a plaintiff suing as a curator of the estate of a deceased person stated in the plaint that he was authorised by the Court to sue, and the defendant stated in reply that those allegations were not known to him, it was held that it was not open to him to raise again the question of the plaintiff's authority to sue.<sup>6</sup> But where a landlord sues a tenant for recovery of possession on the ground that the defendant had forfeited his lease by denial of his title and this plea is not traversed by the defendant, such non-denial, though amounting to an admission of the denial of title, will not by itself work a forfeiture of which the plaintiff can take advantage in that suit, inasmuch as the forfeiture must have accrued before the suit was instituted.<sup>7</sup>

As to the effect of admissions made in the written statement, see the under-mentioned cases<sup>8</sup> and also Evidence Act, Sections 17 to 31 and Section 58.

- ('74) 22 Suth W R 220 (221). (Admission in a written statement—Whole of the written statement must be put in.)

3. "Except as against a person under disability." — The rule of admission by non-denial does not apply where the defendant is a person under disability such as a minor.<sup>1</sup> But this exception has nothing to do with the conduct of the suit. Thus, if at the time of the framing of issues or at the trial, the person representing a minor defendant admits certain allegations of fact, it cannot be said that this rule in any way affects such admissions.<sup>2</sup>

4. Admission, if binds co-defendants. — As to whether and when an admission made by a defendant in his written statement will bind co-defendants, see Sections 17 to 23 of the Evidence Act and the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

5. Court may require the facts so admitted to be proved. — In England the rule as to admission by non-denial is very stringent and a defendant, who omits to traverse in his defence any allegation of fact in the statement of claim, is not allowed to traverse that fact at the trial. In India, the general practice is not to construe the pleadings very strictly and on this principle, the defendant who had omitted to traverse in his written statement allegations made in the plaint, was allowed, in cases arising under the old Code, to traverse them at the hearing under special circumstances.<sup>1</sup> The proviso to this rule now makes it clear that the failure of the defendant to deny the allegations in the plaint does not necessarily amount to proof and that the Court can, in its discretion, require proof of such allegations.<sup>2</sup> The discretion should be

(a) A bequeaths Rs. 2,000 to B and appoints C his executor and residuary legatee. B dies and D takes out administration to B's effects. C pays Rs. 1,000 as surety for D; then D sues C for the legacy. C cannot set-off the debt of Rs. 1,000 against the legacy, for neither C nor D fills the same character with respect to the legacy as they fill with respect to the payment of the Rs. 1,000.

(b) A dies intestate and in debt to B. C takes out administration to A's effects and B buys part of the effects from C. In a suit for the purchase-money by C against B, the latter cannot set-off the debt against the price, for C fills two different characters, one as the vendor to B, in which he sues B, and the other as representative to A.

(c) A sues B on a bill of exchange. B alleges that A has wrongfully neglected to insure B's goods and is liable to him in compensation which he claims to set-off. The amount not being ascertained cannot be set-off.

(d) A sues B on a bill of exchange for Rs. 500. B holds a judgment against A for Rs. 1,000. The two claims being both definite pecuniary demands may be set-off.

(e) A sues B for compensation on account of trespass. B holds a promissory note for Rs. 1,000 from A and claims to set-off that amount against any sum that A may recover in the suit. B may do so, for, as soon as A recovers, both sums are definite pecuniary demands.

(f) A and B sue C for Rs. 1,000. C cannot set-off a debt due to him by A alone.

(g) A sues B and C for Rs. 1,000. B cannot set-off a debt due to him alone by A.

(h) A owes the partnership firm of B and C Rs. 1,000. B dies, leaving C surviving. A sues C for a debt of Rs. 1,500 due in his separate character. C may set-off the debt of Rs. 1,000.

- (1) The suit must be for recovery of money.

- (3) It must be legally recoverable.
- (4) Both the parties must fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit.
- (5) The sum claimed by way of set-off should not exceed the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court.

As Illustration (d) to the rule shows, a defendant can claim as set-off under this rule a sum for which he has already obtained a decree against the plaintiff.<sup>4</sup>

Order 20 Rule 19, clause (1) shows that a decree can be passed in favour of a defendant pleading a set-off; therefore, the defendant is in the position of a plaintiff as regards a set-off pleaded by him in respect of the balance claimed by him.<sup>5</sup> No Court can entertain a plea of set-off if it has no jurisdiction to take cognizance of a suit, if one is brought for the recovery of the money sought to be set-off.<sup>6</sup> But it is not necessary that the Court should have territorial jurisdiction over the subject-matter of the claim of set-off, if a separate suit is brought in respect of it.<sup>7</sup>

Where the defendant does not specifically plead a set-off in his written statement, the Court may decline to allow the same to be set up subsequently.<sup>8</sup> Similarly, where no issues are framed on the plea and no application is made by the defendant therefor, it is not open to him to raise it in appeal.<sup>9</sup> Nor can a defendant who has failed to claim a set-off before decree in a suit, claim it in execution proceedings.<sup>10</sup> Where, however, he states in the written statement that he will file a separate suit in respect of his claim, he is not precluded from proving a set-off afterwards on getting the written statement amended.<sup>11</sup>

Where the defendant sets up a plea of set-off falling under this rule, the Court has no option to refuse to adjudicate on it.<sup>12</sup> But a plaintiff cannot compel a defendant to plead a set-off. Thus, where a plaintiff in a suit deducted a sum of money due from him to the defendant with a view to bring the suit within the jurisdiction of the Small Cause Court, it was held that the procedure was illegal and that the plaintiff could not enforce a set-off on the defendant.<sup>13</sup>

3. Suit must be one for the recovery of money. — Under the Code of 1859, it was necessary that the suit should have been for a debt. A set-off could not, therefore be pleaded in a suit for mesne profits, such suit not being for the recovery of a debt.<sup>1</sup> Under the present rule it is sufficient that the suit is one for the recovery of money. The Illustrations to this rule show that no matter what the title may be, no matter whether such title arises ex delicto or ex contractu, so long as the relief sought is to recover money, it is a suit for money, and a set-off can be pleaded therein under this rule.<sup>2</sup> A suit on a negotiable instrument is a suit for money.<sup>3</sup> But a suit merely for dissolution of a partnership or for an account is not a suit for money,<sup>4</sup> though, if there is also a prayer for the payment of such balance as might be found due to the plaintiff, the suit would be one for the payment of money.<sup>5</sup> The High Court of Rangoon has held that a suit on a mortgage for payment of money and in default thereof for the sale of the mortgaged property is a suit for the recovery of money within the meaning of this rule.<sup>6</sup> The High Court of Calcutta has, however, held that a suit to enforce a mortgage under which the right to a personal decree is barred is not a suit for money and no set-off can be pleaded therein under this rule.<sup>7</sup> cannot render such total an unascertained sum of money.<sup>3</sup> Thus, where in a suit by a landlord against his tenant for rent, the tenant pleaded that he was entitled to set off a commission of three per cent. on the amount of the collection made by him on behalf of the landlord, it was held that the set-off was for an ascertained sum of money.<sup>3</sup> But where the set-off is in respect of a claim for damages which are not ascertained,<sup>4</sup> or where the amount can be ascertained only on taking accounts<sup>5</sup> or by determining the quantum of the share due to the defendant,<sup>6</sup> or where the claim is for interest on a sum due to the defendant fixed by him at an arbitrary rate,<sup>7</sup> this rule will not apply. Unascertained sums may, however, be set off by the consent of parties when they compromise the suit.<sup>8</sup>

5. Equitable set-off in cases of unascertained sums of money. — The right to set-off dealt with by this rule is called a legal set-off. But the rule does not take away from the parties any right to set-off which they would have had independently of the Code.<sup>1</sup> Thus, in cases of mutual debits and credits, and in cases where cross demands arise out of the same transaction, or, are so connected in their nature and circumstances as to make it inequitable that the plaintiff should recover and the defendant driven to a cross-suit, Courts of Equity in England have allowed a plea of set-off even though the amount may be unascertained. This set-off is known as an equitable set-off and such a right is recognised in this country also apart from the provisions of this rule.<sup>2</sup> The provisions of O. 20 R. 19, sub-rule (3) also show that this rule is not exhaustive. The distinction, however, between a legal set-off and an equitable set off is, that while in the former case the Court is bound to entertain and adjudicate upon the plea when raised,<sup>3</sup> the defence of equitable set-off cannot be claimed as a matter of right,<sup>4</sup> but the Court has a discretion to adjudicate upon it in the same suit or to order it to be dealt with in a separate suit.<sup>5</sup> Thus, where a Court thinks that the investigation into the claim of equitable set-off will cause great delay, it may refuse to allow it<sup>6</sup> or may order the enquiry to proceed on such terms as it thinks fit.<sup>7</sup>

It is not the law that a claim to set off a definite sum of money can only be put forward under O. 8 R. 6. Nor is it the case that an equitable set-off can be claimed only where the claim is to an unascertained amount. An equitable set-off can be claimed also where the claim of the defendant is to an ascertained sum.<sup>8</sup>

It is essential for a valid claim to an equitable set-off that the cross demands should have arisen out of the same transaction. A plea of equitable set-off will not be available where it relates to a different transaction.<sup>9</sup> Thus, where a plaintiff who promised to supply seven hundred tons of coal, supplied only 469 tons and sued the defendant for the price thereof, the latter can claim set-off in respect of damages for the breach of contract caused by the failure to supply the full stock promised.<sup>10</sup> Similarly, in a suit for the recovery of the principal and interest due on a mortgage bond, the defendant can plead an equitable set-off in respect of the loss occasioned by the plaintiff's failure to make repairs while in possession of the mortgaged properties.<sup>11</sup>

Similarly, where a washerman who lost some of the articles given to him for washing, sued his employer for wages, it was held that the latter could equitably set off the price of the articles so lost.<sup>12</sup> In all the above cases it will be seen that the cross demand of the defendant arose out of the same transaction as that on which the plaintiff's claim was based. But where the plaintiff sues a limited company for recovery of dividend payable to him as a shareholder, the company is not entitled to set off damages for breach of a contract by him to deliver cotton.<sup>13</sup> The reason is that the latter claim arises out of a different transaction altogether from that on which the plaintiff's claim is based.

6. "Legally recoverable from plaintiff." — Where a legal set-off is claimed, it is necessary that the amount set off must be 'legally recoverable' from the plaintiff. The words 'legally recoverable' have no reference to the ability of the debtor to pay the demand in full; a sum is legally recoverable, though, in the result, the creditor must be satisfied with a dividend.<sup>1</sup> A sum cannot be said to be 'legally recoverable' where the plaintiff is not bound by law to pay it,<sup>2</sup> or where he is not liable to the defendant in respect of that debt,<sup>3</sup> or where the claim is barred by res judicata,<sup>4</sup> or is based upon a decree incapable of execution<sup>5</sup> or upon a document not receivable in evidence.<sup>6</sup> A barred debt is not legally recoverable and, therefore, in order to enable a defendant to claim a set-off under this rule the sum due to him must not have been barred by the law of limitation on the date of the suit.<sup>7</sup> The right to plead this defence arises when the action is brought, so that it does not become barred subsequently by

If B therefore has a legally recoverable claim against A in respect of another debt, he can enforce the same as against C also, by way of set-off.<sup>10</sup>

In cases of equitable set-off, can a barred debt be pleaded by way of set-off? It has been held that where there is a fiduciary relationship, as of trustee and cestui que trust or where there is accountability as between plaintiff and defendant, even barred debts can be set off.<sup>11</sup> But in the undermentioned case<sup>12</sup> the High Court of Madras refused to extend this principle to a case of lessor and lessee and to allow an equitable set-off in answer to a suit for rent, on the ground that equity cannot act contrary to the statute of limitations or evade its operation. See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>13</sup>

Where on a plea of set-off it is found that money is due to the defendant in excess of that due to the plaintiff, and the defendant's claim is barred on the date of the written statement but not on the date of the plaint, the question arises whether the Court can pass a decree for the balance in favour of the defendant. The High Courts of Madras,<sup>14</sup> Bombay,<sup>15</sup> Allahabad,<sup>16</sup> and Calcutta<sup>17</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's

Court of Nagpur<sup>18</sup> have held that the plea is a weapon of defence, up to the amount of the plaintiff's claim but that it is one of attack so far as the amount is in excess of the claim and that, therefore, limitation in regard to its recovery must be determined with reference to the date of the written statement.

7. Separate debt not to be set-off against joint debt. — Illustrations (f) and (g) to this rule adopt the general principle of law that a joint debt and a separate debt cannot be set off against each other.<sup>1</sup> Where the debt sought to be set off is due jointly to the defendant and another who is not a party to the suit, it cannot be pleaded by way of set-off; for, the defendant could not have sued the plaintiff without making the other person a party to the suit.<sup>2</sup>

8. "Not exceeding the limits of the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court." — It has been seen in Note 2, ante, that a Court cannot entertain a plea of set-off if it has no jurisdiction to take cognizance thereof. It follows that the value of the claim of set-off must be within the pecuniary jurisdiction of the Court.<sup>1</sup> Where both the amount of claim and the value of the set-off are each within the jurisdiction of the Court, it is immaterial that the combined amount of the two claims is beyond its jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> The words 'not exceeding the pecuniary limits of the jurisdiction of the Court' must be construed as applying to the whole of the ascertained sum; therefore, the valuation of the set-off for purposes of jurisdiction is the entire sum pleaded and not the difference between the plaintiff's claim and the defendant's claim.<sup>3</sup> But where the plaintiff admits in the plaint any portion of the defendant's claim, that portion must be deducted in determining the jurisdiction of the Court to try the set-off.<sup>4</sup> In a small cause suit a set-off beyond the pecuniary limits of the Small Cause Court's jurisdiction cannot be entertained, even though it may be within the pecuniary limits of that Court sitting on the original side.<sup>5</sup>

9. Both parties must fill the same character. — In order to entitle a defendant to plead a set-off it is necessary that the parties should fill the same character as they fill in the plaintiff's suit.<sup>1</sup> See also Illustrations (a) and (b) to this

10. Winding-up proceedings.—A debtor to a company, who is not a member thereof, is entitled in an action by the liquidators to recover the amount due from him, to plead by way of set-off an ascertained sum of money due to him from the company, provided it had become payable before the date of suit.<sup>1</sup> But a debt due by the company to a firm of which the defendant is a partner cannot be set off, since the defendant does not fill the same character as in the plaintiff's suit.<sup>2</sup> A member of a company with limited liability, which is under liquidation, is not entitled to set off paid-up calls or calls to be paid up against a debt due by him to the company and thus give himself a preference over the other creditors of the company.<sup>3</sup> But, in a suit by the liquidator of a company for recovery of money due to the company from a director, the director can plead a set-off in respect of sums due to him from the company.<sup>4</sup>

11. Insolvency proceedings.—Section 47 of the Presidency Towns Insolvency Act (III of 1909) and Section 46 of the Provincial Insolvency Act (V of 1920) provide for set-off in case of mutual dealings between an insolvent and his creditors. There can be no set-off unless there are mutual dealings.<sup>1</sup> Mutual credits which may be set off include credits which have a natural tendency to terminate in debts, and not merely credits which must necessarily terminate in debts.<sup>2</sup> This principle of set-off in insolvency is a doctrine of equity and its object is not merely to avoid cross actions, but to do substantial justice. Therefore, it cannot be extended to a case where at the time of insolvency the debtor of the insolvent, with full knowledge that the latter has become hopelessly involved, buys a third person's claim against the insolvent in order to relieve himself of the liability of having to pay his just debts.<sup>3</sup>

12. Proceedings under the Agra Tenancy Act and other special Acts.—Section 193 (g) of the Agra Tenancy Act (II of 1901) provides that no set-off shall be allowed in any suit under that Act except a sum due to the defendant on an unsatisfied decree under that Act or any other enactment repealed thereby.<sup>1</sup> No set-off can be allowed, under Section 140 of the Oudh Rent Act (XXII of 1886), in a suit for arrears of rent.<sup>2</sup> A Revenue Court acting under Section 24 of the Bengal Tenancy Act (X of 1859) has jurisdiction to allow the claim of set-off.<sup>3</sup> No set-off, whether legal or equitable, shall be pleaded by way of defence to any suit under the Madras Estates Land Act (I of 1908).<sup>4</sup>

13. Effect of not claiming set-off. — A defendant who has a claim for set-off is not bound to put it forward in answer to the suit against him and his omission to do so does not preclude him from bringing a separate suit in respect of it.<sup>1</sup> But if he does set up such claim, he must do so in respect of the entire amount due. He cannot claim a set-off in respect of a portion only, and subsequently sue for the balance.<sup>2</sup> There is, however, an exception to this rule. "In all actions for goods sold and delivered with a warranty, or for work and labour, as well as in actions for goods agreed to be supplied according to a contract, it is competent for the defendant to show how much less the subject-matter of the action was worth by reason of the breach of the contract; and to the extent that he obtains or is capable of obtaining an abatement of the price on that account, he must be considered as having received satisfaction for the breach of contract; and he is precluded from recovering in another action to that extent, but no more."<sup>3</sup>

Illustration

A, an agent, sued B his principal for recovery of money alleged to be due to him on account of advances made by him for purchase of chillies, giving credit in the plaint for the price of 82 bags of chillies belonging to B and sold by him. B then sued A in another Court for damages on the ground that the sale of the 82 bags was unauthorised. B's suit was stayed under Section 10 of the Code. He did not agree to have the question of damages tried by way of set-off in A's suit and a decree was passed in favour of A as claimed in the plaint. Then in B's suit A pleaded that B having already recovered a portion of the damages in his suit, namely, to the extent which he (A) had given credit in his plaint, the claim for the balance is barred. It was held that the suit was not barred on the principle stated above.<sup>4</sup> amendment of the Court-fees Act referred to in Schedule IV of this Code that court-fee must be paid on such statements, regarding them as plaints.<sup>2</sup>

O. S. R. 6
Notes 14-15

It has been held in the undermentioned cases that written statements pleading equitable set-off are not chargeable with court-fee.<sup>3</sup> But the High Court of Madras has held that the word "set-off" in Article 1, Schedule I of the Court-fees Act includes also an equitable set-off and as such court-fee is payable on such set-off.<sup>4</sup> The same view has been held by the Allahabad High Court in the undermentioned decision<sup>5</sup> and also by the Nagpur High Court.<sup>6</sup> A plea of set-off should not be entertained by a Court until the court-fee with respect to it has been paid by the defendant.<sup>7</sup>

Although the proviso to Article 1, Schedule I of the Court-fees Act refers only to the maximum fee leviable on a plaint or a memorandum of appeal, there is no authority for charging a larger sum on a written statement pleading a set-off or counter-claim.<sup>8</sup>

No court-fee is payable on a written statement pleading an adjustment of the plaintiff's claim.<sup>9</sup>

15. Counter-claim. — A set-off is a statutory defence to a plaintiff's action; a counter-claim is substantially a cross action. The counter-claim need not be an action of the same nature as the original action or even analogous thereto.<sup>1</sup> Though there is no provision in the Code for making a counter-claim,<sup>2</sup> a Court has got the power to treat the counter-claim as the plaint in a cross suit and hear the two together if the counter-claim is properly stamped.<sup>3</sup> It has, however, been held by the Calcutta High

16. Solicitor's lien for costs. — "A solicitor has, at Common Law, and apart from any order of the Court or statute, a lien over property recovered or preserved or the proceeds of any judgments obtained for the clients by his exertions."<sup>1</sup> This lien in the High Courts of India is governed exclusively by the law as it existed in English Courts before the passing of 23 & 24 Vic., Ch. 127, by which statute the lien was very much extended.<sup>2</sup> It applies to property of every description including costs ordered to be paid to the client<sup>3</sup> except that it does not attach to real property.<sup>4</sup> But the Calcutta High Court has held in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> that it applies to immovable property also. This lien has priority over any attachment by a judgment-creditor so long as the moneys attached remain within the jurisdiction of the Court, that is, until they are realised and paid off to the judgment-creditor.<sup>6</sup> The Solicitor's lien is a particular lien; it is, therefore, not available for the general balance of account between the solicitor and the client.<sup>7</sup> Although a defendant has the right to compromise with a plaintiff without the knowledge of the plaintiff's attorney, such compromise must be made with the honest intention of ending the litigation, and not with any design to deprive the attorney of his costs, and he cannot make a payment to the plaintiff under that compromise, if he has notice of the lien for the costs of the plaintiff's attorney.<sup>8</sup> As to the power of the Court to enforce the lien by summary procedure, see Note 38 to Section 35, ante.

Under sub-rule (2) of this rule a set-off cannot be made so as to affect the lien of the pleader in respect of his costs.<sup>9</sup> Thus, costs ordered to be paid by a petitioning-creditor to a debtor when an adjudication in bankruptcy is set aside, cannot be set-off to the prejudice of the solicitor's lien against the debts due to the petitioning-creditor.<sup>10</sup> But, it has been held by the Calcutta High Court that a solicitor's lien upon a judgment obtained by his client is only a claim or right to ask for the intervention of the Court for his protection when, having obtained judgment for his client, he finds there is a probability of the client depriving him of his costs and that the lien is subject to all the equities between the client and the other parties interested in the

17. Appeal. — An appeal does not lie against an order on a preliminary issue disposing of the claim to a legal set-off, advanced by the defendant. The reason is that under O. 20 R. 19 only one decree can in such a case be drawn up and, therefore, it cannot be said that there is a conclusive adjudication within the meaning of Section 2, clause 2.<sup>1</sup> An objection cannot be taken up in appeal, for the first time, that a plea of equitable set-off cannot be entertained by the Court.<sup>2</sup>

The valuation of a claim of set-off is the amount claimed by the defendant and an appeal relating to a claim of set-off will lie to the High Court where it exceeds Rs. 5,000.<sup>3</sup> Where a claim of set-off is disposed of without demanding court-fees from the defendant and the lower Appellate Court decides that no court-fee is necessary, such an omission is only a mere irregularity within the meaning of Section 99 of the Code and is not a ground for reversing the decision in second appeal.<sup>4</sup>

It is submitted that this decision is not correct.<sup>6</sup> An additional written statement filed long after the fixed date cannot be removed from the record unless the opposite party takes immediate steps for its removal.<sup>7</sup>

Synopsis

1. Scope. | 2. Appeal.

"Pronounce judgment." See Note 1.

Written statement not filed — Court's power to decree suit.

See Note 1.

1. Scope. — It has been held by the High Court of Rangoon that the power given to the Court by this rule to pronounce judgment refers to a written statement which has been demanded by the Court under Rule 9.<sup>1</sup> But according to Mr. Justice Ayling of the High Court of Madras,<sup>2</sup> — and the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>3</sup> also seems to take the same view — this rule relates back to Rule 1, as well as to Rule 9, and therefore applies to written statements required by the Court under Rule 1 as well. Mr. Justice Seshagiri Ayyar took a contrary view.

This rule applies only to a specific requirement by the Court to the filing of a written statement and not to general direction in the summons that such a statement may be filed.<sup>4</sup> The High Court of Bombay has held in the undermentioned case<sup>5</sup> that a Court has no power to call upon a plaintiff to put in a written statement except in answer to a set-off, and to dismiss the suit on his failure to do so. It has been already submitted in Notes to Rule 9 that this view is not correct. A conditional order, as for instance, an order directing a statement, if any, to be filed<sup>6</sup> or an order merely permitting a statement to be filed<sup>7</sup> will not entail the penalty imposed by this rule. Where a party files a written statement expressing his inability to supply the particulars asked for by the Court, it is not a failure to present a written statement within the meaning of this rule.<sup>8</sup>

The Court cannot strike out a defence for failure of the defendant to present a further written statement called for by it.<sup>9</sup> A judgment pronounced under this rule must satisfy the requirements of 'judgment' as defined in Section 2 sub-section 9 and, therefore, the Court should go into the case and pronounce a decision upon the facts so far as they are before it.<sup>10</sup> A plaintiff is not entitled to obtain a decree before the date on which the summons is returnable, even though the summons directs that the written statement should be filed on or before a day before such returnable date.<sup>11</sup>

Notes 1-2

The Bombay High Court has in the undermentioned case<sup>1a</sup> expressed the view that where a defendant is ordered to file a written statement within a certain time and he fails to do so, it is not justifiable to pass an order that the suit should proceed ex parte against him. According to the above decision, the failure of the defendant to file a written statement as required by the Court means only that he admits the allegations in the plaint, and he is entitled to appear and submit any argument open to him on the plaint, for instance, that the plaint discloses no cause of action or that the claim is time-barred.

2. Appeal. — An order pronouncing judgment against a party under this rule is appealable as an order under O. 43 R. 1 (b).<sup>1</sup> But an order refusing to pronounce a judgment under this rule is not appealable.<sup>2</sup>

Add the following as Rules 11 to 13:—

"11. Every defendant in a suit or opposite party in any proceedings, shall on the first day of his appearance in Court, file an address for service on him of any subsequent process. The address shall be within the local limits of the civil district in which the suit or petition is filed or of the civil district in which the party ordinarily resides, if within the limits of the Central Provinces and Berar. This address shall be called the "registered address" and it shall hold good throughout interlocutory proceedings and appeals and also for a further period of two years from the date of final decision and for all purposes including those of execution.

O. 8 R. 11
(Nagpur)

12. (1) If the defendant or the opposite party fails to file a registered address as required by Rule 11, he shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to have his defence struck out and to be placed in the same position as if he had made no defence.

O. 8 R. 12
(Nagpur)

An order under this rule may be passed by the Court suo motu or on the application of any party.

(2) Where the Court has struck out the defence under sub-rule (1) and has adjourned the hearing of the suit or the proceeding and where the defendant or the opposite party at or before such hearing appears and assigns sufficient cause for his failure to file the registered address he may upon such terms as the Court directs as to costs or otherwise be heard in answer to the suit or the proceeding as if the defence had not been struck out.

(3) Where the Court has struck out the defence under sub-rule (1) and has consequently passed a decree or order, the defendant or the opposite party, as the case may be, may apply to the Court by which the decree or order was passed for an order to set aside the decree or order; and if he files a registered address and satisfies the Court that he was prevented by any sufficient cause from filing the address, the Court shall make an order setting aside the decree or order as against him upon such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks fit, and shall appoint a day for proceeding with the suit or proceeding :

1. Applicability of Order 9 to execution proceedings. — There is nothing in Order 21, which deals with execution of decrees and orders, specifically empowering the Court to apply Order 9, to execution proceedings. Hence, the provisions of Order 9 can apply, if at all, only by virtue of Section 141. In Thakur Prasad v. Fakirullah,<sup>1</sup> the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council held that the proceedings referred to in Section 647 of the Code of 1882 (now Section 141) included original matters such as proceedings in probates, guardianships, and so forth and did not include executions. Notwithstanding this decision of the Privy Council, it was still held in some cases<sup>2</sup> that Section 141 could be applied to make Order 9 apply to execution proceedings. The consensus of authorities in the several High Courts may, however, now be fairly taken to be that Order 9 does not apply to execution proceedings.<sup>3</sup> Thus, it has been

2. Applicability of Order 9 to applications under Order 9 itself. — Where an application under R. 4 or R. 9 or R. 13 of this Order is itself dismissed for default, does a fresh application to restore that application lie? There is a conflict of opinion on this point. It has been held by the High Courts of Lahore,<sup>1</sup> Madras<sup>2</sup> and Rangoon,<sup>3</sup>

the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Peshawar<sup>4</sup> and the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>5</sup> that such an application can be filed, the reason being that the proceedings contemplated under Order 9 are in the nature of an original suit and that by virtue of Section 141, Order 9 applies to them.<sup>6</sup> On the other hand, the High Courts of Bombay,<sup>7</sup> Calcutta<sup>8</sup> and Patna<sup>9</sup> have held that a second application to restore a prior application dismissed for default does not lie. But the High Court of Allahabad,<sup>10</sup> and the High Courts of Calcutta and Madras in some cases<sup>11</sup> have struck a via media and hold that the application for restoration can itself be treated as a second application for restoring the suit provided there is no bar by limitation. In some cases the same High Courts have held that in a proper case the Court can also restore a prior application dismissed for default under its inherent power.<sup>12</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>13</sup>

It has been held by the Nagpur Judicial Commissioner's Court that an application for the restoration of a suit which application itself has been dismissed for default can be restored under the inherent power of the Court but not under O. 9 R. 9 read with Section 141.<sup>14</sup> The reason given is that O. 9 R. 9 creates a substantive right of applying to restore a suit dismissed for default and this right cannot be conferred by Section 141.

But no appeal lies under O. 43 R. 1 from an order refusing to restore an application for restoration of suit dismissed for default.<sup>15</sup>

3. Applicability of Order 9 to proceedings under local and special Acts. —

It is a general principle that once a matter comes before a regular Civil Court its further course will be governed by the provisions of the Code. (See Section 141 infra.) Hence, the provisions of this Order apply to an application to the Court under Section 84 of the Madras Hindu Religious Endowments Act of 1927 and the dismissal of such application for default can be set aside under this Order.<sup>1</sup>

Dismissal of suit where summons not served in consequence of plaintiff's failure to pay costs.

Provided that no such order shall be made although the summons has not been served upon the defendant, if on the day fixed for him to appear and answer he attends in person or by agent when he is allowed to appear by agent.

On the day fixed. See Note 3.

Proviso. See Note 3.

1. Scope of the Rule. — The rule applies only to cases of plaintiff's failure to pay process fee or postal charges for service of summons on the defendant. Consequently, the Court cannot dismiss the suit under this rule for failure on the part of the plaintiff to furnish the correct address of the defendant.<sup>1</sup> The Allahabad High

Order 9 Rule 2 — Note 1

1. ('27) AIR 1927 Lah 170 (170). (Nor for the failure of the plaintiff to accompany process-server.)

Court has held in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> that where the plaintiff failed to pay the process fee and the Court ordered him to pay a certain sum as damages and he failed to pay that also, and the Court dismissed the suit, such dismissal of the suit was under this rule.

The failure contemplated is not merely an omission to pay the requisite charges but also to pay the same within the time fixed.<sup>3</sup>

Where a suit is dismissed for default and an application for its restoration is dismissed for failure to pay the process fees, it has been held that the order dismissing the application falls under Rule 9 infra and not under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

This rule applies to an application under O. 34 R. 5 by virtue of Section 141 and such an application can be dismissed for non-payment of process fees.<sup>5</sup>

2. "Defendant." — The word 'defendant' does not include the guardian ad litem of a minor defendant as he is not a defendant in the legal sense of the term and the mere fact that no process fee is paid for issuing notice to such a guardian is no ground for dismissing the suit under this rule,<sup>1</sup> especially where there are other major defendants in the suit.<sup>2</sup> Where the summons has been served upon a wrong person instead of on the real defendant, and he appears and denies his liability, the proper order to pass is to dismiss the suit with costs.<sup>3</sup>

3. Failure to pay court-fee or postal charges — When entails dismissal. — O. 48 R. 1, sub-rule 2 requires that the Court shall fix a time for payment of the process fee. And unless it so fixes a time for the deposit of the process fee<sup>1</sup> and gives the party reasonable time and opportunity to comply with its orders,<sup>2</sup> it cannot dismiss the suit. But mere ignorance on the part of the plaintiff's agent as to the proper Court in which the process fees ought to be deposited is no ground for not dismissing the suit.<sup>3</sup>

There is a conflict of opinion as to whether the failure on the part of the plaintiff to pay process fees for a newly added defendant will entail the dismissal of the whole suit. The High Court of Bombay has held that the whole suit ought to be dismissed even against the original defendant unless he waives his objection thereto.<sup>4</sup> But according to the Allahabad<sup>5</sup> and Patna<sup>6</sup> High Courts the dismissal should be only as against that particular defendant. According to the proviso, if notwithstanding the plaintiff's default in paying the process fees the defendant appears, the Court cannot dismiss the suit.<sup>7</sup> It follows that the Court cannot dismiss the suit on a day previous to the date fixed in the summons for the appearance of the defendant.<sup>8</sup>

Where the plaintiff is prepared to pay the process fees but it is the Court which refuses to take it because according to its view the process fee is being deposited late, this rule does not strictly apply.<sup>9</sup>

A Court has no power to require the plaintiff to pay process fee before fixing the date for the appearance of the defendant; and where the Court does so, the failure of the plaintiff to comply with its order does not entail the dismissal of the suit under this rule.<sup>10</sup>

4. Plaintiff's remedy after dismissal. — The plaintiff can apply under Rule 4 to set aside the order of dismissal or may bring a fresh suit.<sup>1</sup>

5. Appeal. — The order of dismissal is not a decree within Section 2 (2) and no appeal lies therefrom.<sup>1</sup> The undermentioned decisions to the contrary<sup>2</sup> under the old Code are no longer good law.

6. Revision. — Where under O. 5 R. 10 as amended in the Punjab the plaintiff has an option to have the summons served in the ordinary way or by registered post and the Court ordered the plaintiff to pay both process fees and postal charges, the order is illegal and the suit cannot be dismissed for failure of the plaintiff to pay the postal charges. The High Court will in such a case, revise the order of dismissal.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where the process fee was paid in sufficient time though not within the date fixed by the Court and the suit was dismissed, the High Court will interfere in revision.<sup>2</sup> For other instances of interference by the High Court, see the undermentioned cases.<sup>3</sup>

('80) AIR 1980 Lah 440 (441). (Failure to pay process fee — Dismissal of application for restoration of suit — Not open to revision under S. 115 — But relief granted under S. 151 as separate suit was barred.)

1. Where neither party appears. — A dismissal under this rule is justified only where neither party appears. Thus, if the plaintiff<sup>1</sup> or his agent<sup>2</sup> or his pleader duly instructed<sup>3</sup> is present, the fact that no evidence is adduced will not enable the Court to order a dismissal under this rule. If, however, both the parties are absent,<sup>4</sup> the mere presence of the pleaders without instructions is not an appearance and a dismissal under this rule is justified.<sup>5</sup>

Where the plaintiff and some of the defendants do not appear but the other defendants appear and the suit is dismissed, the dismissal, in so far as it is against the absent defendants, is under this rule, while, as against the defendant or defendants who appeared, it is under Rule 8.<sup>6</sup>

Where an application was filed by the respondent in an appeal praying that the appellant should be called upon to give security for the costs of the appeal and, on the day fixed for the hearing of the application, both parties were absent in consequence of which the application was rejected, it was held that the dismissal must be taken to be one under this rule read with Section 141.<sup>7</sup>

2. "Appearance." — See Order 9 Rule 9 and Order 3 Rule 1.

3. "When the suit is called on for hearing." — The hearing referred to is obviously the first hearing after the issue of the summons to the defendant,<sup>1</sup> and not necessarily a hearing of evidence.<sup>2</sup> But when read with O. 17 R. 2, infra, this rule may be applied to cases where the parties are absent at the adjourned hearings.<sup>3</sup> The rule may be applied where the parties are absent at a hearing after remand.<sup>4</sup>

But before there can be a dismissal under this rule it is essential that the suit should have been posted to a specified day for hearing and that the parties have notice thereof. The word 'hearing' refers to hearing of the case by the Court and does not include the disposal of a routine matter which is within the powers of an officer of the Court and need not come before the Court at all.<sup>5</sup> It has also been held that where the date has been fixed by the clerk of the Court and not by the Judge, parties are not bound to attend on such date and failure to attend on such date will not justify dismissal of the suit for default of appearance.<sup>6</sup> It is not proper to dismiss a suit on a date of which the parties had no previous notice<sup>7</sup> or at a place not notified<sup>8</sup> or on a day fixed for considering only an application for amendment of the issues.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, when a day is fixed merely for the appearance of the guardian ad litem of a minor defendant<sup>10</sup> or for the attendance of the plaintiff only,<sup>11</sup> a dismissal of the suit on that day under this rule is not justified. A day fixed for judgment is not a day fixed for the hearing of the suit.<sup>12</sup> Where on a day fixed for the hearing of a preliminary issue, the onus of proof of which lies on the defendant, both the parties are absent, the Court ought not to dismiss the suit for default but should decide that issue against the defendant, especially in a case where a portion of the claim is admitted.<sup>13</sup> A date fixed solely as the last day for filing a list of witnesses is not a date fixed for 'hearing' and failure to file the list of witnesses within such date cannot entail dismissal of suit under this rule or Rule 8 infra.<sup>14</sup>

After a preliminary decree has been passed, the suit cannot be dismissed for default of appearance; the reason is that on the passing of the decree the parties acquire rights or incur liabilities which become fixed unless and until the decree is varied or set aside.<sup>15</sup> But although an order dismissing the suit for default of appearance after a preliminary decree has been passed is illegal unless such order is revoked or set aside, it cannot be ignored.<sup>16</sup>

The Court has no power to strike a case off its file but can only make an order dismissing the suit.<sup>3</sup> Where, however, the parties state that the case is settled and at their request the case is struck off, it is not a dismissal for default under this rule.<sup>4</sup>

5. 5a. Dismissal of suit for default after preliminary decree. — See Note 3.

6. Appeal and review. — A dismissal under this rule is not a decree within Section 2 (2) and, therefore, no appeal lies.<sup>1</sup> The use of the word "order" makes it clear beyond doubt that the dismissal is not a decree.

It has been held in the undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> that such an order is not open to review.

1. Scope of the Rule. — Where a suit is dismissed under Rule 2 or Rule 3, or under O. 17 R. 2 read with these rules, a fresh suit is not barred.<sup>1</sup> It may be brought notwithstanding the fact that no application for restoration has been made under this rule or even after an application under this rule has proved unsuccessful.<sup>2</sup> The two remedies are not mutually exclusive.<sup>3</sup> But the period covered by the restoration proceedings under this rule cannot be excluded under Section 14 of the Limitation Act for the purpose of the suit.<sup>4</sup>

It is only the Court which passes the order of dismissal that can set it aside under this rule.<sup>5</sup> Unlike Rules 7, 9 or 13 the present rule does not authorise the Court to impose any terms as to costs.<sup>6</sup> The effect of a restoration of the suit under this rule is to bring the suit back as regards parties to the same position in which it was at the time of dismissal.<sup>7</sup> The question whether ancillary orders which must be taken to fall along with the dismissal of the suit are restored when the suit is restored should, however, be decided with reference to the intention of the officer who passed the order restoring the suit and the terms of the order of restoration. If he intended to restore the suit and all the ancillary matters (such as injunction orders, etc.) connected with it, they are all restored. If he did not so intend, they are not restored. As a matter of general rule, the intention would be to restore the suit and all incidental matters.<sup>8</sup> Where there are more plaintiffs than one, the suit can be restored on the application of any one of them.<sup>9</sup> Where a suit brought by a shebait in the name of an idol is dismissed for default under O. 9 R. 3, an application for restoration under this rule can be made by another shebait who is the shebait at the time of the application.<sup>10</sup>

2. "Sufficient cause." — An order under this rule without giving the applicant an opportunity to show sufficient cause is ultra vires.<sup>1</sup> As to what is sufficient cause is a matter of discretion and no hard and fast rule can be laid down.<sup>2</sup> Where the plaintiff is prevented from attending Court due to unavoidable causes, e. g., picketing by volunteers of Gandhiji, it was held that there was sufficient cause for non-appearance.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, where the plaintiff had been taken ill and his counsel was only a few minutes late, it was held that the suit should be restored to file.<sup>4</sup> A bona fide mistake which is not unreasonable is a sufficient cause to order restoration.<sup>5</sup> But the mere fact that the summons has been returned unserved on the defendant is no ground for setting aside the order of dismissal.<sup>6</sup> See also Notes under Rule 9.

If sufficient cause is shown for non-appearance, the Court is bound to restore the suit; it has no choice in the matter.<sup>7</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>8</sup>

6. Applicability of the Rule to insolvency proceedings. — It was held in the undermentioned cases<sup>1</sup> that where an insolvency petition was dismissed on the analogy of Rule 2 for non-payment of process-fee, a fresh application for insolvency is not barred, by virtue of the provisions of this rule.

6a. Applicability of the Rule to miscellaneous applications. — An application for a final decree in a mortgage suit is not an application in execution, and by virtue of Section 141, this rule will apply to such applications also. Where an application for a final decree has been dismissed for non-payment of batta, the applicant can file a fresh application for the same.<sup>1</sup> When an application for amendment of a decree is dismissed for non-payment of batta, a fresh application for amendment can be made.<sup>2</sup> Where an application for adjudication as an insolvent is dismissed on account of the default of both the parties, an application can be made to restore the previous application.<sup>3</sup>

7. Notice to defendant. — Notice to defendant is not necessary for restoration under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the suit is restored and a date is fixed for the hearing of the case, the defendant is, as of right entitled to a notice of such date.<sup>2</sup>

8. Appeal. — No appeal lies from any order passed under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

9. Revision. — The High Court of Lahore has held in the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> that an order rejecting an application under this rule is not open to revision under Section 115, Civil Procedure Code, but that the High Court can interfere under its inherent powers.

10. Limitation. — Under Article 163 of the Limitation Act, 1908, the period of limitation prescribed for an application under this rule is thirty days from the date of dismissal. Time cannot be extended under Section 5 of the Limitation Act in the absence of any express provision made by the High Court under its rule-making powers.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, where an application under this rule is time-barred, the bar of limitation cannot be evaded by purporting to prefer an application under O. 47 R. 1.<sup>2</sup>

1. Legislative changes after 1908. — Sub-rule (1) has been newly substituted for the old sub-rule by the Amending Act, XXIV of 1920, thus effecting the following important changes —

(1) The period during which the plaintiff may remain without applying for fresh summons is reduced from one year to three months.

(2) The words “shall make an order” have been used in the place of the words “may make an order.”

(3) Provision has been made in sub-clause (c) for extension of time for making the application referred to.

2. “Period of three months,” computation of. — Under the old Code the period fixed was one year<sup>1</sup> and it was calculated, not from the filing of the plaint, but from the return of the summons unserved.<sup>2</sup> The question also arose whether the period was to be calculated from the date of the return of the serving-officer or from the date of the return of the officer whose duty it was to certify to the Court the return of the serving-officer. It was held in the undermentioned case<sup>3</sup> that the period was to be calculated from the date of the return made by the latter officer. Effect has been given to that decision in the present rule. A dismissal of a suit under this rule before the expiry of the period of three months is premature and irregular.<sup>4</sup>

3. Fresh summons, when granted. — The plaintiff must apply for fresh summons within the prescribed period, i. e., three months from the date of the return of non-service on the defendant.<sup>1</sup> If he wants an extension of time he has to apply to the Court within three months and satisfy the Court as to any of the circumstances mentioned in sub-clauses (a), (b) and (c).<sup>3</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>3</sup>

4. Failure to take fresh summons does not discharge the defendant from any liability. — Failure on the part of the plaintiff to take fresh summons and the consequent dismissal of the suit does not take away the liability of the defendant and does not operate as res judicata in a fresh suit against him.<sup>1</sup> Nor can a co-defendant plead that he is only a surety and that, as the other defendant who is the principal debtor is not served, he is not liable.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, the records of a suit were consigned to the record-room owing to the non-service of summons on one of the defendants, a subsequent suit against the same defendant on the same cause of action was held to be barred on the ground that the suit must be deemed to be still pending.<sup>3</sup>

5. Appeal. — The words "shall make an order that the suit be dismissed" in the place of "may dismiss the suit" occurring in the old Code make it perfectly clear that the dismissal under this rule is not appealable as a decree. This rule does not apply to appeals as Order 41 contains specific rules covering corresponding cases that arise in appeal.<sup>1</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule contemplates the hearing of the suit on the day fixed in the summons, whereas O. 17 R. 2 contemplates the hearing of the suit on some later date to which the hearing may be adjourned.<sup>1</sup> Thus, if the defendant had already appeared in answer to the summons but fails to appear at the adjourned hearing, the case falls under O. 17 R. 2,<sup>2</sup> though the procedure contemplated in either case is the same.<sup>3</sup> When an appearance under Order 9 is in question the word "hearing" means the first day of the hearing.<sup>4</sup>

The fact that the summons may have directed the defendant to file a written statement does not authorise the Court to proceed under O. 8 R. 10; if the defendant does not appear, the proper procedure is that prescribed under this rule.<sup>5</sup>

2. Ex parte decree. — The plaintiff is not entitled to have the suit declared ex parte before the returnable date fixed in the summons.<sup>1</sup> Before proceeding ex parte the Court must be satisfied that there is due service of summons on the defendant.<sup>2</sup>

An ex parte proceeding ought not to be taken on the basis of service effected by registered post.<sup>3</sup> The onus of proving due service is, of course, on the plaintiff in the first instance.<sup>4</sup>

The Code does not prescribe any procedure to be followed in the case of an ex parte suit. The practice is that no issues are framed, though the plaintiff is called upon to prove his case.<sup>5</sup> The plaintiff is bound to prove his case to the satisfaction of the Court and his burden is not lightened because the defendant is absent.<sup>6</sup> Except in suits relating to negotiable instruments, as under O. 37 R. 2, evidence should be adduced by the plaintiff<sup>7</sup> and a prima facie case made out.<sup>8</sup> The Court is bound to consider the interests of the absent defendant<sup>9</sup> and not to rely on evidence otherwise unreliable simply because the case is ex parte.<sup>10</sup>

3. Remedies in the case of an ex parte decree. — A defendant against whom an ex parte decree has been passed can —

- (1) apply under Rule 13, infra, to set aside the ex parte decree, or
- (2) appeal from the decree under Section 96, or
- (3) apply for a review under O. 47 R. 1.<sup>1</sup>

As to when a suit can be brought to set aside an ex parte decree, see Note 12 to Rule 13. As to the limitation for applications under Rule 13, see Note 28 thereto.

4. Subsequent appearance of defendant pending suit. — See Rule 7.

5. Second summons — Clause (b). — If it is not proved that there was due service, the Court is bound to order fresh summons for the defendant. If the non-service or failure to effect due service is due to plaintiff's default the Court is bound to order him to pay the costs of the postponement under sub-rule 2.<sup>1</sup>

6. Sufficient time — Clause (c). — The words 'duly served' mean served in sufficient time to enable the defendant to appear in person or by a pleader<sup>1</sup> and the Court is bound under sub-clause (c) to direct fresh summons if he is not served in sufficient time.

If the defendant though not served in sufficient time nevertheless appears and asks for time, the Court is not justified in refusing it and proceeding ex parte. By his appearing he should not be placed in a worse position than he would be in if he had not appeared at all.<sup>2</sup> to costs or otherwise, be heard in answer to the suit as if he had appeared on the day fixed for his appearance.

[1877, Ss. 100, 101; 1859, S. 111.]

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule. | 2. "Assigns good cause."

1. Scope of the Rule. — The underlying principle of this rule is that until a suit is actually called and so long as an ex parte decree is not passed, the defendant is entitled to come in and defend the suit.<sup>1</sup> The Courts should be liberal in construing this rule and should not take a stringent view of the defendant's absence.<sup>2</sup>

The rejection of an application under this rule is no bar to an application under Rule 13 after the passing of an ex parte decree.<sup>3</sup>

2. "Assigns good cause." — If the defendant wants to set aside the order placing him ex parte and be relegated to the stage at which the suit was, when he absented himself, then he has to assign good cause for his previous absence. But if he merely wants to take part in the proceedings at the stage at which it is when he appears, it is not necessary to get the previous order placing him ex parte set aside. The reason is that the rule is not intended to be penal and by the very fact of his appearance the proceedings cease to be ex parte thenceforth.<sup>1</sup>

Though the rule gives a discretion to the Court to impose terms, failure to do so is not an irregular or improper exercise of discretion such as to justify interference in revision.<sup>2</sup>

All that R. 7 of O. 9 provides is that the defendant may be heard in answer to the suit. It is only when a decree has been passed that an application in terms to set aside that decree is contemplated in R. 13. There is no justification for imposing on the defendant who appears at the adjourned hearing, any restriction to the effect that he is entitled only to cross-examine the witnesses on the other side and is not entitled to lead any evidence on his own side—So also there is no reason to deny the defendant an opportunity to file a written statement at that stage — Mere fact that on new statement additional issues may have to be framed does not amount to re-opening anything that has happened.)]

Shall pass a decree. See Note 7.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule deals with the procedure to be followed when the plaintiff does not appear and the defendant alone appears. In such a case, the only thing that the defendant is entitled to claim is to have the plaintiff's suit dismissed. He is not entitled to call evidence to disprove charges of fraud, etc., made against him in the plaint.<sup>1</sup>

The Court has no power to dismiss a suit for default under this rule where the plaintiff dies. Such an order of dismissal is a nullity, the reason being that the rules applicable to a defaulter cannot be applied to a dead man.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, a dismissal under this rule is not proper if the plaintiff has been adjudicated insolvent before the hearing, as there is none on the record who is bound to appear; the Court should, in such a case, act under Order 22 Rule 8.<sup>3</sup>

Where a reference to arbitration in a suit provided that the arbitrator should hear evidence and determine the case and that if one of the parties failed to appear, he should have power to proceed ex parte, the arbitrator cannot, on failure of one of the parties to appear, act under the provisions of this rule.<sup>4</sup>

2. Appearance. — See Notes under the same heading in Rule 9, infra.

3. "When a suit is called on for hearing." — The hearing of the suit may be either on the day named in the summons or on a subsequent day to which the hearing

Note 3

A dismissal of a suit at an adjourned hearing, for default of plaintiff's appearance is under the provisions of O. 17 R. 2 read with this rule.<sup>3</sup> As will be seen from the provisions of Order 17 infra, a dismissal under Rule 2 of that Order can be set aside under the provisions of Order 9 and the suit restored,<sup>4</sup> while, if the dismissal is under Rule 3 of that Order the remedy of the party aggrieved is only by way of appeal or review and not by an application for restoration under O. 9 R. 9.<sup>5</sup>

A Court will not be justified in dismissing a suit under this rule where the evidence on record is sufficient to decree the claim of the plaintiff,<sup>6</sup> or where the evidence has been completely recorded and nothing remains to be done except to hear arguments,<sup>7</sup> or where the suit was adjourned in the course of arguments,<sup>8</sup> or for pronouncing judgment.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, where part of the plaintiff's claim was fully determined by a preliminary order and the rest of the claim was abandoned, the Court is not justified in dismissing the suit for default.<sup>10</sup> A failure to amend the plaint as per order of Court and to pay costs of the adjournment does not justify a dismissal of the suit for default after the evidence is finished.<sup>11</sup>

It is not proper for the Court to dismiss the suit on a day not fixed for the hearing of the suit<sup>12</sup> as, for example, when the day was fixed for the appointment of a guardian ad litem of a minor defendant,<sup>13</sup> or on a day which is not duly notified to the parties,<sup>14</sup> or on holidays.<sup>15</sup> The word 'hearing' does not mean only the recording of evidence. It means the hearing of the suit before the Court and does not include the disposal of a routine matter which is within the powers of an officer of the Court and need not come before the Court at all.<sup>16</sup> The Court should not hastily dismiss a suit for non-appearance when the suit is pending reference to arbitration and when the arbitrator had applied for extension of time to make the award.<sup>17</sup> Where a commissioner has been appointed and he has not made his report, the suit cannot be heard until the commissioner has finished his work and there can be no dismissal for default.<sup>18</sup> After a decree has once been made, a suit cannot be dismissed for default.<sup>19</sup> Thus, there can be no dismissal under this rule after a preliminary decree for partition; and if an order is so made, it is passed without jurisdiction.<sup>20</sup> The Court should in such cases adjourn the suit sine die with liberty to the plaintiff to apply to restore the suit to the list on payment of costs.<sup>21</sup> Where on an amendment of the plaint being allowed, the plaintiff is directed to give the value of the property (relief as to which has been allowed to be added by amendment) and to put in deficit court-fee, the proper order to pass on non-compliance is an order rejecting the plaint and not one dismissing the suit for default.<sup>22</sup>

4. More plaintiffs than one.—This rule is meant to provide for a case where a single plaintiff does not appear or, where there are several plaintiffs, and all of them do not appear.<sup>1</sup> Cases, where some only of several plaintiffs do not appear, are provided for in Rule 10, infra.

5. More defendants than one.—Under this rule there can be a partial or total dismissal for default.<sup>1</sup> As has been seen in the Notes to Rule 3 supra, so far as the defendant or defendants who appear are concerned, the order of dismissal will be one under this rule and will bar a fresh suit against them. With regard to the defendants who are absent, the dismissal will be under Rule 3 and a fresh suit is not barred.<sup>2</sup> Even if the defendant appears and applies for time, the dismissal would fall only under this rule and not under Rule 3.<sup>3</sup>

O. 9 R. 8

6. "Shall make an order that the suit be dismissed."— These words were substituted under the present Code to make it clear that the dismissal is not a decree but only an order which is not appealable.<sup>1</sup> The earlier decisions<sup>2</sup> which held that the dismissal under this rule was a decree are now no longer law.

The Court has no option under this rule but to dismiss the suit<sup>3</sup> and is not justified in enquiring into the merits of the case<sup>4</sup> or receive evidence or record any statement from the defendant.<sup>5</sup> While dismissing under this rule, the Court has no jurisdiction to add any proviso in the order, as for example, that the order shall not prejudice the interest of the minor plaintiff.<sup>6</sup> Striking off the suit is not a proper mode of dismissing a suit under this rule.<sup>7</sup>

A filed a suit against B for recovery of a certain amount of money which had been paid under protest, and also for damages for wrongful attachment. The Court framed a preliminary issue on the question whether the suit, so far as the return of the money was concerned, disclosed a cause of action, and after hearing arguments dismissed that part of the claim with costs and directed the suit to proceed as regards the claim for damages. No decree was drawn up in respect of the portion dismissed. When the suit came on for hearing the plaintiff was absent and the Court dismissed the whole suit for default under this rule. It was held by the Privy Council<sup>8</sup> that the dismissal for default under this rule was wrong so far as the recovery of money was concerned, inasmuch as a final decision had been passed thereon on the merits, and that, therefore, an appeal lay so far as such portion was concerned.

7. Unless the defendant admits. — When the defendant admits the claim of the plaintiff either in whole or in part, the Court cannot dismiss the suit but must pass a decree for the amount admitted.<sup>1</sup>

Where, however, the admission of the defendant is not in reality an admission of the claim of the plaintiff, e. g., where the plaintiff claims to pre-empt on a payment of Rs. 1500 and the defendant admits the right of the plaintiff to pre-empt but states that the price is Rs. 12,000, the Court cannot pass a decree in favour of the plaintiff under this rule for pre-emption on payment of Rs. 12,000 but must, on default by the plaintiff, dismiss the suit.<sup>2</sup>

The word 'claim' is not necessarily synonymous with the amount sued for. It may refer to the right claimed irrespective of the amount stated in the relief column.<sup>3</sup> A decree passed on the admission of the defendant is appealable.<sup>4</sup>

8. Effect of dismissal under this Rule. — Unlike the dismissal of a suit under Rule 3, a dismissal under this rule precludes a fresh suit on the same cause of action.<sup>1</sup> But two other remedies are open to the plaintiff —

- (1) to apply under Rule 9 for restoration of the suit, or
- (2) to apply for a review of the order.<sup>2</sup>

It is not necessary that the plaintiff should apply under Rule 9 before applying for a review<sup>3</sup> and there is nothing in the Code to limit the parties to one particular remedy. But a review will not lie except on the grounds mentioned in O. 47 R. 1. It has been held by the High Court of Bombay in the undermentioned case<sup>4</sup> that where a suit is dismissed under O. 9 R. 8 there could be no such grounds for review as those mentioned in O. 47 R. 1 inasmuch as the fact that the applicant was absent when the suit was called on for hearing was neither a discovery of any new and important matter, nor an error apparent on the face of the record, nor a ground analogous to any of those specified in the rule. There is a conflict of opinion as to whether a plaintiff who has failed to make an application within thirty days under O. 9 R. 9 can be allowed to prefer an application for review. The High Courts of Patna<sup>5</sup> and Lahore<sup>6</sup> have held that he cannot be allowed to do so, on the ground that the law of limitation should not be allowed to be evaded in that way. The High Courts of Madras<sup>7</sup> and Calcutta,<sup>8</sup> on the other hand, have held that such an application would lie and that the fact that the plaintiff will get a longer period of limitation by the adoption of a particular remedy is no ground for refusing him relief.

It has been held by the Lahore High Court<sup>9</sup> that a Court has inherent power to restore a suit which has been dismissed in default owing to a mistake of the Court itself.

9. Revision. — Where the Court refuses to act under this rule in a case to which the rule applies<sup>1</sup> or acts under this rule illegally or with material irregularity,<sup>2</sup> a revision will lie.

- Applicability to other proceedings. See Notes 6 and 8. Rule applicable only when dismissal under R. 8. See Note 1.
- Letters Patent Appeal. See Note 12. Same cause of action. See Note 5.

1. Scope of the Rule. — The remedy provided for by this rule is not open to a plaintiff whose suit has been dismissed for any reason, other than default of appearance under Rule 8.<sup>1</sup> Hence, no application lies under this rule where the dismissal is under O. 17 R. 3<sup>2</sup> or O. 11 R. 21,<sup>3</sup> or where the dismissal is due to a failure on the part of the plaintiff to adduce evidence,<sup>4</sup> or where the plaint is rejected under O. 7 R. 11 for failure to pay deficient court-fees.<sup>5</sup> The rule applies only to suits and not to appeals.<sup>6</sup> It applies also to suits under Section 9 of the Specific Relief Act, 1877, which are dismissed for default. That Section bars only a review and not an application for rehearing.<sup>7</sup> As to the restoration of appeals dismissed for default of appearance of the appellants, see Order 41 Rule 19.

The Court cannot suo motu order a restoration without an application on the part of the plaintiff.<sup>8</sup> The word "plaintiff" has been held to include his legal representatives who can also therefore apply under this rule.<sup>9</sup> No fresh vakalatnama is necessary for an application under this rule.<sup>10</sup>

The effect of restoration under O. 9 R. 9 is to bring the suit, as regards parties, to the exact position in which it was at the time of dismissal.<sup>11</sup>

See also Note 6, infra.

2. "Appearance," meaning of. — The term "appearance" has nowhere been defined in the Code and it must be understood in reference to the particular subject-matter to which it relates.<sup>1</sup> "Appearance" in Order 9 means either —

- (a) by the party in person, or
- (b) by a pleader either himself duly instructed and able to answer all material questions relating to the suit or accompanied by some other person able to do so.<sup>2</sup>

5. Bar of fresh suit. — Where a suit is dismissed for default, it cannot be said to have been heard and decided on the merits and therefore cannot operate as res judicata.<sup>1</sup> But the plaintiff is, under the specific provisions of this rule, barred from bringing a fresh suit on the same cause of action;<sup>2</sup> and the fact that the mode of relief claimed in the subsequent suit is different will not be a ground for not applying the bar under this rule.<sup>3</sup> Thus, a suit on the basis of entries in the plaintiff's account book, in respect of the same sum of money for which a prior suit on a promissory note given therefor had been dismissed for default, will be barred under this rule.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, where a suit filed by the voluntary liquidator of a company against an alleged share-holder for the recovery of a sum of money due to the company is dismissed for default under this rule, a subsequent application by the official liquidator to have the name of the defendant placed in the list of contributories in respect of the same claim is barred.<sup>5</sup>

Where the cause of action in the subsequent suit is different from that in the first suit, this rule will not apply.<sup>6</sup> Thus, a suit for partition dismissed for default under this rule does not bar a subsequent suit for partition. The reason is that the right to enforce partition is a continuous right which is a legal incident of a joint tenancy and which endures so long as the joint tenancy continues.<sup>7</sup> See Note 36 to

Notes 5-6

Section 11, ante. As regards suits for redemption, it was held by the Privy Council in Shanker Baksh v. Daya Shanker<sup>8</sup> that where a first suit for redemption was dismissed for default under this rule, a second suit for redemption will be barred as being based on the same cause of action. The Allahabad<sup>9</sup> and Bombay<sup>10</sup> High Courts have, however, distinguished the said decision of the Privy Council on the ground that their Lordships did not consider the effect of Section 60 of the Transfer of Property Act, and that the effect of that Section is not to bar a second suit for redemption.

The rule does not apply unless the plaintiff in the prior suit is the plaintiff in the subsequent suit.<sup>11</sup> Thus, a dismissal for default of a suit by a Hindu widow in respect of her deceased husband's estate is no bar to a fresh suit by the reversioner in respect of the same matter.<sup>12</sup> The rule only precludes a fresh suit; it does not preclude a plea raised by a defendant in a suit.<sup>13</sup> The bar of a fresh suit under this rule applies only where the suit has been dismissed for default under Rule 8 and not otherwise.<sup>14</sup>

6. "Suit," meaning of. — According to the High Courts of Allahabad<sup>1</sup> and Calcutta<sup>2</sup> the rule is plainly intended to apply only to suits and not to applications, such as applications for probate. See also the undermentioned decision.<sup>3</sup> But the High Court of Madras<sup>4</sup> has held that the present rule applies to those applications which, under Section 83 of the Probate and Administration Act, are treated as suits. So also, it has been held by the High Court of Madras that this rule read along with Section 141 applies to an application for leave to sue as pauper, and where such application is dismissed for default of appearance, it can be restored under this rule.<sup>5</sup> It has further been held by that Court that where an application for restoration of a petition is maintainable by virtue of Section 141 of the Code, the Court cannot decline to consider the application on its merits on the ground that the applicant has another remedy open to him.<sup>6</sup> The Lahore High Court has also held that an application for probate dismissed for default of appearance can be restored under this rule.<sup>7</sup> But the same High Court has held that an application under Section 292 of the Succession Act of 1925 is in the nature of an execution proceeding and that, therefore, Section 141 does not make this rule applicable to such an application. So, it has been held by that Court that where such an application is dismissed for default, a fresh application can be made.<sup>9</sup>

In the undermentioned case,<sup>9</sup> it was held by the Oudh Chief Court that an application under Section 47 of the Code stands on the same footing as a suit and that where such an application is dismissed for default of appearance, a fresh application on the same allegations is not maintainable.

The bar under this rule does not apply to a fresh application for adjudication as insolvent after the dismissal of a prior application for default.<sup>10</sup> An order of annulment passed under Section 43, sub-section 1 of the Provincial Insolvency Act of 1920 cannot be set aside by virtue of the provisions of Order 9.<sup>11</sup> The reason is that Section 10, clause (2) of the Provincial Insolvency Act itself provides for a remedy in such cases.

The rule does not apply to applications under Section 158 of the Bengal Tenancy Act.<sup>12</sup>

7. Minor plaintiff.—A suit by a minor is liable to be dismissed for default of appearance on the part of the next friend<sup>1</sup> and the provisions of this rule cannot be nullified because the plaintiff happens to be a minor.<sup>2</sup> But where the next friend is guilty of gross negligence in the conduct of the suit, the minor can bring a fresh suit, notwithstanding this rule, either himself after attaining majority or through another next friend.<sup>3</sup> He can also apply under this rule for setting aside the order of dismissal.<sup>4</sup> See also Note 8 infra under the sub-heading "Absence of next friend of minor plaintiff."

8. "Sufficient cause."—The only ground for restoring a suit under this rule is the existence of a sufficient cause for the non-appearance of the party at the time the suit was called on for hearing.<sup>1</sup> The term "sufficient cause" has not been defined anywhere.<sup>3</sup> It is a question of fact depending upon the circumstances of each case<sup>3</sup> and is not subject to any hard and fast rule, except that the Court must exercise a judicial discretion in the matter.<sup>4</sup> In the undermentioned case,<sup>5</sup> the Rangoon High Court held that under this rule if "sufficient cause" is shown, the Court is bound to restore the suit, while if "sufficient cause" is not shown the matter is in the discretion of the Court. It is submitted with respect that the view that the Court has power to restore a suit even where it holds that sufficient cause has not been shown is open to question.

Absence of party.—A generous construction should be placed on the enactment to restore a suit dismissed for default,<sup>6</sup> and a party should not be deprived of a hearing unless there has been something equivalent to misconduct or gross negligence on his part.<sup>7</sup> The test to be applied as a general rule is to see whether the party applying, honestly intended to be present at the hearing of the suit and did his best to do so.<sup>8</sup> The High Court of Allahabad has, in the undermentioned case,<sup>9</sup> held that even though the plaintiff was negligent enough to start for the last train and missed it, the suit ought to be restored, observing that negligence is human and not irreparable and can be amply compensated by costs. The following grounds have been held to amount to sufficient cause for the absence of the party—

(1) A bona fide mistake which is not unreasonable or for which the party is not responsible.<sup>10</sup> Thus, where the bench clerk gave a wrong date of hearing,<sup>11</sup> or

Absence of next friend of minor plaintiff. — It has been held in the under-mentioned cases of the High Court of Madras<sup>32</sup> that if the next friend is absent at the trial, through whatever cause it may be, then that fact alone is a sufficient reason for setting aside an order of dismissal passed against the minor plaintiff. This view has, however, been held in a later case<sup>33</sup> as being too wide and that unless any concrete fact is alleged from which an inference can fairly be drawn that the failure of the next friend to appear has in any way prejudiced the interest of the minor, the Court is not bound to restore the suit. The Oudh Chief Court<sup>34</sup> has also held that the fact of the minority of a plaintiff is not by itself a sufficient cause for setting aside any order of dismissal that may have been passed owing to the absence of the next friend irrespective of the reasons for such absence.

See also Note 20 to Order 9 Rule 13.

Absence of pleader. — In the case of absence of the pleader it should be considered whether there was a bona fide and reasonable attempt on the part of the vakil to put in appearance; and due regard must be had to the exigencies of his professional duties.<sup>35</sup> Thus, where the pleader was sitting in the adjoining court-room and did not hear the suit being called but soon after dismissal appeared and applied for restoration,<sup>36</sup> or where the pleader was sitting in the bar-room and by the time he could come up the case was called and dismissed,<sup>37</sup> or when the suit was called for hearing the party or his agent went to fetch his pleader who was engaged in a different

Court and the Court in the meantime dismissed the suit,<sup>38</sup> it was held that there was sufficient cause for non-appearance. Similarly, when the pleader could not attend owing to illness and had no time to make fresh arrangements,<sup>39</sup> or where the pleader who had left the headquarters had entrusted the brief to another pleader who was also unavoidably absent,<sup>40</sup> it was held that there was sufficient cause for non-appearance. Where the absence of the vakil is due to a bona fide mistake, e. g., where the vakil noted in his diary the date of hearing which was on the 23rd of March as 23rd of April,<sup>41</sup> or where by the mistake of the pleader the party did not get intimation in time,<sup>42</sup> the suit was ordered to be restored to file. But the mere absence of a party's pleader<sup>43</sup> or the fact that the pleader was engaged elsewhere<sup>44</sup> does not amount to sufficient cause. The fact that in the District Court pleaders take up cases in different Courts and cannot be present at one and the same time in all the Courts,<sup>45</sup> or a mere misjudgment on the part of the counsel who does not state that he was engaged elsewhere,<sup>46</sup> or the mere fact that the agent or vakil was negligent,<sup>47</sup> will not suffice. It has been held by the Nagpur High Court<sup>48</sup> that if a party does all that he is required to do under the law to retain a pleader and the pleader fails to appear, it must be held that there is sufficient cause for the non-appearance of the party.

The mere fact that a party is contemplating to file an appeal against the preliminary decree will be no sufficient ground for restoring the final decree passed ex parte.<sup>49</sup>

9. Restoration of suit in favour of one of several plaintiffs — Whether can operate in favour of all. — An order under this rule restoring a suit dismissed for default on the application of one of several plaintiffs may, if the Court so directs, operate in favour of all the plaintiffs though they have not applied for restoration.<sup>1</sup>

O. 9 R. 9 the Court is thereafter functus officio and cannot extend the time for payment of the Notes 10a-13 costs.<sup>1</sup> See also Notes to Section 148, ante.

11. Limitation. — An application for restoration under this rule should be made within 30 days of the order of dismissal for default (see Limitation Act, Article 163). The Court has no power, inherent or otherwise, to extend the period of limitation prescribed therefor,<sup>1</sup> and if the Court restores an application presented after time the High Court can interfere in revision as the order is one made without jurisdiction.<sup>2</sup> Section 5 of the Limitation Act does not apply to this rule<sup>3</sup> unless the High Court has extended its application by a rule framed under Section 122. The Bombay High Court has added a proviso extending the application of Section 5 to this rule.<sup>4</sup>

A mere notice that an application is going to be moved on a future date will not prevent the running of limitation.<sup>5</sup>

12. Appeal. — The dismissal of an application under this rule is appealable under O. 43 R. 1 clause (c),<sup>1</sup> but no appeal lies from an order granting an application.<sup>2</sup> Nor can the propriety of such an order be questioned in the regular appeal preferred against the decree eventually passed, as the order does not affect the merits of the case within the meaning of Section 105.<sup>3</sup> But the dismissal of an application under this rule need not be on the merits and an appeal will lie also from an order dismissing such an application for non-prosecution.<sup>4</sup>

An order made by a Judge on the original side of the High Court rejecting an application for restoration is a "judgment" within the meaning of Clause 15 of the Letters Patent, and is appealable,<sup>5</sup> whereas an order granting an application has been held not to be a "judgment" within that Clause.<sup>6</sup>

13. Revision. — A revision lies to the High Court against an order granting an application under this rule.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a trial Court found that the grounds alleged were not sufficient but ordered restoration as a matter of grace,<sup>2</sup> or where the order is made without jurisdiction, or an erroneous refusal to exercise jurisdiction,<sup>3</sup> or the order is made summarily without recording evidence<sup>4</sup> or reasons,<sup>5</sup> it has been held that a revision lies. #### 1. Non-attendance of plaintiffs. | 2. Appeal.

1. Non-attendance of plaintiffs.—Under this rule the Court has a discretion to permit the suit to proceed in the same way as if all the plaintiffs have appeared.<sup>1</sup> Where the dismissal is in contravention of this rule a revision lies.<sup>2</sup>

2. Appeal.—On the date of hearing, one of the plaintiffs alone appeared and applied for an adjournment. The Court rejected the application and dismissed the suit. It was held that as one of the plaintiffs was present it cannot be said that the order of dismissal was one for default and that it amounted to a decree from which an appeal lay.<sup>1</sup>

R. 11. [S. 106.] Where there are more defendants than one, and one or more of them appear, and the others do not appear, the suit shall proceed, and the Court shall, at the time of pronouncing judgment, make such order as it thinks fit with respect to the defendants who do not appear.

1. Non-attendance of defendants. — The rule contemplates that a decree may be a contested one as against some of the defendants and ex parte as against the rest;<sup>1</sup> but the decree is liable to be set aside on an application by the ex parte defendant or defendants.<sup>2</sup> The Court should, under this rule, pass such order as it thinks fit against the absent defendants. Where no such order is passed against them but a decree is passed simply against some defendants, the decree is not ex parte against the absent defendants and cannot be re-opened under Rule 13.<sup>3</sup>

The Court should not pass a decree in an ex parte case, without any proof whatever by the plaintiff; it should consider the interests of the absent party.<sup>4</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — The words "under the provisions of Section 66 or Section 436" after the words "appear in person" which occurred in the old Code<sup>1</sup> have now been omitted. The result is that the rule applies to all cases where the Court has ordered a person to appear, whether or not the Court is specifically empowered to do so.<sup>2</sup> Where there is a failure to attend on the part of a party, the fact that his pleader is present<sup>3</sup> or the party ordered to appear happens to be the next friend of a minor plaintiff,<sup>4</sup> will not prevent the Court from acting under this rule. But all the same, the dismissal for non-attendance being a highly penal matter, it ought not to be inflicted on a party unless there is a distinct order to attend and upon proof that the party had deliberately disobeyed the same.<sup>5</sup> An opportunity should be given to prove the cause

RANGOON

(1). Add the following as second proviso :

"Provided also that no decree or order shall be set aside under this rule merely on the ground that there has been an irregularity in the service of the summons, if the Court is satisfied that the defendant was aware of the date of hearing in sufficient time to enable him to appear and answer the plaintiff's claim."

(2). Substitute "decree or order" for "decree" wherever this word occurs in Rule 13.

SIND

Add the following further proviso :

"Provided also that a decree passed ex parte shall not in the absence of good cause be set aside on the ground merely of irregularity in the service of the summons unless upon the facts proved the Court is satisfied that the defendant did not have notice of the date of hearing in sufficient time to appear and answer the plaintiff's claim."

Question as to service of summons on defendant decided—Fresh suit attacking it, if barred. See Note 12.

1. Legislative changes. —

The words "as against him" after the words "shall make an order setting aside the decree" have been newly added with a view to make it clear that the ex parte decree can only be set aside in favour of the defendant against whom it has been passed, unless it be that the proviso applies.<sup>1</sup>

The proviso to the rule is also new.

Order 9 Rule 13 — Note 1

1. See the Statement of Objects and Reasons.

O. 9 R. 13

2. Scope of the Rule. — The object of the rule is to ensure, within reasonable limits as to public convenience, that every defendant shall have a hearing,<sup>1</sup> and to place the successful applicant in the same position in which he would have been if no decree had been passed against him.<sup>2</sup> An application under this rule is not strictly speaking an application for a re-hearing although it may result in it.<sup>3</sup> The proceedings contemplated are not merely a branch of the suit which terminated when the ex parte decree was passed; the suit itself does not revive until after the proceedings in the application are terminated successfully.<sup>4</sup> The rule applies to suits<sup>5</sup> and not to appeals<sup>6</sup> inasmuch as separate and corresponding provisions have been made in Order 41 therefor. This rule applies to orders passed ex parte in insolvency proceedings under the Provincial Insolvency Act, V of 1920, by virtue of Section 5 of that Act<sup>7</sup> and also to decrees in arbitration proceedings under Schedule II of the Code.<sup>8</sup>

An order setting aside an ex parte decree is a judgment within the meaning of Section 2, sub-section 9 ante and cannot therefore "be altered or added to, save as provided by Section 152 or on review."<sup>9</sup> See Order 20 Rule 3.

Although it is the practice of the mofussil Courts to pass an order declaring a defendant ex parte, the Code does not in terms provide for an application to set aside such order. It is only when a decree has been passed that an application to set aside such decree has been expressly provided for by the Code.<sup>10</sup>

3. Applicability to execution proceedings. — See Note 1 to Order 9, General and also the undermentioned cases.<sup>1</sup>

4. Decree passed by the Presidency Court of Small Causes. — Section 37 of the Presidency Small Cause Courts Act, XV of 1882, declaring the finality of small cause decrees, does not apply to an ex parte decree and an application will consequently lie under this rule to set it aside.<sup>1</sup> Where an application is made under this rule and is dismissed, an application cannot be made under Section 38 of that Act for a new trial.<sup>2</sup> It was held in the case noted below<sup>3</sup> that under the rules framed by the Calcutta

O. 9 R. 13

5. Decree passed by the Provincial Court of Small Causes. — Section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act (IX of 1887) requires the deposit of the decretal amount or the furnishing of security as a condition precedent to the entertaining of an application to set aside an ex parte decree.<sup>1</sup> Where security is furnished within the period of limitation but on its being found to be insufficient the deficiency is made up after the expiry of limitation, the provisions of Section 17 of the Provincial Small Cause Courts Act should be held to be complied with.<sup>2</sup>

Even where the Small Cause Court by which an ex parte decree was passed has been abolished, the requirements under Section 17 as to deposit or security should be complied with in the case of an application to set aside the ex parte decree.<sup>3</sup>

An order setting aside an ex parte decree of a Provincial Small Cause Court is one passed under the Code.<sup>4</sup>

See also the Authors' Commentaries on the Limitation Act, Article 164, Note 3.

6. When a decree can be said to be ex parte. — The present rule is limited to decrees made ex parte under the provisions of Order 9 and does not govern other decrees, though ex parte, unless Order 9 has been extended to those decrees by other provisions in the Code.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where a suit is decided under O. 17 R. 3<sup>2</sup> or O. 11 R. 21, the decree is not ex parte so as to entitle the defendant to apply under this rule. The reason is that the Court is not empowered under those rules to proceed under Order 9. The decree referred to is clearly a decree passed either at the first hearing under Rule 6 of this Order<sup>3</sup> or at an adjourned hearing under O. 17 R. 2 read with Rule 9.<sup>4</sup> Under O. 17 R. 2 specific provision is made for the Court to proceed under Order 9 and the aggrieved party is also entitled in such a case to the remedy provided for by this rule.<sup>5</sup> A decree passed on default of appearance of the defendant at the hearing of a remanded suit is nevertheless an ex parte decree.<sup>6</sup> Similarly, a final decree passed in the absence of the defendant is an ex parte decree within the meaning of this rule.<sup>7</sup>

A decree cannot be ex parte when there is evidence already on record and the Court goes into the merits before decreeing the suit.<sup>8</sup> Thus, where both the parties have let in their evidence and nothing remains to be done except arguments, the Court ought not to proceed to pass an ex parte decree.<sup>9</sup> Similarly, where the defendant who has been summoned as a witness by the plaintiff fails to appear, the Court is not justified in passing an ex parte decree when the pleader for the defendant is ready to proceed with the case.<sup>10</sup> Where the defendant actually appears, a mere failure on his part to adduce evidence will not make the decree passed an ex parte decree.<sup>11</sup> A defendant's pleader on the day fixed for trial filed an additional written statement and applied for a fresh issue being framed. On such issue being framed, he applied for an adjournment and on adjournment being refused, reported no instructions and the trial proceeded. It was held that the acts of the pleader in filing the additional written statement and applying for the framing of a fresh issue were acts done by him in the conduct of the suit and towards the progress of the suit which had then been called on for hearing and that they constituted an appearance.<sup>12</sup>

Where a compromise decree is passed in a suit and a party applies to set it aside on the ground that the applicant was no party to the compromise and that he had given no authority to file the compromise, there is a conflict of opinion as to whether the application can be treated as one under this rule, for which see the undermentioned cases.<sup>13</sup>

The recitals on the record are not conclusive as to the character of the decree<sup>14</sup> and the defendant is entitled to show that the decree is, as a matter of fact, ex parte.<sup>15</sup>

7. Where a written statement is filed.— Where the defendant has filed a written statement in the case but fails to appear when the suit is called on for hearing, the decree passed is nevertheless an ex parte decree and can be set aside under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

8. Remedies in the case of an ex parte decree. — A defendant against whom an ex parte decree has been passed has four courses open to him, viz. —

- (1) to apply under this rule to set aside the ex parte decree,<sup>1</sup> or
- (2) to apply for a review,<sup>2</sup> or
- (3) to appeal from the decree,<sup>3</sup> or
- (4) to institute a suit on the ground of fraud.<sup>4</sup>

See also Note 12 to Section 96.

9. Whether the remedies are concurrent. — As to whether and how far the remedies 1 and 3 referred to in Note 8 above are concurrent, see Note 12 to Section 96.

The defendant may apply for a review without applying under this rule<sup>1</sup> or even after an application under this rule has been rejected.<sup>2</sup> According to the High Courts of Calcutta<sup>3</sup> and Madras<sup>4</sup> the fact that an application for a review is made at a time when an application under this rule would be barred by limitation, is no ground for refusing a review. But the High Court of Lahore<sup>5</sup> has held contra, namely that no review can be granted in such a case and that the defendant cannot be allowed to evade the law of limitation. It is submitted that the former view is correct. If the party is entitled to a review, he is equally entitled to apply for the same within the period of limitation proscribed therefor and not for any other application.

10. Hearing of application pending appeal. — As has been seen in Note 12 to Section 96 ante, the mere filing of an appeal does not take away the jurisdiction of the trial Court to entertain an application under this rule. In fact, such an application ought to be presented to the Court which passed the decree,<sup>1</sup> for, the decree continues to be the decree of the primary Court until it is reversed, confirmed or varied in appeal.<sup>2</sup> The proceedings under this rule and in an appeal are entirely distinct in their scope and purpose and there is no possibility of any conflict between the judgments to be pronounced in the two proceedings.<sup>3</sup>

Where a decree is ex parte against some defendants and contested against the rest, and the contesting defendants alone appeal without impleading the ex parte defendants as respondents, the application by the ex parte defendants ought to be made only to the trial Court.<sup>4</sup> Even if the ex parte defendants have been impleaded as pro forma respondents in appeal, it has been held by the Allahabad<sup>5</sup> and Madras<sup>6</sup> High Courts that the proper Court to which application ought to be made is the trial Court; the proper course in such a case is to get an adjournment of the hearing of the appeal to enable the party to apply to the trial Court, and not wait till the disposal of the appeal.

11. Hearing of application after disposal of appeal. — As has been seen already in Note 12 to Section 96, where an ex parte decree has been confirmed in appeal, the Court of first instance has no jurisdiction to entertain or dispose of an application to set aside the decree, and if it does so its action is ultra vires.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the decree of the trial Court becomes superseded or merged in that of the Appellate Court<sup>2</sup> and the result of allowing an application would be to interfere with the decree of a superior Court, viz., the Appellate Court.<sup>3</sup> The same principle will apply where an application in revision had been preferred against the decree and such application has been decided.<sup>4</sup> The High Court of Madras has, however, held in a recent decision<sup>5</sup> that even after the disposal of the appeal the trial Court has jurisdiction to entertain and dispose of such an application. It is submitted that this view is opposed to the decision of the Privy Council in Brij Narain v. Tejpal Bikram,<sup>6</sup> and is not correct on principle.

But where the decree of the trial Court is not superseded or does not get merged in the appellate decree, the trial Court has power to entertain and deal with the application to set aside the ex parte decree. Thus, where the appeal is dismissed for default, there is no decree of the Appellate Court which can be said to supersede the decree of the trial Court so as to prevent the defendant from applying to the trial Court.<sup>7</sup> Similarly, where the appeal is dismissed as having abated by reason of the omission of the appellant to implead the legal representatives of the deceased respondents, there is no merger of the decree of the trial Court in the decree of the Appellate Court.<sup>8</sup> Again, when the ex parte defendants are not impleaded as parties to the appeal by other defendants, the decree of the Appellate Court does not prevent them from applying to the trial Court under this rule.<sup>9</sup> Where the ex parte decree declares the liability of two defendants separately and specifically and one of the defendants appeals against the decree, an application by the other defendant to set aside the ex parte decree may be made to the trial Court.<sup>10</sup>

Notes 11-12

In the case of an application to set aside an ex parte final decree, it is only the original Court which passed the decree and not the Appellate Court which confirmed the preliminary decree that has got the jurisdiction to entertain the application.<sup>11</sup>

12. Suit to set aside an ex parte decree—Ex parte decree obtained by fraud. — As has been seen in Note 61 to Section 9, fraud vitiates the most solemn transactions. A suit will, therefore, lie to set aside an ex parte decree on the ground of fraud.<sup>1</sup> Thus, if the plaintiff suppresses the fact of a compromise effected and obtains an ex parte decree, the decree can be set aside by a separate suit.<sup>2</sup> If the decree is tainted with fraud, any sale which has taken place in pursuance of the decree can also be set aside.<sup>3</sup> But the fraud alleged must be extraneous to everything which has been adjudicated upon by the Court and the defendant cannot be allowed to get round the rule of res judicata by simply proving that the ex parte judgment is wrong.<sup>4</sup> The falsity of the claim on which the former suit was based will not in itself amount to fraud in obtaining the decree in such suit and a suit will not lie to set aside the decree on the ground of such falsity.<sup>5</sup> But it has been held that where non-service of summons in the previous suit has not been found to be fraudulent, it is permissible to go into the merits of the previous suit to see if there was a motive for wilful or fraudulent suppression of the notice or summons in order to obtain a decree based on a false claim.<sup>6</sup>

In a suit to set aside the ex parte decree on the ground of fraud, the onus lies on the party suing to show that there was some fraud in relation to the proceedings of the Court.<sup>7</sup> The mere fact that a decree is ex parte does not show that there has been no service of summons. On the other hand, the presumption is that the Court was satisfied as to due service of summons before proceeding ex parte.<sup>8</sup>

A suit is maintainable notwithstanding the fact that it has not been preceded by an application under this rule<sup>9</sup> or that an application was filed under this rule and proved infructuous.<sup>10</sup> But, where the question raised in the suit has already been decided adversely to the applicant in an application under this rule, such decision will operate as res judicata and will bar the re-opening of the same question in the suit.<sup>11</sup> Further, no suit can be entertained where the only question submitted is one that could, and should have been dealt with under this rule.<sup>12</sup> For instance, where the only fraud alleged is bare non-service of summons, no suit can succeed.<sup>13</sup> It is quite a different matter, however, where the whole suit is attacked on the ground of fraud and the incident of improper or defective service is relied on as one of the indicia of fraud.<sup>14</sup> As the Judicial Committee observed in Khagendra Nath v. Pran Nath (I. L. R. 29 Calcutta 395), O. 9 R. 13 assumes the existence of a real suit and has no application where the suit itself is attacked on the ground of fraud and the fraudulent and violent incidents of its progress, e. g., at the stage of service are treated as parts and indicia of a whole. A fraudulent suppression in the matter of the service of summons can afford a sufficient ground for setting aside the ex parte decree.<sup>15</sup> Thus, where the plaintiff got summons served on a wrong person suppressing the father's name of the real defendant, and knowing full well that the defendant was not a partner got him impleaded as a partner, it was held that the decree was tainted with fraud.<sup>16</sup> Similarly, where the plaintiff falsely and intentionally represented to the Court that the defendant was away in a distant place and got substituted service effected, the decree passed in the case was held to be vitiated by fraud.<sup>17</sup>

The mere fact that the ex parte decree has been procured by false or perjured evidence is no ground for setting it aside. Something more should be proved in support of the allegation of fraud.<sup>18</sup>

Notes 12-16

Where the very question of fraud has been already in issue and agitated between the same parties and decided upon in an application under this rule, the decision will operate as res judicata in a separate suit.<sup>19</sup>

The question whether the original suit itself is revived after the ex parte decree in that suit has been set aside in a subsequent suit, depends on the issues and the actual decision in the later suit.<sup>20</sup>

If the ex parte decree be not set aside it is final and will operate as res judicata.<sup>21</sup>

See also Note 19 to Section 11.

13. Application to be made to the Court which passed the decree. — The rule requires an application by the defendant for an order to set aside the decree.<sup>1</sup> The application under this rule ought to be made to the Court which passed the decree though the presiding Judge may be different.<sup>2</sup> Where, however, by reason of territorial re-adjustment, the Court itself becomes different, the defendant is not debarred from applying to the Court which is seised of the matter.<sup>3</sup>

According to the undermentioned case of the High Court of Madras<sup>4</sup> an application should be made only to the trial Court even after disposal of the appeal against the ex parte decree. This view, as has been seen in Note 11 above, cannot be accepted as correct. In an earlier decision of the same High Court<sup>5</sup> it was held that the High Court can, in second appeal, entertain an application for setting aside an ex parte decree passed by the trial Court.

An application under this rule is not bad merely because it omits to give the names of some of the decree-holders.<sup>6</sup>

14. Fresh vakalatnama, if necessary. — A pleader who had duly appeared in the suit is not obliged to file a fresh vakalatnama for the purpose of an application under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

15. Who can apply to set aside. — The application under this rule is not limited to the case of a sole defendant who has not appeared or, where there are more defendants than one, none of them had appeared; any one of several defendants against

O. 9 R. 13 whom the decree is ex parte can apply.<sup>1</sup> The words "against the defendant" do not
Notes 16-17 necessarily imply that the only defendant against whom relief has been in terms granted by the decree can apply for an order to set it aside; they are comprehensive enough to include a case in which the decree adversely affects the rights of a contesting defendant. Thus, where the real question is whether the plaintiff or the contesting defendants are really entitled to the claim in suit and an ex parte decree is passed, the contesting defendants are competent to apply under this rule.<sup>2</sup> But a person who is not a party though he may be interested in the suit is not entitled to apply under this rule.<sup>3</sup> Nor can a person who though a formal party but against whom nothing is said in the operative portion of the decree<sup>4</sup> or who has been expressly exempted from the decree, apply under this rule.<sup>5</sup> It follows that a person against whom the suit is dismissed cannot apply.<sup>6</sup>

The Court cannot suo motu set aside an ex parte decree without there being an application by the party.<sup>7</sup>

16. Application by the legal representative of the defendant. — When a defendant dies after an ex parte decree is made against him, his legal representative can apply under this rule to set it aside.<sup>1</sup> The reason is that the legal representative enjoys the same rights and liabilities as the original defendant. The contrary view expressed in the undermentioned cases<sup>2</sup> that the provision only authorises applications by the defendant against whom an ex parte decree was passed is not correct under the present Code having regard to Section 146.

Where proceedings under this rule have been already initiated by the defendant, his legal representative is entitled to continue the same.<sup>3</sup> See also Section 146, Notes 2 and 7 for fuller discussion.

17. Grounds for setting aside an ex parte decree. — In an application under this rule, the Court has to satisfy itself (a) whether the summons has not been duly served or (b) whether the applicant has been prevented by sufficient cause from appearing.<sup>1</sup> The words in the rule are imperative and if either of these conditions is satisfied, the Court is bound to set aside the ex parte decree and cannot refuse it on any other ground.<sup>2</sup> Thus, the fact that the defendant did not take out summons to his witnesses is no ground for refusing the application if otherwise the conditions of this rule are satisfied.<sup>3</sup> Conversely, where either of these conditions is not satisfied the Court has no jurisdiction to grant the application for any other reason.<sup>4</sup> Thus, where a suit is restored to file under Rule 9, ante, and the Court passes an ex parte decree on the same day on account of the fact that the defendant was not ready to go on with the trial, it has been held that the decree could not be set aside under this rule.<sup>5</sup> In such a case the decree is, however, illegal and can be set aside in appeal or revision as the case may be.

The Court should decide upon evidence<sup>6</sup> or proper affidavits<sup>7</sup> and come to a definite finding as to the facts alleged in the application.<sup>8</sup> An application under this rule in rent suits under the Bengal Tenancy Act,<sup>9</sup> and the Orissa Tenancy Act<sup>10</sup> must contain a statement of the injury sustained by the applicant by the ex parte decree, and must also be accompanied by a deposit in Court of the amount of rent admitted due by the applicant unless the Court otherwise directs.

18. Summons not duly served. — The onus of proving that the summons has not been duly served is upon the applicant claiming the benefit of this rule.<sup>1</sup> If he makes out that the necessary proof of due service required by Rule 6 was not given before the Court proceeded ex parte, the decree ought to be set aside.<sup>2</sup> But a mere assertion of ignorance on the part of the defendant is not enough to prove want of due service.<sup>3</sup> The Court must decide the matter upon enquiry and upon evidence.<sup>4</sup>

Although in the first instance the onus lies on the applicant, it will shift to the opposite party where the service is not on the defendant personally but on his gumasta, and he must show that the provisions of O. 5 R. 12 or R. 13 were complied with.<sup>5</sup> It is necessary in each case for the Court to see that the serving officer has used all due and reasonable diligence with a view to find out the defendant before affixing the summons.<sup>6</sup>

Although the words "duly served" would appear to relate to the method of service, yet, a summons cannot be said to be duly served if it is a misleading document having no relevance to the real proceeding which is contemplated and having no reference to the order ultimately passed because, under such circumstances, service, even if effected, is a mere sham.<sup>7</sup> Where the summons has not been served because it contained the wrong name of the defendant's father,<sup>8</sup> or where the summons is served, not upon the defendant, but on his brother,<sup>9</sup> or where the service is by registered post and the defendant denies receipt of the same,<sup>10</sup> or where, in the case of a substituted service, there is nothing on record to show that the provisions of O. 5 Rr. 19 and 20 were complied with,<sup>11</sup> or where the order for substituted service was obtained by misrepresentation or fraud,<sup>12</sup> or where the defendant is not served in sufficient time to enable him to appear and defend,<sup>13</sup> the Court is justified in setting aside the ex parte decree. The un rebutted oath of the applicant that he was not served has been held to be sufficient proof of non-service.<sup>14</sup> The affidavit of the serving officer is admissible in evidence to show service of summons. But when service is denied it is desirable that the serving officer is put in the witness-box so that he can be cross-examined by the party denying service.<sup>15</sup>

Appearance before the registration of suit in a proceeding for the appointment of a guardian ad litem does not dispense with the service of suit summons.<sup>16</sup> Where the summons has not been duly served the fact that the defendant knew of the suit will be no ground for not restoring the suit.<sup>17</sup> Where, however, the defendant has refused the summons<sup>18</sup> or has wilfully or carelessly failed to appear after due service,<sup>19</sup> the ex parte decree cannot be set aside. Similarly, a mere irregularity in service of summons on a co-defendant<sup>20</sup> or on the defendant himself, where he has waived the irregularity by accepting the summons, is not sufficient to set aside the ex parte decree.<sup>21</sup>

See also Order 5 generally.

19. Sufficient cause. — See Order 9 Rule 9 Notes 8, “sufficient cause.” It may, among other things, include a fraudulent suppression of summons from the knowledge of the defendant.<sup>1</sup>

20. Minor defendant. — If a minor defendant is properly represented in the suit an ex parte decree is as binding upon him as a decree in a contested suit,<sup>1</sup> and cannot be set aside on the ground that he has not been served with the notice of the intention to appoint a court-officer as guardian ad litem.<sup>2</sup> As to whether a minor can apply to set aside an ex parte decree where he has not been properly represented, there is a conflict of judicial opinion. The High Court of Madras<sup>3</sup> and the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur<sup>4</sup> have held that the minor in such a case cannot be regarded as a party to the suit at all, that the decree passed is in effect a nullity and the Court cannot re-open the suit under this rule. On the other hand, the High Court of Allahabad,<sup>5</sup> and the Chief Court of Oudh<sup>6</sup> have held that he is entitled to apply under this rule. In the undermentioned case<sup>7</sup> decided by the Patna High Court the Judges differed on this point.

But the mere fact that the guardian did not appear or that the court-guardian failed to appear owing to want of instructions,<sup>8</sup> or that there are mere irregularities in the matter of the appointment of a guardian,<sup>9</sup> is not a sufficient ground for setting aside the ex parte decree. But it has been held that where the guardian has wrongfully or negligently allowed a claim against a minor to be decreed ex parte, the decree can be set aside under this rule.<sup>10</sup> See also Note 8 to Order 9 Rule 9.

It is, however, open to the minor to impeach an ex parte decree got against him by a separate suit in cases where he can show that the guardian has been guilty of fraud or gross negligence<sup>11</sup> and if his interests were prejudiced thereby.<sup>12</sup> The fact that he has not applied under this rule is no bar to the suit.<sup>13</sup>

21. Decree having been satisfied. — The fact that an ex parte decree has been satisfied does not disentitle the defendant from applying under this rule.<sup>1</sup>

22. "Upon such terms as to costs," etc. — The Court has a wide discretion in imposing such terms on the applicant as it thinks fit before setting aside the ex parte decree; thus, it may order him to deposit the decretal amount in Court especially when the bona fides of his defence are not free from doubt<sup>1</sup> or it may order the payment of costs.<sup>2</sup> It may also impose a condition that the applicant should find a surety who would be responsible for any amount that may be found due by him under any decree that may be subsequently passed<sup>3</sup> and direct that the security should be in cash or in property.<sup>4</sup> Where the conditions are not strictly carried out the order becomes inoperative and the ex parte decree will remain valid.<sup>5</sup> The Court can extend the time fixed for payment of the costs or of the decree amount either under Section 148 or under its inherent powers.<sup>6</sup> The Court ought not, however, to impose very onerous terms on the applicant.<sup>7</sup>

An order giving time to pay the decree amount under this rule does not of itself operate as a stay of execution of the ex parte decree.<sup>8</sup>

See also Note 30 below.

23. Proviso to the Rule. — It cannot be laid down as an inflexible rule that whenever an order is made under this rule its effect is to set aside the whole decree. The true test is whether the suit as framed can be maintained and a decree made in favour of the plaintiff, even if the other defendant or defendants against whom the decree has been made ex parte were not impleaded as parties.<sup>1</sup> Thus, where A filed a suit for rent under the Bengal Tenancy Act against X, Y and Z and a decree was passed ex parte against all the defendants, but Z applied to have the ex parte decree set aside on the ground that she was not duly served with summons, it was held that the whole decree should not be set aside inasmuch as a decree for the whole rent could have been passed against X and Y alone without impleading Z.<sup>2</sup>

But where the decree is of such a nature that it cannot be set aside only against the defendant applying under this rule, it may be set aside wholly against all the defendants including those who have not applied or even those against whom a decree has been passed on the merits.<sup>3</sup> The following are some of the classes of cases in which the decree cannot be set aside only as against the defendant applying without setting it aside as against the other defendants also —

14. ('37) AIR 1937 All 552 (556). (Where proceedings taken to appoint a guardian ad litem for a minor in a suit have been declared to be invalid, and the suit cannot proceed unless such proceedings are properly initiated and completed, the Court whose duty ultimately is to appoint such a guardian has inherent power under S. 151, C. P. C., to revive the suit.)

A, B and C, who are coparceners of a joint Hindu family, together execute a mortgage to X. X files a suit against all of them. C alone is served, but none of them appear and an ex parte decree is passed against all. A and B alone apply under this rule for setting aside the decree. Here the decree being one and indivisible it ought to be set aside against C also.<sup>5</sup>

Where the decree is not joint and indivisible,<sup>6</sup> e. g., where the suit is to obtain possession of separate items of properties from separate sets of defendants,<sup>7</sup> or where the decree itself is divisible and each of the defendants has separate defence, the whole decree need not be set aside.<sup>8</sup>

2. Where the decree proceeds on a ground common to all the defendants.<sup>9</sup>

Illustration

A sues B and C on a promissory note. B is the principal debtor and C is the surety. An ex parte decree is passed against both. B alone applies to set aside the decree and shows sufficient cause for his absence. The decree ought to be set aside against C also as the liability of both is based on a common ground.<sup>10</sup>

Where, however, the decree does not proceed on a common ground<sup>11</sup> and the defence of the several defendants is distinct or peculiar to each of them,<sup>12</sup> the whole decree ought not to be set aside. Thus, where A sues B and C on a promissory note, on the allegation that B is the executant of the promissory note and that B and C (his nephew) are members of an undivided Hindu family of which B is the manager, and after the passing of an ex parte decree against both C alone applies to set aside the decree, the proper course is to set aside the decree only as against C and not as against B also inasmuch as his liability is based on the ground that he executed the promissory note while the liability of C is based on the distinct ground that the debt was binding upon him and his defence is peculiar and not common to that of B.<sup>13</sup>

3. Where it is necessary that the whole decree should be re-opened in the interests of justice<sup>14</sup> or, in other words, where the relief which the applicant is entitled to cannot effectively be given except by setting aside the decree against the other defendants also.

Thus, in the case of an ex parte decree against several mortgagors, it has been held that the better course would be to set aside the decree against all the defendants.<sup>15</sup>

4. When the suit would result in two inconsistent decrees if the ex parte decree be not set aside against the other defendants also.<sup>17</sup>

Illustrations

(i) X sues A and B, two joint executants of a promissory note, for the recovery of the amount due thereunder. B has, as a matter of fact, paid the amount due to X. B is not served and does not appear and A, who is served also does not appear and an ex parte decree is passed against both. B applies to set aside the decree. Can the decree be set aside against A also? Yes. The reason is that, if B succeeds at the hearing in proving the payment, the result of not setting aside the decree against A also would be two inconsistent decrees.<sup>18</sup>

(ii) A sues B and C alleging that they are in joint possession of a certain immovable property and asking for a declaration that he is in joint possession with them. B alone is served but not C and there is an ex parte decree against both. C applies for a re-hearing under this rule. The decree ought to be set aside against B also because if C establishes at the hearing that A has no title whatsoever to the property, the result will be two inconsistent decrees one against B and another against C.<sup>19</sup>

The principle above referred to equally applies to cases where the decree is ex parte against some of the defendants and contested against the rest.<sup>20</sup> Thus, where the decree is one and indivisible, it can be set aside against all,<sup>21</sup> but where it is divisible it can be set aside only as against the defendant applying.<sup>22</sup> The undermentioned cases<sup>23</sup> which lay down that the whole decree cannot be set aside where some defendants contest the suit are, it is submitted, not correct.

The onus of proving that the application is within thirty days of the knowledge of the decree is upon the applicant.<sup>8</sup> But a vague knowledge that some decree has been passed by some Court is not enough to start limitation against the applicant.<sup>9</sup> In the case of an application to set aside an ex parte final decree, it has been held that limitation starts from the date of the decree as it is not necessary to give a fresh notice before the passing of the final decree.<sup>10</sup>

"Duly served" in Article 164 means served in such a manner as to give the defendant information of the proceedings taken against him.<sup>11</sup> In the case of a substituted service, time begins to run from the date of the decree as the service is deemed to be due service,<sup>12</sup> unless the defendant can show that the circumstances under which substituted service could legally be ordered did not exist.<sup>13</sup>

29. Appeal. — The rule contemplates three classes of orders<sup>1</sup>—

- (1) Order setting aside the ex parte decree.
- (2) Order setting aside the ex parte decree on certain terms.
- (3) Order rejecting the application to set aside the ex parte decree.

No appeal lies from an order falling under class 1.<sup>2</sup> As to whether an error, defect or irregularity in passing such an order can be made a ground of objection under Section 105 of the Code in an appeal from the final decree, see Note 6 to Section 105, supra. But when the order was passed without jurisdiction, it was held in the undermentioned cases<sup>3</sup> under the Code of 1877, that it could be objected to in appeal.

In the second class of cases where the Court passes a conditional order, e. g., where, on the failure of the applicant to comply with certain terms it is ordered that the petition will stand dismissed, the question arises whether the order by itself is appealable. It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay, Rangoon and Madras

The underlying principle in such cases is that where the existence of the suit has been brought to the notice of the defendants by due service of summons on them, it is their duty thereafter to inform themselves of what is being done in the case.)

that the rejection referred to in O. 43 R. 1, clause (d) signifies an immediate rejection and not a conditional or prospective rejection<sup>4</sup> and, therefore, it is only the final order passed on failure to fulfil the conditions imposed that is appealable. The High Court of Allahabad<sup>5</sup> has, however, taken a contrary view.

O. 9 R. 13
Notes 29-30

In the third class of cases the order is appealable under O. 43 R. 1, clause (d),<sup>6</sup> whether the rejection is on the merits or on default.<sup>7</sup> The Appellate Court may in such an appeal remand the application for enquiry.<sup>8</sup> The fact that a final decree has been passed in the case is no ground for refusing to entertain an appeal from an order rejecting an application to set aside an ex parte preliminary decree as, in the present Code, the two decrees are independent and separate.<sup>9</sup> As has been seen in Note 12 to Section 96, ante, where an application to set aside an ex parte decree has been dismissed on the merits, the propriety of the order of dismissal cannot be questioned in the appeal from the ex parte decree itself. But such finality of the order dismissing the application under this rule is confined to matters which are within the scope of this rule. Therefore, the Appellate Court in hearing an appeal from the ex parte decree is not precluded from considering and deciding the question whether under the circumstances of the case it would not have been better, in the interests of justice, for the trial Court to have adjourned the case.<sup>10</sup> Where, on an application to set aside an ex parte decree being dismissed for default, an application for the restoration of such application is also dismissed, no appeal lies from the latter order of dismissal.<sup>11</sup>

See also the undermentioned cases.<sup>12</sup>

30. Revision. — An order setting aside an ex parte decree not being appealable, a revision will lie therefrom if the conditions of Section 115 of the Code are satisfied.<sup>1</sup>

The High Court will not interfere with a finding of fact as to sufficient cause or otherwise<sup>10</sup> or interfere with any of the conditions imposed by the Court in the exercise of its discretion.<sup>11</sup> Similarly, where the party has acquiesced in the order of the trial Court by accepting costs, he cannot apply for a revision.<sup>12</sup>

Cancel the word "thereof" and substitute therefor the following words:

"together with a copy thereof (or concise statement as the case may be)."

1. Notice to opposite party. — The rule is imperative that no ex parte decree can be set aside without notice to the opposite party so as to give him an opportunity to be heard.<sup>1</sup> A mere oral notice given to a pleader who appeared in execution proceedings in connection with the same decree but who was different from the pleader who appeared in the suit<sup>2</sup> or a service on plaintiff's pleader in the absence of any order of the Court,<sup>3</sup> or a service on plaintiff's chela<sup>4</sup> has been held to be not sufficient.

The words "opposite party" mean such of the parties to the suit as are interested in opposing the application. The words do not include a court auction-purchaser<sup>5</sup> or an attaching decree-holder who has attached the ex parte decree<sup>6</sup> or a co-defendant in a case.<sup>7</sup>

ORDER X.

EXAMINATION OF PARTIES BY THE COURT

O. 10 R. 1

R. 1. [S. 117.] At the first hearing of the suit the Court shall ascertain from each party or his pleader whether he admits or denies such allegations of fact as are made in the plaint or written statement (if any) of the opposite party, and as are not expressly or by necessary implication admitted or denied by the party against whom they are made. The Court shall record such admissions and denials.

Ascertainment whether allegations in pleadings are admitted or denied.

[1877, S. 114.]

Synopsis

1. "Shall ascertain."

2. Effect of statements by party or his pleader.

1. "Shall ascertain."—The powers which this Order vests in the Civil Courts are mainly intended to draw by viva voce examination, the real points in controversy between the parties and thus prevent the real matter in dispute remaining undecided or left out of consideration.<sup>1</sup> The proper way of clearing up the pleadings after the plaint and the written statement are filed is that provided by this rule, the provisions of which are peremptory.<sup>2</sup> Permitting parties to file a series of written statements against each other is not justified under this rule.<sup>3</sup> An examination under this rule is not necessary or proper where the pleadings on the record are complete and clear.<sup>4</sup>

2. Effect of statements by party or his pleader. — The party or his pleader is bound to answer questions put by the Court; but he can properly refuse to make admissions about matters not directly involved in the suit especially when the questions are put at the suggestion of the opposite party whose object is to get useful answers for a contemplated litigation.<sup>1</sup>

The admission of a party is conclusive against him<sup>2</sup> but is not evidence against the opposite party.<sup>3</sup>

The Court must record the admissions or denials made under this rule<sup>4</sup> but cannot act upon the answers recorded and pass final judgment in the suit without framing issues in the case.<sup>5</sup>

O. 10 R. 1
Note 2

As to the effect of admissions by pleader, see Order 3 Rule 4.

Where all the defendants confess judgment, it is permissible for the Court to record a joint statement of all the defendants and pass a decree on admission.<sup>6</sup>

R. 2. [S. 118.] At the first hearing of the suit, or at any subsequent hearing, any party appearing in person or present in Court, or any person able to answer any material questions relating to the suit by whom such party or his pleader is accompanied, may be examined orally by the Court; and the Court may, if it thinks fit, put in the course of such examination questions suggested by either party.

[1877, Ss. 118, 119; 1859, S. 125.]

1. Oral examination. — The object of the examination under this rule is to ascertain the matters in dispute and not to take evidence or to ascertain what is to be the evidence in the case.<sup>1</sup> It is not intended to be a substitute for a regular examination on oath<sup>2</sup> but is intended to help the elucidation of what is obscure and vague in the plaint; the allegations of facts contained in the oral examination under this rule cannot be read into the plaint and thus enlarge its scope.<sup>3</sup> "The power under this rule is intended to be used by the Judge only where he finds it necessary to obtain from a party information on any material questions relating to the suit, and ought not to be employed so as to supersede the ordinary procedure at trial as prescribed in Order 18."<sup>4</sup> A statement made by a party under this rule is binding on him to the same extent as the statement made by his pleader would be binding on him. But a statement made by a person who accompanies the pleader to look after the case on behalf of the party would not necessarily bind the party on whose behalf he appears.<sup>5</sup>

Where a defendant appears by a pleader the fact that he does not file a written statement does not warrant the trial of the suit ex parte. The Judge should proceed under this rule and ascertain what are the matters in dispute and then proceed with the suit.<sup>6</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — The intention of the rule is to enable the Court not only to get obscure points cleared up by obtaining information from either of the parties, but also, if possible, to get admissions so as to narrow down the issues.<sup>1</sup>

2. Order for personal appearance. — An order under this rule directing a party to appear in person can be passed only where the Court finds that there is a material question relating to the suit that has to be answered by such party or his pleader, and the pleader refuses or is unable to answer such question.<sup>1</sup>

Notes 2-4

The order should be specific and sufficiently explicit<sup>2</sup> and must state the reasons therefor. A mere statement that "it is necessary that the defendant should appear in person" is not sufficient.<sup>3</sup> The Court has, however, a discretion to decide which of the parties ought to answer the question.<sup>4</sup>

3. Refusal or inability of pleader to answer. — See Note 2 above and Note 4 below.

4. Effect of non-attendance without lawful excuse. — Where the party directed to appear by the Court under this rule fails to appear in person without lawful excuse, the Court may pronounce judgment against him.<sup>1</sup> Where one party has failed to appear without lawful excuse but others have appeared, the Court cannot pronounce judgment against the persons who have so appeared.<sup>2</sup> It has been held by the High Court of Madras that this rule is a self-contained one applicable to all cases where a party has been ordered to attend for his examination under this rule and that where a judgment is pronounced against a party for failure to attend as directed, the order must be taken to have been made only under this rule, and not under the provisions of O. 9, even though the Court purported to pass the order under those provisions.<sup>3</sup> On the other hand, the High Court of Allahabad has held that where the party directed to appear and his pleader are both absent on the day appointed, the Court dismissing the suit must be taken to have acted only under the provisions of Order 9, even though it purported to act under this rule.<sup>4</sup> The reason given is that where the party and his pleader are both absent it could not be said that the party failed to attend without lawful excuse, and unless it could be said so, the Court cannot act under this rule.<sup>5</sup>

A person exempted under the Code from appearance in Court has a lawful excuse for not appearing in Court as directed.<sup>6</sup>

The Court is not bound to pass a decree against the defaulting party but may pass any order in relation to the suit as it deems fit.<sup>7</sup>

In a suit for rent, defendant pleaded discharge but was prepared to withdraw the plea if the plaintiff would himself depose that there was no discharge. The Court ordered her appearance under this rule. It was held that the proper procedure would

5. Effect of dismissal under this Rule.—A dismissal of a suit under this rule operates as res judicata in the subsequent suit on the same subject-matter.<sup>1</sup> A dismissal of a suit for redemption under this rule does not, however, according to the High Court of Bombay, bar a subsequent suit for redemption of the same mortgage inasmuch as the relationship of the mortgagor and the mortgagee continues and is not extinguished by the fact of the dismissal of the suit.<sup>2</sup> As to whether and when a decision in a suit for redemption bars a subsequent suit for redemption generally, see Section 11, Note 40.

6. Appeal.—Under the old Code there was a conflict of views with regard to the appealability of the order under paragraph 1 of Section 120 of the old Code which corresponded to sub-rule (1) of this rule.<sup>1</sup>

Under the present Code an appeal lies from an order pronouncing judgment under sub-rule (2) of this rule: vide O. 43 R. 1, clause (a).

But an order striking off the defence of one of the defendants for his failure to appear in person when ultimately the Court passed a final order decreeing the suit against all the defendants, is not open to appeal.<sup>2</sup>

Other Topics (miscellaneous)

Interrogatories as to foreign law. See Note 8.      Points on which interrogatories may be allowed.
Object of interrogatories. See Note 2.                      See Notes 2, 3 and 7.

1. Discovery and inspection—General.—After the issues have been framed and the suit is posted for trial, each party naturally begins to ask himself how he shall prove his case. For the purpose of maintaining his own case or for destroying the case of the adversary he may require information from the latter as to facts, or as to documents in the possession or power of such adversary relevant to the issue. Where information is wanted as to facts, the party is allowed to administer to his adversary a string of questions to be answered by him. The questions are called "interrogatories." The Judge goes through the proposed questions first to see if they are proper at that stage of the proceedings and if they are, compels the other party to answer them on oath before trial. This is called discovery of facts by the adversary. If the party wants information from his adversary as to documents material to the issues, he may apply for an order compelling the other party to make a list of all documents which are in his possession or power, and, in certain circumstances, to permit him to inspect and take copies of those documents before the trial. This disclosure is known as discovery of documents. Discovery of facts and documents often tends to save expense and shorten litigation.

2. Scope of the Rule as to interrogatories. — The main object of interrogatories is to save expense by enabling a party to obtain from his opponent information as to facts material to the questions in dispute between them, and to obtain admissions of any facts which he has to prove on any issue which is raised between them.<sup>1</sup> As a general rule, interrogatories will be allowed whenever the answers to them will serve either to maintain the case of the party administering them or to destroy the case of the adversary.<sup>2</sup> An admission of the adversary will serve to maintain the case of the party administering the interrogatory, or the answer might be destructive of his own case. But can an interrogatory be allowed which is merely intended to ascertain the nature of the opponent's case for the purpose of meeting such case beforehand? In the undermentioned cases under the old Code<sup>3</sup> it was held that it cannot. The reason given was that, where the pleadings were vague and case of the parties not clear, there were other provisions of the Code such as O. 8 R. 7 and O. 14 Rr. 1 and 2 under which the Court could clear up the position and that it was not therefore permissible for the opposite party to obtain such information by discovery. Under the present Code, however, it has been held that in view of the fact that the present Order is now the same as Order 31 of the Rules of the Supreme Court, interrogatories can be administered in the same manner as is done in England, even for discovering the nature of the opponent's case.<sup>4</sup>

3. Interrogatories and pleadings. — From what has been said before, it is clear that interrogatories as to the truth or untruth of statements of facts made in the pleadings are admissible.<sup>1</sup> A party is entitled to interrogate his opponent with a view to ascertain what case he has to meet and the facts relied on, and to limit the generality of the pleadings and find out what is really in issue.<sup>2</sup> But the interrogatories are not like pleadings, confined to the material facts on which the parties intend to rely. Either party may interrogate as to any link in the chain of evidence necessary to support his own case, inasmuch as the question is relevant as leading up to a matter in question in the suit.<sup>3</sup> Thus, if a defendant denies that he wrote a material document, he may be asked if other documents produced to him are not in his handwriting, though such documents have nothing to do with the suit but will be used for comparison of handwriting.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, a defendant is entitled to ask the plaintiff in a suit on a hundi which the defendant denies, to state in what form the consideration for the hundi was paid, the particulars of the place where the defendants drew or accepted the hundi and where and by whom the hundi was presented for payment.<sup>5</sup> But, where in a suit on a promissory note, the defendant pleads want of consideration, the onus of proof lies on him and he cannot escape from the onus of proof without laying any evidentiary basis, by seeking to get admissions from the plaintiff by interrogatories.<sup>6</sup>

4. Interrogatories and cross-examination. — Interrogatories can be allowed only where they relate to any matters in question in the suit. Interrogatories, therefore, which are really in the nature of cross-examination, such as questions put only to test the credibility of the party interrogated, will not be allowed.<sup>1</sup>

5. Interrogatories must be as to relevant facts. — Interrogatories must be confined to facts which are relevant to the matters in question in the suit. They are not confined to facts directly in issue.<sup>1</sup> Where, however, the issue was on what terms the defendant and A had purchased certain properties, interrogatories as to the terms on which they had purchased other properties are irrelevant and will not be allowed.<sup>2</sup> Similarly, in a suit seeking to charge defendants as agents, where the existence of the agency is the real issue, interrogatories as to private transactions are irrelevant.<sup>3</sup> So also the procedure of delivering interrogatories in order to prove the contents of documents which have been held inadmissible in evidence is entirely misconceived.<sup>4</sup>

Notes 5-9

6. Interrogatories as to evidence or witnesses. — "The purpose of interrogatories is not to enable a litigant to come into Court knowing how his opponent is going to prove his case. He is not entitled to ask what his opponent's evidence is going to be."<sup>1</sup> Interrogatories, therefore, as to the evidence which a party intends to adduce in support of his case, or the contents of his brief or as to the names of his witnesses are not permissible.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where in a suit for damages, the defendant wanted the plaintiff to "state how your estimate of damages to the amount of Rs. 13,000 mentioned in the 8th paragraph of the plaint is arrived at," it was held that the plaintiff was not bound to answer it.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, questions as to the names of the persons in whose presence this or that event took place will not be allowed.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that the allowing of such questions would enable the other party to tamper with the witnesses or to manufacture evidence in contradiction and so shape the case as to defeat justice.<sup>5</sup>

7. Names of persons. — As has been seen in the previous Note, questions as to the names of the persons in whose presence an event has taken place will not generally be allowed, but where the name and address of a person is a material fact, it must be disclosed, although the party may thereby have to disclose the names of his witnesses.<sup>1</sup> Thus, in actions for the infringement of trade-marks or patents, the defendant is entitled to discovery of the names of "diverse persons" alleged in the plaint to have been induced to purchase the defendant's goods as the plaintiff's.<sup>2</sup> But in an action for damages arising from the bite of a dog, the Court refused to allow interrogatories to be put to the plaintiff as to persons alleged to have been previously bitten.<sup>3</sup>

Interrogatories with a view to ascertain whether some person other than the defendant is liable, will not be allowed.<sup>4</sup>

8. Interrogatories on questions of law. — Interrogatories must be as to questions of fact and must not ask for conclusions of law, inferences of facts, or construction of documents.<sup>1</sup> A question relating to foreign law will not be allowed unless the party ordered to answer is an expert in that law.<sup>2</sup>

9. Time for the delivery of interrogatories. — Interrogatories will not, as a general rule, be allowed until after the defence is filed as, until then, it is not known what are the matters in dispute.<sup>1</sup> In the Chancery Division of the High Court of England a plaintiff was formerly often allowed to deliver interrogatories with his statement of claim.<sup>2</sup> This is, however, not the practice now.

10. Against whom interrogatories may be allowed. — The general rule is that the right to deliver and the liability to answer interrogatories are confined to the parties to the suit.<sup>1</sup> But a person, who is not actually a party, if in substance a party, may be asked to answer interrogatories. Thus, in a suit by an agent, an order may be obtained against the principal who is the real plaintiff provided the agent has no individual interest of his own in the suit.<sup>2</sup> A stranger to the suit, however, cannot be compelled to answer an interrogatory.<sup>3</sup> Thus, no interrogatories can be administered to a witness.<sup>4</sup> As to the procedure where a party is a corporation, see Rule 5, infra.

11. Opposite parties — A minor or lunatic. — The words "opposite parties" mean parties between whom there is some right to be adjusted in the action or proceeding.<sup>1</sup> Thus, a defendant may deliver interrogatories to another co-defendant if there is some question or issue between them.<sup>2</sup>

Similarly, where A and B are co-defendants in a suit but B colludes with the plaintiff, he may be regarded as a "party opposite" to A and the latter can, therefore, deliver interrogatories to B.<sup>3</sup> But B cannot in such a case be regarded as a party opposite to the plaintiff though he is a defendant; the plaintiff cannot, therefore, deliver interrogatories to B.<sup>4</sup> No interrogatories can be served on an ex parte defendant.<sup>5</sup>

Where a party to a suit is a minor or lunatic, interrogatories may be served on his next friend or guardian ad litem as the case may be. See Rule 23 infra.

12. Leave of Court. — This rule contemplates: (1) leave to interrogate, and (2) the service of the interrogatories through the Court. It is the duty of the Court to determine whether the applicant should be allowed to interrogate the other side, but not to determine at that stage what questions the party interrogated should be compelled to answer. An application for leave should be made like other applications, and the order should be "that the applicant be at liberty to interrogate."<sup>1</sup> An order granting leave to deliver interrogatories is not an order to answer interrogatories, that is, an order requiring the other party to answer them; that party may have good grounds for refusing to answer them or some of them.<sup>2</sup> He has a right to come into Court and ask that the order be re-considered, and, if found to have been wrong, set aside. If the interrogatories are scandalous, or in any way an abuse of the process of the Court, the Court may interfere at any stage. In other cases, the party might omit to answer the interrogatories to which he objects at his peril, or he may file his affidavit in answer, stating in it his objections to answer such questions as he objects to; and in such a case an interrogating party, if dissatisfied, can apply under Rule 11, infra.<sup>3</sup>

14. Probate proceedings. — This Order applies to probate proceedings by virtue of Section 266 of the Succession Act, XXXIX of 1925. The Judge can direct an executor on delivery of interrogatories to make a full discovery of the assets of the deceased. Strictest relevancy may not be required and the Judge has got power to exclude anything which is offensive or improper.<sup>1</sup>

15. Land acquisition and other proceedings. — This Order applies to proceedings under the Land Acquisition Act, I of 1894, by virtue of Section 53 of that Act<sup>1</sup> and to enquiries into election matters by commissioners under the Indian Elections Offences and Inquiries Act, XXXIX of 1920 (Section 5). Some of the rules of this Order have been excluded from application to proceedings under the undermentioned Local Acts.<sup>2</sup>

R. 2. [New.] On an application for leave to deliver interrogatories, the particular interrogatories proposed to be delivered shall be submitted to the Court. In deciding upon such application, the Court shall take into account any offer, which may be made by the party sought to be interrogated to deliver particulars, or to make admissions, or to produce documents relating to the matters in question, or any of them, and leave shall be given as to such only of the interrogatories submitted as the Court shall consider necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs.

1. "As the Court shall consider necessary." — The Court under this rule has no power to settle the interrogatories but to state merely what interrogatories should be administered.<sup>1</sup>

The practice in England is that it is obligatory to draw up the proposed interrogatories and to deliver a copy of them to the opposite party with notice. It is necessary also to give a copy for the Master to consider and initial. The Judge or the Master has a discretion to allow or refuse leave to interrogate,<sup>2</sup> and the Master's discretion will not be interfered with unless he acts on a wrong principle.<sup>3</sup> He will also consider any offer to deliver particulars or to make admissions or produce documents that may be made. If he decides to allow interrogatories at all, the Master will consider the particular interrogatories sought to be delivered and will hear arguments on both sides for and against allowing any particular question. Leave should be given as to such only of the interrogatories as the Court considers necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs. Interrogatories as to the contents of documents cannot be said to be necessary either for disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs.<sup>4</sup> The reason is that, under the Evidence Act, the contents of a document may not, except when secondary evidence is admissible, be proved by oral evidence. In running down cases, interrogatories relating to the details of the accident are not ordinarily necessary and will not be allowed except under special circumstances for the purpose of disposing fairly of the suit or for saving costs.<sup>5</sup> The opposite party need not be served personally;<sup>6</sup> it is sufficient if his solicitor is served.<sup>7</sup>

The grant of leave to one party to deliver interrogatories to another does not, as has been seen in Note 12 to Rule 1 ante, amount to an order requiring the other party to answer them. It is not a decision which has to be obeyed. The party may have good grounds of objections under Rule 6.<sup>8</sup>

An order disallowing interrogatories is not a decree and is not open to appeal. The Judicial Commissioner's Court of Nagpur has held that it is a "case decided" and is open to revision, provided the conditions of Section 115 are satisfied.<sup>9</sup> According to the Judicial Commissioner's Court of Sind the order is not revisable inasmuch as the party adversely affected has another remedy by way of appeal from the final decision of the Court.<sup>10</sup>

The Court has power to order under the corresponding English rule that costs of a viva voce examination under R. 11 be paid by the party examined in any event,<sup>1</sup> but the costs of an oppressive viva voce examination may be ordered to be paid by the party delivering the interrogatory.<sup>2</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule enables the party interrogated to file his objections, and indicate the grounds of objection which he might take.<sup>1</sup> The party taking such objection is entitled to have it adjudicated upon by the Court and a clear and specific order passed directing him to answer such of the interrogatories as the Court holds to be relevant. The mere fact that he could apply under Rule 7 to have the interrogatories set aside or struck out does not take away his right to have his objection adjudicated upon.<sup>2</sup>

2. Scandalous interrogatories. — Questions irrelevant to the matters in issue and taken for the purpose of abusing, insulting or degrading the opposite party are scandalous interrogatories and are not permissible. But nothing can be scandalous which is relevant<sup>1</sup> even though tending to criminate the person interrogated.<sup>2</sup>

Notes 2-6

3. Irrelevant interrogatories. — As a general rule, the question taken must be relevant to the matter in issue,<sup>1</sup> though it need not be confined to the facts in issue.<sup>2</sup> Thus, interrogatories asking plaintiff whether similar charges as that made in the suit had not been made against him previously in a newspaper, and whether he had contradicted them or taken any notice of them on that occasion, are clearly irrelevant.<sup>3</sup> Similarly, in a suit by A for a declaration that he and the defendant purchased a certain land as co-partners, interrogatories relating to the arrangements under which other purchases had been made by them together are irrelevant.<sup>4</sup> In no case will interrogatories be allowed if the defence at which they aim would be no defence in law to the suit.<sup>5</sup>

4. Not exhibited bona fide. — Where the questions, though relevant, are not put bona fide for the purposes of the present action but for other and ulterior objects, e. g., in view of a future litigation, they will be disallowed by the Court.<sup>1</sup>

5. "Not sufficiently material at that stage." — The word "material" means more than relevant. A fact may be relevant but not material at a particular stage.<sup>1</sup> The question of materiality must be tested by reference to the case made by the pleadings and to what will be in issue at the hearing. Generally, "the Court is unwilling before the right to relief is established to make an order for discovery which may be injurious to the defendant and will only be useful to the plaintiff if he succeeds in establishing his title to relief."<sup>2</sup> Similarly, the Court is not justified in ordering a plaintiff to answer interrogatories which are in the nature of eliciting evidence, before the defendant has filed his written statement.<sup>3</sup> Compare Rule 20, which makes a provision for the postponement of discovery till after determination of issue or question. Nevertheless the Court has a discretion to order discovery at once on other grounds.<sup>4</sup>

6. "Any other ground." — These words mean grounds ejusdem generis with those specified.<sup>1</sup> They will include the following grounds —

- (a) that the questions are criminatory ;
- (b) that they relate to privileged communications between the party and his legal advisers ;

O. 11 R. 6
Notes 6-9

- (c) that they relate to a party's evidence, and
 (d) that they are injurious to public interests.

In general, questions excluded by Sections 121 to 129 of the Evidence Act and which could not be asked if the party were in the witness-box cannot also be taken as interrogatories.<sup>2</sup> Questions relating to communications made for the purpose of litigation between third persons and the legal adviser of a party or between third persons and the party for the purpose of submission to the adviser,<sup>3</sup> or questions offending against a rule of public policy may also be objected to.<sup>4</sup> Similarly, it is open to an assessee of income-tax to object to answering interrogatories on statements made by him in income-tax proceedings on the ground that they are privileged.<sup>5</sup> But even if no objection is taken by the party it is the duty of the Court to consider whether a rule of public policy does not prevent the disclosure of the documents or of the information sought.<sup>6</sup>

7. Fishing interrogatories. — The questions asked must not be "fishing," that is to say, they must refer to some definite and existing state of circumstances and must not be put merely in the hope of discovering some flaw in the opponent's case<sup>1</sup> or with the object of filling up blanks in the interrogator's own pleadings.<sup>2</sup> Thus, where the plaintiff was charged with having used certain blasphemous words, interrogatories tending to show that, if he did not use those words on the particular occasion, still he had on other occasions said something very much like it, are merely "fishing" interrogatories and will be disallowed.<sup>3</sup>

8. Wagering contracts. — In cases where the defence of wagering is set up, the Court will refuse to allow the party setting up this defence to interrogate his opponent generally as to his business transactions apart from the particular transactions in the suit; the reason is that it will be "manifestly unfair to compel a man to disclose his general dealings on the chance that thereby his opponent may discover something that will support his case."<sup>1</sup>

9. Defamation. — Where, in a plaint in an action for slander, publication to one named person and also to various other persons unnamed is alleged, it is not permissible to ask the defendant whether he spoke the words complained of to any person or persons other than the person named and the names of other persons if any. Such an interrogatory is a fishing interrogatory the object of which is to find out some cause of action or defence other than that specifically alleged.<sup>1</sup> So also the defendant in a libel case will not, as a rule, be allowed before he has given particulars to interrogate or get discovery for the purpose of finding out whether he has a defence or not.<sup>2</sup>

R. 7. [New.] Any interrogatories may be set aside on O. 11 R. 7

Setting aside and striking out interrogatories. the ground that they have been exhibited unreasonably or vexatiously, or struck out on the ground that they are prolix, oppressive, unnecessary or scandalous; and any application for this purpose may be made within seven days after service of the interrogatories.

[R. S. C., O. 31 R. 7. (Annulled in 1917).]

1. Setting aside or striking out interrogatories. — Interrogatories must not be oppressive or exceed the legitimate requirements of the particular occasion.<sup>1</sup> Thus, interrogatories as to profits requiring a search through business books of several years when it is absolutely irrelevant in a suit for a declaration,<sup>2</sup> or as to an innuendo and the names of all the persons to whom the libel had been published in a libel action,<sup>3</sup> or as to a secret manufacturing process, have all been held to be vexatious and oppressive.<sup>4</sup> The mere irrelevancy of the interrogatory is no ground for setting aside the interrogatory under this rule. The party has to proceed under Rule 6.

R. 8. [S. 126.] Interrogatories shall be answered by O. 11 R. 8

Affidavit in answer, filing. affidavit to be filed within ten days, or within such other time as the Court may allow.

1. Matters within the knowledge of party's agent or servant. — The party interrogated cannot escape giving an answer by saying that he has no personal knowledge as to matters inquired into.<sup>1</sup> He is bound to obtain the information from his agents or servants, if such knowledge has been acquired by them in the ordinary course of their employment. He can, however, show that it would be unreasonable to require him to do so in any particular case, as for instance, where either his agents or servants have left his employment or where it would occasion unreasonable expense or an unreasonable amount of delay or the like to get such information.<sup>2</sup> A party's banker or solicitor is his agent within the meaning of this rule.<sup>3</sup> As has been seen in the Notes to Rule 5 ante, a party need not disclose matters that have come to the knowledge of his agents or servants otherwise than in the ordinary course of their employment.<sup>4</sup>

Synopsis

1. Scope of the Rule.

2. "Answers insufficiently."

3. Further answer may be declined on the ground of privilege.

4. Viva voce examination.

1. Scope of the Rule. — It is only under this rule that the Court is to decide whether the party interrogated must answer or not and to pass an order requiring him to answer or to answer further, as the case may be, the interrogatories delivered to him.<sup>1</sup> In the absence of such an order under this rule, no action can be taken against the defaulting party under Rule 21.<sup>2</sup>

2. ('26) AIR 1926 All 553 (553).

The application for further answer to interrogatories ought to specify the interrogatories or parts of interrogatories to which further answers are required.<sup>3</sup> When the answers to all interrogatories are properly objected to, a further answer in respect of all of them can be asked for.<sup>4</sup>

2. "Answers insufficiently."—The general rule is that the person answering must answer sufficiently. Sufficiency and not the truth of the answer is the point to be considered at this stage.<sup>1</sup> The answer must be confined to answering the question put. Any necessary or reasonable explanation or qualification without which the answer would be unfair or incomplete or misleading may be added.<sup>2</sup> Thus, if a party is asked whether he did not make a particular affidavit, he may answer that he did, but that he has since found out that it was inaccurate.<sup>3</sup> But the addition of an irrelevant or otherwise objectionable matter may make the answer embarrassing and prevent the party who asks for it from using it without having thrust upon him irrelevant matters as part of it; the answer in such a case will be considered insufficient and a further answer will be ordered.<sup>4</sup>

3. Further answer may be declined on the ground of privilege.—The privilege on the ground of which further answer may be declined, must be one which can be properly claimed in law; the Court will not require further answer to be put in unless it is clearly satisfied either from the nature of the subject-matter for which privilege is claimed or from statements in the answer itself or in documents so referred to as to become part of the answer, that the claim for privilege cannot possibly be substantiated. The mere existence of reasonable suspicion which is sufficient to justify the Court in requiring a further affidavit of documents is not enough in the case of a claim for privilege.<sup>1</sup> See also the undermentioned case.<sup>2</sup>

4. Viva voce examination.—An order may be made requiring the party to further answer the interrogatories by viva voce examination. This procedure is, however, adopted only in exceptional cases.<sup>1</sup> A roving examination should not be allowed in such viva voce examination.<sup>2</sup>

R. 12. [S. 129, para. 1.] Any party<sup>14</sup> may, without filing any affidavit,<sup>2</sup> apply to the Court for an order directing any other party<sup>13</sup> to any suit to make discovery on oath of the documents which are or have been in his possession<sup>11</sup> or power, relating to any matter in question<sup>11</sup> therein. On the hearing of such application the Court may either refuse<sup>1</sup> or adjourn the same,<sup>2</sup> if satisfied that such

1. Scope of the Rules. — These rules deal with the second branch of discovery, viz., the discovery of documents. They enable a party to apply to the Court for the purpose of compelling his opponent to disclose the documents he has in his possession or power,<sup>1</sup> and the object of this procedure is two-fold : (1) to secure as far as possible that all material documents are disclosed by putting the opposite party on oath as to the documents in his possession or power with the consequent penalties attaching to a false oath, and (2) to put an end to what might otherwise lead to a protracted inquiry as to the material documents actually in the possession or under the control of the opposite party.<sup>2</sup>

The right to have the existence of a document disclosed in the affidavit of documents under these rules does not necessarily involve any right to have it produced for inspection; nor is a protection from production for inspection a sufficient reason for not disclosing its existence. The rule does not alter the principles relating to the production of documents but gives the Court a discretion to refuse the discovery of documents when there is no reasonable prospect of its being of any use,<sup>3</sup> or to limit the nature and extent of the discovery.<sup>4</sup>

These rules do not preclude an application under Rule 18, sub-rule 2.<sup>5</sup>

2. Application for discovery of documents may be made without affidavit. — An application under Rule 12 need not be supported by an affidavit as is generally required in the case of other applications.<sup>1</sup> The Court has power either to refuse or adjourn the application and, in exercising its discretion, it is guided by the pleadings and the nature of the action. The party who applies must, where there is contest, show that he has a good cause of action and that the documents are relevant to the case.<sup>2</sup>

3. Grounds of objection to discover documents. — A party against whom an order for discovery of documents has been made by the Court cannot object to specify the existence of the documents.<sup>1</sup> He is also, as a general rule, bound to produce every document in his possession or power which is material or relevant to the suit, unless it is covered by some established privilege.<sup>2</sup> The fact that a document was written on a privileged occasion, in the special sense in which that term is used in actions of defamation, is no reason for refusing to produce it : it is not, on that ground, privileged from inspection.<sup>3</sup> But there are several classes of documents which have been recognized as being privileged from production. These may be dealt with in the following order —

- (1) Documents protected by professional or legal privilege.
- (2) Documents relating solely to the case of the party giving discovery.
- (3) Documents not in the sole possession of the party giving discovery.
- (4) Documents in the possession of a party only as agent or on behalf of another.

(5) Documents tending to criminate or expose to forfeiture.

(6) Documents protected on the ground of public policy.

4. Professional or legal privilege. — A communication between parties and their legal advisers has always been protected from disclosure even at the risk of the possibility of truth being concealed thereby.<sup>1</sup> The object of the rule is to enable persons to obtain legal advice safely and effectually.<sup>2</sup> A party is thus not bound to produce any confidential communication between him and his legal advisers.<sup>3</sup> It is necessary, however, to distinguish between documents and communications that are privileged irrespective of whether litigation was contemplated or was pending and those that are privileged only where litigation was contemplated or was pending at the time when they came into existence. The first class of cases will cover the following documents —

(1) Letters and communications passing between a party or his predecessors-in-title, and his or their legal advisers provided they are confidential and written to, or by the solicitor or legal adviser in his professional capacity for the purpose of getting legal advice or assistance.<sup>4</sup> If the communications are not made confidentially there is no privilege.<sup>5</sup>

(2) Such letters and communications made through a clerk or agent employed by the legal adviser or the client for the purpose of conveying information to or from the legal advisers.<sup>6</sup>

(3) Letters and communications between a solicitor and his partner or professional agent<sup>7</sup> but not between solicitors for opposite parties.<sup>8</sup>

(4) Instructions and briefs to counsel and counsel's briefs and notes.<sup>9</sup>

The second class of documents will cover the following —

(1) Communications between a solicitor and a non-professional agent or a third party, directly or through an agent and made with a view to pending or contemplated litigation and for the purpose of getting or giving advice or for obtaining or collecting evidence.<sup>10</sup>

(2) Communications between the client and a non-professional agent or third party, which are made in answer to inquiries made by the party as the agent for or at the request or suggestion of his solicitor, or without any such request, but for the purpose of being laid before the legal adviser for the purpose of advice in respect of a pending or contemplated litigation.<sup>11</sup> But a mere communication between a principal and agent, though confidential, is not privileged<sup>12</sup> even after litigation has commenced and legal advice has been taken as to its course.<sup>13</sup> Similarly, the reports made by a servant to his master are not privileged though they may relate to the subject-matter of the suit.<sup>14</sup>

(3) The correspondence between co-defendants after the institution of a suit is not, as a general rule, privileged from production; but where one of the co-defendants is agent or solicitor for the other co-defendant, the communications between them are privileged.<sup>15</sup> Where one of the trustees of a will is a solicitor and acts as a solicitor for the trustees, communications between him and his co-trustees, which would be privileged if he were not a co-trustee, are privileged.<sup>16</sup>

No privilege attaches to communications between a client and his legal adviser made in furtherance of a fraudulent or illegal purpose which is definitely alleged in the pleadings or in the affidavits.<sup>17</sup> The privilege is confined to legal advice and does not extend to communications between a party and his medical<sup>18</sup> or spiritual<sup>19</sup> adviser or non-professional friend or adviser.<sup>20</sup> See Sections 126 to 129 of the Evidence Act.

5. Documents relating solely to the case of the party giving discovery.

—A party will not be compelled to produce for inspection documents which he swears, relate to his own case, and do not relate to or tend to support the case of his opponent, and do not impeach his own case.<sup>1</sup> Thus, he need not produce any document which he can swear, relates solely to his own title to any real property and to contain nothing which tends to establish the title of his opponent.<sup>2</sup>

Documents disclosing party's evidence.—A party cannot be compelled to produce documents which form the exclusive evidence of his own case or title.<sup>3</sup> But they must not, in any way, tend to prove or support the adversary's title;<sup>4</sup> if they are necessary to support the adversary's case<sup>5</sup> or may be evidence for the adversary as well,<sup>6</sup> their production cannot be refused. In order to claim this privilege, the party may state in his affidavit that the document constitutes evidence of his own case or title, that they contain nothing supporting or tending to support the adversary's case or title and that they contain nothing impeaching his own case or title.<sup>7</sup> But a party is not confined to the affidavit in which the claim is first set up; he is entitled to put in and use a further affidavit in support of his claim of privilege.<sup>8</sup>

Opinions upon, or steps taken in reference to, a suit in which the plaintiff and defendant are putting forward opposing contentions cannot be said to relate solely to the case of the plaintiffs.<sup>9</sup>

6. Documents not in the sole possession of the party. — The rule of the Court of Chancery in England is thus laid down by Lord Cottenham in Taylor v. Rundell<sup>1</sup>:

"If a defendant has a joint possession of a document with somebody else who is not before the Court, the Court will not order him to produce it and this, for two reasons: the one is that a party will not be ordered to do that which he cannot or may not be able to do, the other is that another party not present has an interest in the document which the Court cannot deal with."

Thus, it was held that a partner or his agent cannot be asked to produce documents belonging to partnership where the other partners are not before the Court.<sup>2</sup> But in a similar case in the High Court of Bombay,<sup>3</sup> Sir Charles Sargent, C. J., held that the case before him did not fall within either of the reasons mentioned above, that the defendants (partners), physically speaking, could produce the document and that legally speaking, they represented the other partners for the purpose of production of documents as there was no other person having an interest distinct from their own interest.

For the purpose of the disclosure of the existence of documents, "possession" includes possession by an agent of the party giving the discovery.<sup>4</sup>

7. Documents held in possession as agent of third party. — No party can be compelled to produce documents of which he is not the owner but of which he has the custody as the agent of a third party who is not a party to the action, as where the documents are in the possession of a party as a trustee or as a mortgagee regarding title-deeds of mortgagor, etc.<sup>1</sup>

8. Documents incriminating party. — It is a good ground of privilege that the document, if produced, would tend to criminate the party producing them. But this objection does not apply to the discovery of the documents.<sup>1</sup>

See, however, Section 132 of the Evidence Act.

9. Where production of public official document is injurious to public interests. — Public official documents need not be produced when an objection is taken in the affidavit of documents by the head of the department or by some responsible officer;<sup>1</sup> the mere fact that the documents are official or confidential is not enough to protect them; in case of doubt the Judge may, in his discretion, adjourn

10. Court may inspect a privileged document. — Where privilege is claimed by a party, the Court may inspect the document to decide whether the privilege claimed is proper and valid.<sup>1</sup> See Rule 19, sub-rule (2).

11. Contents of affidavit of documents. — A party who is ordered under Rule 12 to make discovery on oath should set forth in his affidavit all documents which are or have been in his possession or power relating to the matter in question.<sup>1</sup> A document may be described as a writing or printing capable of being read, no matter what the material is upon which it is impressed or inscribed.<sup>2</sup> The expression "matter in question" means a question or issue in dispute in the action, and not the thing about which question or issue arises; thus, in an action to recover possession of land, it means the plaintiff's alleged title and not the land.<sup>3</sup> Every document which will throw any light on the case is a document relating to a matter in dispute in the suit.<sup>4</sup> It is not confined to such as would be admissible in evidence<sup>5</sup> but includes all documents containing information which may either directly or indirectly enable the party seeking discovery, either to advance his own case or damage that of his adversary, or which may fairly lead him to a train of inquiry which may have either of these two consequences.<sup>6</sup> Every such document must be included in the affidavit of documents even if the party is in possession thereof jointly with others or even if he has therein no property at all, provided they are in his corporeal possession. As regards documents which are not, but had been in the party's possession, he must state what has become of them. It is always desirable to adopt the form given in the Code as otherwise an affidavit may be regarded as insufficient.<sup>7</sup> When the affidavit is insufficient, a summons may be taken to consider its sufficiency.<sup>8</sup>

Ordinarily, an affidavit of documents must be made by the party himself; but the Court may in special cases allow the affidavit to be made by the agent of the party.<sup>9</sup> Where there are several plaintiffs all of them must ordinarily join in the affidavit.<sup>10</sup> It is possible on a proper case being made out that the order may be limited to a particular party.<sup>11</sup> In the case of a pardanashin lady it is doubtful if a verification is necessary.<sup>12</sup> It is the duty of an attorney to be very careful in ascertaining from his client, who has to make an affidavit of documents, exactly what materials and documents are in his possession. It is further his duty the moment he finds that there are other documents which have not been disclosed, at the very earliest moment, to bring those documents to the notice of his opponent and give him an opportunity of inspecting them.<sup>13</sup>

12. Sufficient description of documents. — It is necessary that there should be a sufficient description of documents in the schedule annexed to the affidavit of documents. It is sufficient, however, if the documents are described in such a manner as to enable enforcement of production, if ordered.<sup>1</sup> Where a party claims to withhold documents or letters on the ground of privilege, a less degree of particularity will suffice; it is not necessary to give such description as will enable the opponent to know its contents.<sup>2</sup>

If the documents are not numerous the most advisable course is to set out each of them separately and number them in the margin of the schedule. But if there are numerous documents of the same class or description, it is not necessary to number each of them separately; it will be proper to tie them up in bundles and number the documents or otherwise earmark them in such a way that the other party may ask for those which he wants to inspect.<sup>3</sup>

13. Against whom order for discovery may be made. — As a general rule, discovery is confined to the parties only<sup>1</sup> and does not apply to third parties.<sup>2</sup> The words "any party" and "any other party" in Rule 12 contemplate opposite parties within the meaning of Rule 1.<sup>3</sup> See Note 11 to Rule 1, and Notes 14 to 21 below.

14. Any party. — In a suit brought by a nominal plaintiff, the persons really interested may be ordered to give discovery and the suit may be stayed unless they give such discovery.<sup>1</sup> So also where a principal residing abroad is the real plaintiff, but is suing through his agent, the defendant is entitled to have the action stayed until such discovery is made as the real plaintiff would have been obliged to make, had he been the plaintiff on the record.<sup>2</sup>

15. Benamidar. — Where a person uses the name of another as a nominal plaintiff only for the purpose of bringing an action in which he alone is really interested, the real plaintiff may be called on to give discovery.<sup>1</sup> But the nominal plaintiff also will be liable to make an affidavit of documents.<sup>2</sup>

16. Corporation. — The Court has power to order an officer of a company or corporation to give discovery.<sup>1</sup> A public body cannot burke discovery on the ground that there are a large number of papers, the production of which would flood the Court.<sup>2</sup>

17. Crown. — The Crown has a right of discovery as against a subject but cannot be compelled to give discovery,<sup>1</sup> though as a matter of practice it does give

18. Foreign Prince or State. — A foreign Sovereign or State is also bound to give discovery like any other suitor<sup>1</sup> and the suit will be stayed until a proper person is named to give it.<sup>2</sup>

19. Several defendants and plaintiffs. — See Note 11.

20. Next friend of minor or lunatic. — The next friend of a minor or lunatic may be called upon to file an affidavit of documents : see Rule 23, infra.

21. Advocate-General. — The Advocate-General cannot be called upon to make discovery on oath in a suit filed by him at the instance of relators under Section 92, Civil Procedure Code. But an affidavit of documents may be required from the latter.<sup>1</sup>

22. Official Liquidator. — As an officer of the Court, the Official Liquidator must not ordinarily be compelled to make an affidavit of documents in his possession. The proper course is to apply to him for inspection in the first instance, and on his refusal, to apply to the Court.<sup>1</sup> The same rule would seem to apply to the Official Receivers and Assignees under the Insolvency Acts.

23. Marine insurance. — In actions on policies of marine insurance, the defendant underwriters are entitled to apply for and obtain, as a matter of course, an order for the production of all material documents and papers relating to the insurance, not only from the plaintiff and all persons interested in the proceedings but all other persons who are in possession of such documents or papers.<sup>1</sup> This does not, of course, include the underwriters themselves: but in an action brought by a mortgagee of a ship on a policy of marine insurance a mortgagor who has sailed the ship as the managing owner has been held to be a person who should produce the ship's papers.<sup>2</sup> The practice extends to all actions on policies which are substantially marine policies whether on a ship or cargo.<sup>3</sup>

24. Affidavit of documents, if conclusive — Further affidavit. — The affidavit of documents filed by a party against whom an order for discovery has been passed is conclusive, and must be accepted by the party seeking discovery as true, both with regard to the documents that are, or have been, in the possession or power of the party making discovery,<sup>1</sup> and as to their relevancy,<sup>2</sup> unless there is something like an answer in cross-examination or some other documentary evidence showing conclusively that there are other documents. It is also conclusive as to the grounds stated in support of a claim for privilege from production.<sup>3</sup> The party seeking discovery cannot, for the purpose of obtaining a further affidavit or inspection of documents for which privilege is claimed, adduce evidence or otherwise show that the affidavit of documents is insufficient or untrue.<sup>4</sup> Nor, as a rule, can he interrogate with a view to show that the affidavit is untrue.<sup>5</sup> There are two cases, however, where the affidavit of the document can be controverted —

(1) Where, from the affidavit itself, or from the documents referred to therein, or from admissions made either in pleadings or otherwise, it appears that the party making discovery has or has had other relevant documents in his possession or power.<sup>6</sup>

(2) Where the basis on which the first affidavit has been made turns out to have been wrong; in other words, where the party making the affidavit has misconceived his case so that the Court is practically certain that if he had conceived properly and acted on a correct view of the law he would have disclosed further documents.<sup>7</sup>

In a suit for ejectment the Court will not as a rule go behind the affidavit and where, in such a suit, either party claims to refuse production on the ground that the documents relate solely to his own title and do not in any way tend to prove or support the title of the opposite party, the Court cannot go behind the affidavit and enquire whether his statement is true or not.<sup>8</sup> But in a suit for the recovery of the price of materials supplied to the defendant in which the defence was that the materials were defective, the Court ordered the production of the engineer's report referred to in his pleadings, where his statement showed that the report was not of the character described by the defendant.<sup>9</sup>

25. Effect of non-disclosure of documents. — Where no application is made under this rule, a party is not bound to produce any document. He is entitled to refrain from producing any document which he considers irrelevant and no adverse presumption can be drawn against the party from its non-production<sup>1</sup> except where, from the nature and circumstances of the case, it is the imperative duty on his part to produce them,<sup>2</sup> but where an order is made against a party for discovery and he alleges as to some of the documents that they have been destroyed or may have perished, he is bound to give evidence of diligent search for them. In the absence of such evidence, a presumption that, if produced, they will be unfavourable to that party will arise.<sup>3</sup>

26. Right to seal part of documents. — A party may seal up such portions of the documents produced by him as he swears are privileged. He must, however, specify what parts of the documents referred to he claims to seal up and the grounds upon which the claim is based.<sup>1</sup> The rule is the same with regard to portions of documents which do not relate to the matters in question.<sup>2</sup> The party making discovery has the option either to disclose such portions in his affidavit or to disclose the whole and state that such portion alone is relevant and to seal up the rest.<sup>3</sup> When the right of the party to seal up parts of the document is contested, the Court will appoint an officer to whom the party desiring inspection is to state in confidence why he wants to inspect any portion of the documents sealed, and the officer, after looking at the documents as to whether and in what way the part noted or desired to be noted is material to the case, should make a report for the orders of the Court.<sup>4</sup> The Court can also order the sealed parts to be unfastened for its personal inspection.<sup>5</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — An order for production of documents under this rule is quite different from an order for discovery under Rule 12 or an order for inspection under Rule 18, infra,<sup>1</sup> or for an order for answering interrogatories under Rule 11, ante.<sup>2</sup> A party must set out every document in his possession or power where an order for discovery has been passed against him; but he is not bound to produce them unless an order for production has been passed against him.<sup>3</sup> An order for production can only be made after an order for discovery has been made under Rule 12.<sup>4</sup> The mere production of the documents does not give an immediate and indefeasible right of inspection to the other party.<sup>5</sup> Nor does such document become ipso facto a piece of evidence in the case.<sup>6</sup>

Under this rule the Court acts of its own motion and not on the application of any party.<sup>7</sup> It cannot, however, delegate the exercise of the power under this rule to a commissioner.<sup>8</sup> No order should be made against a party unless he has directly or indirectly admitted the document to be in his possession or power<sup>9</sup> and unless such documents are in existence.<sup>10</sup> The words "at any time during the pendency of the suit" show that an order for production can be made even before the issues are framed.<sup>11</sup>

It was held in the undermentioned case<sup>12</sup> of the Bombay High Court that a Court has no discretion to refuse production unless the documents are privileged. But in a later case of the same High Court<sup>13</sup> it has been held that the Court has a discretion in compelling production of documents even though they are privileged. An order for production must be a written summons on the party for such production and not a mere verbal order.<sup>14</sup> It must not be a general order that all the documents in the defendant's possession should be produced<sup>15</sup> except where the general description is sufficient for the identification of the documents or books sought to be produced.<sup>16</sup>

Where the documents are produced in obedience to the order of the Court, the Court can deal with them in such manner as appears to it to be just.<sup>17</sup>

The power to compel the production of documents has been extended to tribunals acting under various local Acts.<sup>18</sup>

2. "Possession or power." — The words "possession or power," as a general rule, mean exclusive possession.<sup>1</sup> They also mean legal possession,<sup>2</sup> i. e., a right and power to deal with the documents.<sup>3</sup> There is no power to compel a party to produce documents not in his control or possession, or documents the possession of which he has parted with before the date of the application. A person who claims a lien upon a deed has generally the right to refuse production thereof.<sup>4</sup> Where a Collector acts as

No order can therefore be made for the production of documents which are not in the possession of the Collector in his capacity as the agent of the Secretary of State for India in Council in the suit.<sup>5</sup> Documents filed in Court are not in the possession or power of a party; they are in the possession and power of the Court.<sup>6</sup>

3. "Relating to any matter in question in such suit." — The order under this rule is to be limited to such documents alone as relate to the matters in dispute and the Court must, before it makes the order, determine, for the purpose thereof, what are the matters in question in the suit.<sup>1</sup> Every document which will throw any light on the case comes within the meaning of these words.<sup>2</sup> Where, in a suit on a promissory note, the defendant puts in no defence, it is impossible to say whether it is necessary to examine the plaintiff's accounts or not and hence, in such cases, there is no justification for an order directing the plaintiff to produce his accounts.<sup>3</sup> In a suit for accounts, the Court cannot under this rule call upon the defendant to show in detail the income and expenditure of the estate in suit until the decision of the suit. In other words, a Judge cannot invoke the aid of this rule for the purpose of bringing into existence a document which may be useful for the case.<sup>4</sup> Copies of income-tax returns cannot be ordered to be produced under this Section as such returns are confidential documents under Section 54 of the Income-tax Act.<sup>5</sup>

4. Effect of Sections 163 and 164 of the Evidence Act. — These Sections appear in the chapter dealing with the examination of witnesses at the trial of the suit. Under Section 163, when a party calls for a document which he has given the other party notice to produce, and such document is produced and inspected by the former party, he is bound to give it as evidence if the latter party requires him to do so. Under Section 164, when a party refuses to produce a document which he has had notice to produce, he cannot afterwards use the document as evidence without the consent of the other party or the order of the Court. In the undermentioned case<sup>1</sup> the High Court of Madras raised, but did not decide, the question whether Section 163 was applicable to documents produced under the discovery procedure enacted in this rule or whether it only applied to documents produced after the trial had begun.

5. Waiver of privilege. — A party may waive his privilege and produce the documents for which he can claim exemption.<sup>1</sup> Such waiver may be either with reference to the whole document or to a portion thereof.<sup>2</sup> Where a party expressly refers to documents in the pleadings as the source of his own information and knowledge of facts relevant to the suit and then sets up these facts by way of answer to the plaintiff's claim, he cannot afterwards contend that the documents are confidential and intended

1. Scope of the Rule. — Rules 15 to 18 deal with inspection of documents. Documents may, for the purposes of inspection, be divided into two classes —

- (1) Documents referred to in the pleadings or affidavits of the parties.
- (2) Other documents in the possession or power of the party but not so referred to.

As regards the first class of documents a party may, without the intervention of the Court, give notice to the party in whose pleadings they are referred to, to produce such documents for his inspection (Rule 15). The party to whom such notice is given should, within ten days from the receipt of such notice, give notice to the party claiming such inspection stating the time and place at which the documents may be inspected and stating his objections, if any, to the production of any of the documents (Rule 17). If he fails to do so in the manner required by Rule 17, the other party may apply to the Court for an order for such inspection [Rule 18, sub-rule (1)], and the Court should grant such inspection unless the documents are privileged in law or relate exclusively to the case of the party producing them and contain nothing supporting or tending to support the opponent's case.<sup>1</sup>

As regards the second class of documents the party desiring the inspection can only proceed by way of an application to the Court along with an affidavit showing the relevancy of the documents.<sup>2</sup>

A Court has no jurisdiction to order inspection of documents except as provided in Rules 15 to 18.<sup>3</sup> The privilege of inspection by a party of his adversary's documents is not a matter of routine but is to be permitted or refused only on judicial considerations and so as to result in as little harm as possible to the parties who are entitled to have the protection of the Court in carrying on their lawful pursuits.<sup>4</sup> The object of the rule is to give the opposite party the same advantage as if the documents had been fully set out in the pleadings.<sup>5</sup>

By referring to a document in his pleadings, a party does not lose the privilege that he might have claimed in respect of the document. The only result of such reference is that, if the party referring to it fails to produce it for inspection to the other side on notice, he cannot use it in evidence at the trial. Even in such a case, the Court may, if sufficient cause is shown by the defaulting party, allow the same to be put in evidence on such terms as to costs and otherwise as the Court shall think fit.<sup>6</sup> Where documents are objected to on the ground of immateriality the Court will, if necessary, order them to be produced for its own inspection in order to judge of their materiality.<sup>7</sup> A party who fails to comply with a notice under this rule is not absolved from the penalty prescribed thereby merely because the party giving the notice has not proceeded to apply to the Court for an order for inspection under Rule 18 infra.<sup>8</sup>

The fact that the accounts referred to by the plaintiff in his plaint would be required by him every day is no reason for not giving inspection of the same to the defendant.<sup>9</sup> Such a case is clearly provided for in Rule 17 infra.

2. "At any time." — Where a document is referred to in the pleadings or affidavits of a party, the opposite party is entitled as of right to claim inspection thereof<sup>1</sup> even before the filing of the written statement.<sup>2</sup> But no inspection will, as a general rule, be ordered of documents other than those referred to in the pleadings or affidavits, till after the written statement is filed.<sup>3</sup>

Whether the defendant desires to inspect the documents referred to in the pleadings or he desires to inspect other documents, he should proceed promptly, and delay on his part to take the necessary steps for such inspection may itself be a good ground for refusing to allow him time to file the written statement.<sup>4</sup>

3. Documents referred to in the pleadings or affidavits. — Pleadings include particulars<sup>1</sup> and affidavits will include an affidavit of documents,<sup>2</sup> affidavits of answers to interrogatories<sup>3</sup> and exhibits forming part of the affidavit<sup>4</sup> as also an affidavit intended to be filed but not filed and of which a copy has been given to the other side.<sup>5</sup>

The documents need not have been identified or particularly described in such pleadings or affidavits; it is enough if they have been referred to generally.<sup>6</sup> But a party is not entitled to inspect the documents incidentally referred to in the pleadings of the opposite party if they are not material for the case of either party.<sup>7</sup> There is a difference of opinion as to whether a document referred to in the plaint in the list attached thereto under the provisions of O. 7 R. 14, sub-rule (2) is one that can be said to be referred to in the pleadings. It has been held by the High Courts of Bombay<sup>8</sup> and Madras<sup>9</sup> following the English case of Quilter v. Heatley<sup>10</sup> that such a document is one referred to in the pleadings. The High Courts of Calcutta<sup>11</sup> and Nagpur<sup>12</sup> have, on the other hand, held that the list annexed to the plaint is not part of the plaint itself and consequently documents referred to in such list cannot be said to be referred to in the pleadings.

Where entries in a book are referred to in the pleadings, inspection will be limited to those entries.<sup>13</sup> The rule does not apply to copies of documents referred to though they may be in the possession of the party.<sup>14</sup> Where the plaintiff has made an affidavit of documents at the instance of one defendant and another defendant desires to inspect them, he is entitled to do this, subject to the right of the plaintiff to seal up such portions of the documents as do not relate to the matters in issue or to the case of the

5. Copies of documents produced, if can be taken. — The right to inspection includes a right to take copies of documents produced,<sup>1</sup> unless they relate exclusively to the case of the party producing them and contain nothing to support his adversary's case.<sup>2</sup> The right to take copies is confined to all relevant and unprivileged documents.<sup>3</sup> In a proper case, the Court will order photographs to be taken.<sup>4</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule.
2. "Usual place of custody."
3. Bankers' books. See Order 7 Rule 17 and Rule 18 of this Order.

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule only comes into operation after a notice under Rule 15 has been given. It applies to all documents mentioned in Rule 15.<sup>1</sup> In Dhapi v. Ram Pershad<sup>2</sup> it has been held by the High Court of Calcutta that the correct rule of procedure is that if a party does not desire to produce documents he should refrain from delivering the notice under the rule but wait to see if the plaintiff applies under Rule 18. It has also been held that, when the notice was served at a time when the suit was stayed, the ten days' time begins to run only from the date the suit is revived.

2. "Usual place of custody." — This rule clearly specifies the place of inspection with regard to bankers' books and business books. The words in the old Code "some other convenient place" gave room for discussion and controversy which has now been removed. Where, in a suit instituted in Bombay for breach of a contract to gin cotton in the defendant's mill at Broach, the plaintiff applied for inspection of the defendant's account books in Bombay but the defendant offered to give inspection in Broach, it was held that the latter place was the place where the books were kept and was the proper place for inspection.<sup>1</sup> The Court is not a proper place to offer the inspection of account books.<sup>2</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — Sub-rule 1 of this rule deals with inspection of documents referred to in the pleadings or affidavits of the parties. Sub-rule 2 deals with inspection of documents other than those mentioned in sub-rule 1. The difference between the two cases is that, in the case of documents not mentioned in the pleadings or the affidavits, an affidavit has to be filed by the applicant satisfying the Judge that the document is relevant to the case.<sup>1</sup> In the case of documents so mentioned, the relevancy is admitted while in the other case, the relevancy has to be proved.<sup>2</sup> The filing of the affidavit under sub-rule 2 is, however, not always necessary, when the Judge is satisfied as to the relevancy of the document; at any rate, the want of an affidavit cannot invalidate an order passed under this rule.<sup>3</sup> On the other hand, the filing of an affidavit does not entitle a party immediately to an order for inspection.<sup>4</sup> The Court should give the opposite party an opportunity of replying by an affidavit the application for inspection, and if the opposite party swears an affidavit that the documents are not in his possession or power, the Court will regard this as final and conclusive.<sup>5</sup> This is in consonance with the general rule that the Courts will not go behind the oath of the party against whom inspection is sought.<sup>6</sup>

An order under sub-rule 1 cannot be made unless notice has been given under the provisions of R. 15<sup>7</sup> and no party is entitled to an inspection of documents not referred to in the pleadings or affidavits without an order under sub-rule 2.<sup>8</sup> Nor is he entitled to a roving commission into papers belonging to the other side; the inspection must be restricted to such specific documents as the applicant names and which are relevant to his case.<sup>9</sup> A party who fails to comply with a notice under Rule 15 above incurs the penalty prescribed thereby. The fact that the party giving the notice has not proceeded to apply to the Court under sub-rule 1 of this rule for an order for inspection does not negative the liability for the penalty laid down by Rule 15.<sup>10</sup>

Where parties require the inspection or production of telegraphic messages, it is for them and not the Court to obtain the necessary sanction from Government.<sup>11</sup>

2. Discretion of Court. — Under sub-rule 1, the Court has a discretion limited to the terms of the proviso, in making an order for inspection and the onus rests on the party resisting an order, to show that it should not be made in the special circumstances of the case; but it would not be a proper exercise of discretion to refuse inspection on the general ground that it was sought before the written statement was filed; nor can the mere number of the documents afford any guide to the exercise of discretion.<sup>1</sup>

3. Convenient place for inspection. — In deciding a question as to the place where the inspection of documents is to be given, the Court should be guided by the balance of convenience.<sup>1</sup> See also Order 11 Rule 17 and Notes thereto.

4. Appeal. — No appeal lies under the Code from an order for inspection under this rule; nor does it lie under Clause 15 of the Letters Patent, as an order directing inspection to be given is not a "judgment."<sup>1</sup>

5. Bankers' Books Evidence Act. — The main object of this Act is to enable evidence to be procured and given<sup>1</sup> and to relieve bankers from attendance in Court with their books.<sup>2</sup> The party whose account is sought to be inspected may oppose the application on any ground on which inspection of ordinary documents could be resisted.<sup>3</sup>

Such application shall be made on an affidavit stating that in the belief of the deponent the party against whom the application is made has, or has at some time had, in his possession or power the document or documents specified in the application, and that they relate to the matters in question in the suit, or to some of them.

proper cases.<sup>3</sup> The power exists even in respect of state documents and official communications and notwithstanding a certificate from a Minister of State claiming protection, provided of course that such power be exercised so as not to destroy the protection of the privilege in any case in which it may be found to exist.<sup>3</sup> The word "document" includes also a sealed-up portion of a document.<sup>4</sup>

3. Specific documents — Sub-rule (3).—The rule enlarges the power to order discovery.<sup>1</sup> In order to justify an application under this sub-rule, the affidavit must name and specify the documents in such a manner as to identify them; an affidavit in a general form containing an argument that the document must be in the possession or power of the opposite party is not sufficient.<sup>2</sup> A prima facie case of relevancy and possession of the specific document is, however, sufficient to entitle the applicant to the order.<sup>3</sup> of any kind or inspection is sought objects to the same, or any part thereof, the Court may, if satisfied that the right to the discovery or inspection sought depends on the determination of any issue or question in dispute in the suit, or that for any other reason it is desirable that any issue or question in dispute in the suit should be determined before deciding upon the right to the discovery or inspection, order that such issue or question be determined first, and reserve the question as to the discovery or inspection.

1. Scope of the Rule. — The general principle of discovery is that discovery should not be granted beyond the exigency of the question in issue. It is also desirable to obviate the necessity of a troublesome inspection and discovery which would very much increase the costs of the suit. This rule empowers the Court to determine an issue for the exclusive purpose of deciding the right to discovery of documents which is to be used at the trial.<sup>1</sup> The Court has also a discretion to postpone discovery or inspection until some issue in the suit is determined.<sup>2</sup> The rule, however, does not apply where discovery is wanted for the determination of the issue in the suit.<sup>3</sup> An order under this rule is not a 'judgment' and no appeal lies therefrom.<sup>4</sup>

Non-applicability of the rule to production of documents. See Note 1.

1. Scope of the Rule.—There are only three grounds upon which a trial Court is justified, under this rule, in striking off the defence of the defendant or dismissing the suit of a plaintiff, namely—

- (1) the refusal to answer interrogatories under R. 11 ;
- (2) the refusal to make discovery of documents under R. 12 ; and
- (3) refusal to permit inspection of documents under R. 18.

In the absence, therefore, of an order under Rules 11, 12 or 18 and the disobedience thereof by the party against whom the order is made, the Court cannot act under this rule.<sup>1</sup> An order for production of documents under Rule 14 is not one of the orders mentioned in this rule, the word "production" which occurred after the word "discovery" in Section 136 of the old Code having been omitted in the present rule. There is, however, a difference of opinion as to whether a disobedience of an order for production under Rule 14 would empower the Court to take action under this rule. The High Court of Allahabad,<sup>2</sup> Madras<sup>3</sup> and Lahore<sup>4</sup> have held that the Court has no such power, while an opinion in the nature of obiter dictum has been expressed by the High Court of Lahore in the undermentioned case<sup>6</sup> that the Court has such power. The Court cannot strike out the defendant's defence for his failure to file a written statement as directed by the Court<sup>6</sup> or to appear for examination as a witness for the opposite side.<sup>7</sup> Nor can it be struck off for failure of the legal representative of a deceased defendant to comply with an order against the said defendant.<sup>8</sup>

The Court cannot, under this rule, act of its own motion, but can only do so on the application of the parties.<sup>9</sup> And even where the parties apply for an order under this rule the Court should not impose the penalty except in extreme cases and as a last resort.<sup>10</sup> It should be ordered only where the Court is satisfied that the party is avoiding a fair discovery<sup>11</sup> or is guilty of wilful default.<sup>12</sup> The word "wilfully" means that the act is done deliberately and intentionally and not by accident or inadvertence.<sup>13</sup> Thus, where the time allowed by law to answer interrogatories (ten days) has not expired and the defendant asks for further time, an order striking off the defence is improper.<sup>14</sup> Similarly, the failure to produce one out of many books ordered to be produced,<sup>15</sup> or the non-production of account books by a minor defendant,<sup>16</sup> or the failure to produce documents by a pardanashin lady,<sup>17</sup> or where the plaintiff is not in a position to make an affidavit of documents as ordered, the Court should not inflict the penalty under this rule.<sup>18</sup> An order for giving inspection "forthwith" must be complied with within a reasonable time after the order.<sup>19</sup>

Order 11 Rule 14 contemplates an order for the production of documents which are in the possession or power of the party ordered to produce them. Where the documents have been filed in Court, they cannot be said to be in the possession or power of the party. Hence, in respect of such documents, the Court has no power to take action under Rule 14 and this rule.<sup>20</sup>

On an application made for taking action under this rule, the Court should give an opportunity to the other side to put in his reply; an order dismissing the suit or striking off the defence without giving such opportunity is improper.<sup>21</sup>

The terms of the rule contemplate two orders; first an order under Rr. 11, 12 or 18, and secondly, upon the failure to comply therewith, a further order dismissing the suit or the striking off the defence.<sup>22</sup> But a conditional order for dismissal of the suit or for striking off the defence, on failure to comply with the orders for interrogatories, discovery or inspection cannot be said to be without jurisdiction.<sup>23</sup> Where the defendant fails to comply with an order for discovery, an order allowing him to defend the suit but shutting out all his evidence is not a proper order; the case should be dealt with under this rule and the defence struck out.<sup>24</sup> The infliction of the penalty imposed by this rule after the whole trial is closed is improper;<sup>25</sup> nor can a Court of appeal punish a party under this rule where the Court of first instance has not taken any action thereunder.<sup>26</sup> Where a suit has been referred to arbitration and the arbitrators call upon a party to produce certain documents, the proper remedy of the party seeking discovery is to apply to the Court to have the proceedings stayed or the suit dismissed or the defence struck out; the arbitrators are not bound, of their own initiative, to refuse to proceed until the order is complied with.<sup>27</sup>

The last paragraph of Section 136 of the old Code which made the defaulting party liable to a prosecution under Section 188 of the Penal Code<sup>28</sup> has now been omitted. A disobedience of an order for production or inspection can now be dealt with only in the manner prescribed by this rule and is not punishable under the Penal Code.<sup>29</sup>

A Registrar of the High Court has no power under the High Court Rules to dismiss a suit under this rule.<sup>30</sup>

2. Committal for contempt. — The Chartered High Courts have, under powers conferred on them by the Letters Patent, power to commit a party to a suit filed in such High Court who has failed to obey an order for discovery or inspection, for contempt of Court.<sup>1</sup> According to the High Court of Bombay an appeal lies from an order of committal for contempt.<sup>2</sup> According to the High Court of Allahabad no such appeal lies.<sup>3</sup>

3. Appeal. — Under the old Code, an order under this rule was appealable as a decree.<sup>1</sup> Under O. 43 R. 1 (f) of the present Code such an order is appealable only as an order.<sup>2</sup> An order under this rule includes an order dismissing a suit or striking off a defence as well as an order refusing to dismiss the suit or to strike off the defence; in either case it is open to appeal.<sup>3</sup> But where the Court acts without jurisdiction in passing an order under this rule, as where it dismisses a suit for failure to comply with an order to produce documents under Rule 14, the order cannot be said to be one passed under this rule; the dismissal in such a case will be a decree and will be appealable as such.<sup>4</sup> Again, where an order, though purporting to be passed under this rule, is really and in substance one under O. 6 R. 5, no appeal lies therefrom.<sup>5</sup> to this Order applied to minors and lunatics.<sup>1</sup> This rule has now made it clear that the Order does apply to them also. Hence, where the guardian of a minor defendant fails to comply with an order for discovery, the Court is competent to pass an order under Rule 21 ante against the minor defendant by virtue of this rule.<sup>2</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. — Under Section 58 of the Evidence Act, facts admitted need not be proved. The adoption of the procedure provided in this Order would result in saving the costs of such proof and in cheapening and shortening litigation.<sup>1</sup> Further, admissions are the strongest evidence possible and even a wrong construction of a document will be assumed to be correct in view of the admission.<sup>2</sup>

Admissions must be taken as a whole or not at all.<sup>3</sup> If made subject to a condition, they must be accepted with that condition.<sup>4</sup> But where one portion of a claim is admitted and the other portion denied, the plaintiff is entitled to ask for a judgment on the admitted portion and proceed to trial on the other; there is no rule that he should accept both the admission and the denial or must ignore the admission and proceed to trial.<sup>5</sup> The value of an admission is, however, limited by its relevancy under the Evidence Act, and a judgment based upon irrelevant material will not be upheld.<sup>6</sup> Where the lower Court in its judgment makes a statement that certain admissions were made, the Appellate Court will not lightly doubt the statement.<sup>7</sup> The question whether there is a cause of action does not depend upon the admission of the defendant, but when the plaint discloses a cause of action, the plaintiff is entitled to get a decree on the admissions of the defence.<sup>8</sup>

Section 97 of the Estates Partition Act (Bengal Act V of 1897) renders provisions of the Code as to compelling production of documents applicable to enquiries under the said Act.

2. Kinds of admissions. — The following tabular statement shows the various kinds of admissions after suit that may be made. As to admissions before suit, see Sections 17 to 31 of the Evidence Act.

3. Admission by minor. — A minor defendant cannot make a valid admission where a guardian ad litem has been appointed for him in the suit.<sup>1</sup> In the undermentioned case<sup>2</sup> in which a minor and his father were made co-defendants to a suit and an admission was made by the father on a matter on which the father was best qualified to speak and the minor who was represented by a pleader did not deny the admission, it was held that the minor was bound by the admission. R. 2. [S. 128.] Either party may call upon the other party to admit any document, saying all just exceptions; and in case of refusal or neglect to admit, after such notice, the costs of proving any such document shall be paid by the party so neglecting or refusing, whatever the result of the suit may be, unless the Court otherwise directs; and no costs of proving any document shall be allowed unless such notice is given, except where the omission to give the notice is, in the opinion of the Court, a saving of expense.

2. Form of notice. — See Rule 3 below.

3. Notice to admit facts. — See Rule 4 below.

4. Admissions between co-defendants. — Admissions between co-defendants to which the plaintiff is not a party cannot be used as evidence against the plaintiff, or be included in an order for taxation of the general costs of the action.<sup>1</sup>

5. Withdrawal of admission. — Leave may be given to withdraw or amend any admissions made by a party, on such terms as may appear just to the Court. Thus, an admission made under a mistake may be allowed to be withdrawn and the plaint amended.<sup>1</sup> But, except under special circumstances, an admission forming the foundation of a judgment should not be allowed to be withdrawn in appeal.<sup>2</sup> An admission on a mixed question of law and fact cannot be allowed to be withdrawn in second appeal.<sup>3</sup>

1. Scope of the Rule. | 2. "Any other party."

1. Scope of the Rule. — This rule provides for notice to admit facts, as the two previous rules provide for notice to admit documents. The penalty for refusing to admit facts pursuant to a notice given under this rule is that the party receiving the notice may be ordered to pay the costs occasioned by proving the facts which ought to have been admitted. A notice to admit facts may be given even before the defence is filed.<sup>1</sup>

2. "Any other party." — "It is obvious that only opposite parties can be meant."<sup>1</sup> For the meaning of "opposite party," see Note 11 to Order 11 Rule 1.

O. 12 R. 5

R. 5. [New.] A notice to admit facts shall be in Form No. 10 in Appendix C, and admissions of facts shall be in Form No. 11 in Appendix C, with such variations as circumstances may require.

O. 12 R. 6

R. 6. [New.] Any party may, at any stage of a suit, where admissions of fact have been made, either on the pleadings, or otherwise, apply to the Court for such judgment or order as upon such admissions he may be entitled to, without waiting for the determination of any other question between the parties : and the Court may upon such application make such order, or give such judgment, as the Court may think just.

Local Amendments

MADRAS

1. Re-number the existing Rule 6 as sub-rule 6 (1) and insert the following as sub-rules (2) and (3) :

"(2) The Court may also of its own motion make such order or give such judgment as it may consider just, having due regard to the admissions made by the parties,

(3) Whenever an order or judgment is pronounced under the provisions of this rule a decree may be drawn up in accordance with such order or judgment and bearing the same date as the day on which the order or judgment was pronounced."

1. (1888) 1888 W N 198 (198), Crawford v. Chorley.

Note 2

1. (1885) 16 Q B D 125 (128), Brown v. Watkins. (Per Mathew, J.)

Substitute the following for Rule 6 in Order 12 :

"6. Where admissions of fact have been made, either on the pleadings or otherwise, the Court may, at any stage of a suit, on the application of any party, or, of its own motion, without waiting for the determination of any other question between the parties, make such order or give such judgment, as it may think just."

RANGOON

Substitute "judgment, decree or order" for the words "judgment or order" and "and the Court may, either upon such application or upon its own motion, give such judgment or make such decree or order as the Court may think just" for "and the Court may . . . . . just."

Add the following as sub-rule (2) :

"(2) A decree or order passed under this rule may be executed at any time, notwithstanding that other questions between the parties still remain to be decided in the case."

1. Scope of the Rule. — A party can, under this rule, move for a judgment upon the admissions made by the opposite party and thus get rid of the portion of the action in which there is no dispute.<sup>1</sup> The object is to enable a party to obtain speedy judgment, at least to the extent of the relief, which, according to the admissions of the opposite party, he is entitled to.<sup>2</sup> But he is not bound to avail himself of this rule and is not precluded by not so applying, from relying on such admissions at the trial.<sup>3</sup> Nor, on the other hand, is the Court bound in every case to pass a judgment on the application of a party under this rule; the matter is entirely in the discretion of the Court. See Note 6 below.

In moving for a judgment under this rule, the party applying need not relinquish the rest of his claim.<sup>4</sup> But the admission on which a judgment can be claimed must be a clear and unequivocal one.<sup>5</sup> Further, an admission of a defendant will not necessarily entitle the plaintiff to a judgment, where the right asserted by the plaintiff has, in fact, no existence in law,<sup>6</sup> or where he has no cause of action at all.<sup>7</sup>

The rule refers only to admissions on points of fact and not on points of law.<sup>8</sup>

O. 12 R. 6
Notes 2-6

2. "At any stage." — A plaintiff may move for judgment upon admissions on the defence, although he has joined issue on the defence.<sup>1</sup> Similarly, a defendant may apply to have the suit dismissed after he has delivered a rejoinder.<sup>2</sup>

3. Admissions on pleadings. — As has been seen in Note 2 to Rule 1 ante, an admission of facts in a pleading may be made either expressly or constructively. Under O. 8 R. 5 every allegation of fact in the plaint, if not denied specifically or by necessary implication, or stated to be not admitted in the pleading of the defendant, shall be taken to be admitted. This is a constructive admission in a pleading. A defendant denying a plaint allegation evasively will be deemed not to have denied it at all, and will therefore be deemed to have admitted such allegation (see O. 8 R. 4). Thus, in Harris v. Gamble<sup>1</sup> the defendant in his defence merely "put the plaintiffs to proof of their several allegations in their statement of claim." Defendant failed to appear at the trial, and judgment was given for the plaintiffs without calling evidence, on the ground that such a defence was an admission of facts alleged in the statement of claim.

4. Court may make such order as it may think just. — The provisions of this rule are discretionary and not mandatory; it is not, therefore, incumbent on the Courts in all cases to pass a judgment upon admission.<sup>1</sup> If a case involves questions which cannot conveniently be disposed of on an application under this rule, or if the case is such that it is not safe to pass a judgment on admissions, the Court may, in the exercise of its discretion, refuse the motion.<sup>2</sup> Thus, in divorce cases a Court will not ordinarily pass a decree for dissolution of marriage on the mere admissions of the parties in view of possible collusion between the parties.<sup>3</sup> Where, however, the defendant admits the claim, but the plaintiff is absent at the trial, the suit should not be dismissed; a decree should be passed on the strength of the defendant's admission.<sup>4</sup> Where an application is made under this rule on the basis of a constructive admission, the Court may refuse to pass a decree if, in the circumstances of the case, it is of opinion that the defendant must not be held to have admitted facts not specifically denied in the written statement.<sup>5</sup>

5. Orders that may be passed under this Rule. — As a general rule, a judgment on admissions can be passed in all cases in which under the Code a preliminary decree can be passed. See Order 20 Rules 13, 15, 16 and 18.

6. Admissions made otherwise than on pleadings. — The use of the words "or otherwise" without the words "in writing" which are used in Rule 1 shows that a judgment may be given even upon verbal admission,<sup>1</sup> though caution is required in acting upon such admissions.<sup>2</sup> The rule is wide enough to afford relief not only in

But according to the Sind Judicial Commissioner's Court,<sup>2</sup> it is not necessary to have a decree drawn up on a judgment passed under this rule, it being open to the plaintiff to enforce payment of the amount awarded as an order in execution proceedings by virtue of Section 36.
